

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 01010171 5

THE LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY

EDITED BY

T. E. PAGE, LITT.D.

E. CAPPS, PH.D., LL.D. W. H. D. ROUSE, LITT.D

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

1913

J

1

S. JEROME IN THE DESERT

Left hand panel, Pope Damasus and Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea.

Right hand panel, Paula and Eustochium.

The small kneeling figures represent the patron who commissioned the picture and his son.

[Reproduced from the picture by Botticini, by permission of the trustees of the National Gallery.]

Jerome, Saint. Eusebius

~~1863e~~
~~1863e~~

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY
F. A. WRIGHT, M.A.
PROFESSOR OF CLASSICS IN LONDON UNIVERSITY

*4-45914.
3-5-46*

LONDON: WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
NEW YORK: G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
MCMXXXIII

III

BR
1720
J5A4
1933

Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS

ST. JEROME IN THE DESERT Frontispiece

LETTER	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	vii
I. THE WOMAN STRUCK BY SEVEN
SWORDS	2
VII. FAMILY AFFAIRS	18
XIV. THE ASCETIC LIFE	28
*XXII. THE VIRGIN'S PROFESSION	52
*XXXVIII. A GOOD WOMAN	158
XL. ONASUS THE WINDBAG	166
*XLIII. THE COUNTRY LIFE	170
XLIV. A LETTER OF THANKS	176
XLV. INNOCENT FRIENDSHIPS	178
ok - LII. A CLERGYMAN'S DUTIES	188
LIV. WIDOWS	228
- LX. A LETTER OF CONSOLATION	264
- LXXVII. THE EULOGY OF FABIOLA	308
*CVII. A GIRL'S EDUCATION	338
- CXVII. DANGEROUS FRIENDSHIPS	370
- CXXV. GOOD AND BAD MONKS	396
CXXVII. MARCELLA AND THE SACK OF ROME	438
*CXXVIII. FEMININE TRAINING	466
APPENDICES	483
INDEX OF PROPER NAMES	503

INTRODUCTION

(a) LIFE OF JEROME

JEROME—or, to give him his significant Greek name, Eusebius Hieronymus—was born A.D. 345 at Stridon in Dalmatia, a small town near Aquileia, which was partly destroyed by the Goths during their invasion of 377. His father, Eusebius, and his mother were Christians of moderate wealth and were alive in 373 when Jerome first went to the East, but probably died when Stridon was taken by the barbarians. Jerome himself received a good education at his local school, and then, like most young provincials of talent, he was attracted to Rome, where he studied rhetoric under the great grammarian Aelius Donatus, returning with his friend Bonosus to Aquileia in 370. In that town he established his first society of ascetics, which lasted for three years until some event—referred to by him variously as ‘a sudden storm’ and ‘a monstrous rending asunder’—broke up the fellowship, and Jerome with a few of his closer associates went eastwards to Antioch. But even this small company did not remain long together, and a meeting with the old hermit Malchus made Jerome resolve to seek complete solitude. The adjacent desert of Chalcis was already full of hermits living under the rule of Theodosius, and Jerome soon became one of their number, sleeping in a bare cell, clothed in sackcloth, submitting himself to rigorous penances, and for five years giving all his days to devotional exercise and to the study of the Scriptures.

INTRODUCTION

This first period of Jerome's life ended in 379 when he returned to Antioch and was ordained presbyter by Bishop Paulinus. With Paulinus he attended the Second General Council at Constantinople, where he met Gregory Nazianzen and Gregory of Nyssa, and in his bishop's company he came to Rome for the Church Council held there in 382, and for the next three years lived in the great city. The Pope at that time was Damasus, the clerical dilettante who made the catacombs a show place for the world, and Jerome soon became his intimate friend and trusted adviser, constantly consulted on all points of biblical knowledge and finally commissioned to write a revised Latin version of the Psalms and the New Testament. This was a task of pure scholarship, but Jerome also found amid the luxury and splendour of Rome a few ardent souls, most of them women, who were ready to embrace and follow his ascetic rule. One of his disciples was Paula, the heiress of the great Aemilian family, who brought over her two daughters Blesilla and Eustochium. Another was the wealthy Marcella, at whose palace on the Aventine master and pupils used to come together for the study of Hebrew, to join in earnest prayer, and to sing psalms. During these months Jerome was perhaps as happy as he ever thought it right to be, but the death of his protector Damasus unchained against him all the enmities that his rigorous virtues had challenged and his bitter sarcasms provoked. The new Pope Siricius regarded him as a dangerous rival; the mob were enraged by viii

INTRODUCTION

the sudden death of Blesilla, which was believed to have been caused by her prolonged fastings and penances; the cry was raised 'The monks to the Tiber': and Jerome left Rome and Europe for ever.

Then began the third period in Jerome's life. He resolved that he would no longer sing the Lord's song in a strange land, and taking Paula and Eustochium with him he went once more to the East, the true home of ascetic belief, and after some little delay settled down in Judaea at Bethlehem, where he remained for the last thirty-four years of his existence. At Bethlehem he built a monastery of which he was head, a convent over which first Paula and then Eustochium presided, a church where both communities assembled for worship, and a hospice to lodge the pilgrims who came from all parts of the world to that holy ground. The expenses of these various institutions were borne by Paula until even her great wealth was exhausted, and then by Jerome himself, who sold the remains of his family property for their support. Their administration must have occupied a portion of his time, but the greater part of his energy was given at Bethlehem, as everywhere, to writing and study. Not that his life was peaceful, or that he passed his days in quietude. His own character always ensured a certain amount of friction; he quarrelled bitterly with the Bishop of Jerusalem; his health was never of the best; and the calm of his monastery was continually being broken by rumours of wars and by the actual shock of invasion.

The sack of Rome in 410, for example, spread terror even in Palestine, and it is from Jerome perhaps that we get the clearest idea of the consternation caused throughout the world by the fall of the imperial city. In the preface to his Ezekiel he writes: ' I was so stupefied and dismayed that day and night I could think of nothing but the welfare of the Roman community. It seemed to me that I was sharing the captivity of the saints and I could not open my lips until I received some more definite news. All the while, full of anxiety, I wavered between hope and despair, torturing myself with the misfortunes of others. But when I heard that the bright light of all the world was quenched, or rather that the Roman Empire had lost its head and that the whole universe had perished in one city: then indeed, " I became dumb and humbled myself and kept silence from good words." ' But however troubled at heart Jerome might be, neither public calamity nor private sorrow could stop his labours. Paula passed away from him in Palestine; Marcella only survived the barbarities of the sack of Rome for a short period; even Eustochium, although she was of a younger generation, succumbed to the rigours of the ascetic life. But the old man, nearly blind and over seventy, was still working at his commentary on Jeremiah when his last illness came. He died September 20th, 420, and his body was buried beside Paula near the grotto of the Nativity at Bethlehem, in later days to be transferred and to be the cause of many a miracle at the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome.

INTRODUCTION

(b) JEROME'S WORKS

The literary works of Jerome, apart from the Letters, are very voluminous, for he lived a long life, was a quick writer, and possessed enormous powers of industry. The following list is given by Canon Fremantle.

INTRODUCTION

I. Bible Translations.

(a) From the Hebrew.—The Vulgate of the Old Testament, written at Bethlehem, begun 391 and finished 404.

(b) From the Septuagint.—The Psalms as used at Rome, written in Rome 383, and the Psalms as used in Gaul, written at Bethlehem 388, this Gallican Psalter being collated with the Hebrew. The Book of Job, written at Bethlehem 386–392.

(c) From the Chaldee.—The Books of Tobit and Judith. Bethlehem, 398.

(d) From the Greek.—The Vulgate version of the New Testament, made at Rome, 382–385.

II. Commentaries.

(a) Original.—Ecclesiastes, 385. Isaiah, 410. Jeremiah i–xxxii, 419. Ezekiel, 410–414. Daniel, 407. Minor Prophets, 391–406. St. Matthew, 398. Galatians, Ephesians, Titus, Philemon, 388. All these written at Bethlehem.

(b) Translated from the Greek of Origen.—Jeremiah and Ezekiel, Bethlehem, 381. St. Luke, Bethlehem, 389. Canticles, Rome and Bethlehem, 385–387.

A commentary on Job and a translation of Origen's Isaiah are also often attributed to Jerome.

III. Books on Scriptural Subjects.

(a) A glossary of proper names in the Old Testament, 388.

INTRODUCTION

(b) Questions on Genesis, 388.

(c) A translation of Eusebius 'On the sites and names of Hebrew places,' 388.

(d) A translation of Didymus 'On the Holy Spirit,' 385-387.

All these written at Bethlehem.

IV. Books on Church History and Controversy.

(a) Book of Illustrious Men, Bethlehem, 392.

(b) Dialogue with a Luciferian, Antioch, 379.

(c) Lives of the Hermits: Paulus. Desert of Chalcis, 374. Hilarion and Malchus, Bethlehem, 390.

(d) Translation of the Rule of Pachomius, Bethlehem, 404.

(e) Against Helvidius, Rome, 384. Against Jovinian, Bethlehem, 393. Against Vigilantius, Bethlehem, 406. Against John of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, 398. Against Rufinus, Bethlehem, 402-404.

V. General History.

Translation, with additions, of the Chronicle of Eusebius, Constantinople, 382.

Few writers in any age or in any country can surpass this catalogue. Among Latin authors Cicero, Livy, and Augustine come nearest to Jerome, but even they fall short of his immense productiveness. The Vulgate alone would be a full life's work, and yet it forms only a small part of Jerome's labours. History, biography, theological controversy, scriptural exegesis, all flowed with equal readiness from his pen, and like Cicero, who is his closest exemplar in Latin literature, he writes on all subjects with equal skill. The two men in character are altogether different: Cicero wished to please everybody, Jerome wished to please no one; Cicero was wrapped up in the things of this world, Jerome fixed his gaze steadfastly on the world to come; Cicero reserved his deepest feelings of unselfishness for his son and daughter, Jerome would seem to discourage all procreation and child-bearing. But they are alike in one respect: they are both, first and foremost, men of letters, and when Jerome has a subject that gives scope for skill, subjects such as he finds in his controversy with Jovinian, in the lives of the three hermits Paul, Hilarion and Malchus, and in many of his Letters, he shows himself a wonderful master of words.

INTRODUCTION

(c) THE LETTERS

There are four considerable collections of letters in Latin literature, those of Cicero, Seneca, Pliny and Jerome. Of these the letters of Cicero and of Jerome are the largest in bulk and the most important in substance, and even if Cicero has some advantage in wit and grace of style, there can be no doubt that for a Christian reader the subjects with which Jerome deals make him infinitely the more valuable. We have now extant one hundred and fifty-four epistles from his pen, written between the years 370 and 419, and varying in length from a few lines to several thousand words, which in Hilberg's edition fill nearly sixteen hundred pages. The difficulty of selection has been mainly a difficulty of what letters to omit, and a few words may be said here of those that appear in this volume. Letter I is probably the earliest of Jerome's compositions and is interesting by reason both of its style and its subject, which shows that Jerome, like Augustine, was a sturdy believer in miracles. Letter VII is one of the very few in which Jerome mentions his own family: it is short and pithy, and may be compared with XL, XLIII, XLIV, XLV, which exhibit the various sides of his personal character. The first of these four shows him as a violent satirist, the second as a lover of nature, the third is a graceful letter of thanks, and the fourth a vigorous defence of his friendships with women, this last being in a way a pendant to Letter CXVII. Another group of three letters, XIV, LII, LX, is concerned with Heliodorus, Bishop of Altinum, the first reproaching him for his abandonment of the ascetic life, the second laying down for his nephew Nepotian the duties of a clergyman, the third, one of the finest letters, consoling him for Nepotian's death. Letter CXXV, treating of monasticism, draws a vivid picture of the good and bad monk, and the remaining seven letters deal with the other of Jerome's two main interests, the position of woman in the Christian Church as virgin, wife and widow. Three of them, XXXVIII, LXXVII, CXXVII, are elaborate portraits of married women, two others, CVII, CXXVIII, are concerned with the education of girls. Letter LIV instructs a widow in the best means of maintaining her widowhood, which Jerome holds to be the second of the three degrees of chastity; and Letter XXII, the most famous in the collection, is a fervent panegyric of the life of virginity.

INTRODUCTION

(d) TEXT AND BIBLIOGRAPHY

The text used for this translation is that of the masterly edition of Isidor Hilberg (Vienna, 3 vols.,

INTRODUCTION

1910-1918). The few divergencies from his text are noted where they occur, and for the many variant readings of the MSS. the reader is referred to his very copious apparatus criticus.

The chief manuscripts are given by Hilberg thus :

Γ	Lugdunensis	6th century
ε	Parisinus	6th ,,
G	Neapolitanus	6th-7th century
K	Spinaliensis	8th ,,
H	Monacensis	8th-9th ,,
Σ	Turicensis Augiensis	9th century
W	Parisinus	9th ,,
L	Coloniensis	9th ,,
A	Berolinensis	9th ,,
D	Vaticanus	9th-10th century
C	Vaticanus	10th ,,
B	Berolinensis	12th ,,

The Editio Princeps of the Letters appeared in Rome, 1470. The next edition of independent value is that of Erasmus (Basle, 1516-1520), followed by that of Marianus Victorius (Rome, 1560). Then comes the Benedictine edition of Martianay and Pouget (Paris, 1693), which like all its predecessors was superseded by that of Dominic Vallarsi (Verona, 1734-1742). This last was reprinted by Migne and held the field until in its turn it was superseded by the edition of Isidor Hilberg mentioned above.

Of modern works on Jerome it will be sufficient to mention three: 'Hieronymus, Sein Leben und Werke' (O. Zöckler, Gotha, 1865), 'Saint Jerome' (A. Thierry, Paris, 1867), and 'The Principal Works of St. Jerome' (Fremantle, Oxford, 1893), this last a book to which the present translation is under especial obligations. For a general account of the early Latin Fathers, including Jerome, two recent books may be consulted: 'Latin Christianity' (P. de Labriolle, London, 1925), and 'Fathers of the Church' (F. A. Wright, London, 1928).

INTRODUCTION

The Editors wish to thank the Rev. Father Sharpe, of More Hall, Stroud, for help in finding some abstruse references.

SELECT LETTERS OF
ST. JEROME

SANCTI EUSEBII HIERONYMI EPISTULAE

I

AD INNOCENTIUM PRESBYTERUM DE SEPTIES PERCUSSA

1. SAEPE a me, Innocenti carissime, postulasti, ut de eius miraculo rei, quae in nostram aetatem inciderat, non tacerem. Cumque ego id verecunde et vere, ut nunc experior, negarem meque adsequi posse diffiderem, sive quia omnis humanus sermo inferior esset laude caelesti, sive quia otium quasi quaedam ingenii robigo parvulam licet facultatem pristini siccasset eloquii, tu e contrario adserebas in Dei rebus non possibilitatem inspicere debere, sed animum, neque eum posse verba deficere, qui credidisset in verbo.

2. Quid igitur faciam? Quod implere non possum, negare non audeo. Super onerariam navem rudis vector inponor, et homo, qui necdum scalmum in lacu rexi, Euxini Maris credor fragori. Nunc mihi evanescentibus terris 'caelum undique et undique

¹ A member of Jerome's first band of ascetics in Aquileia; he accompanied Jerome to Antioch where he died in 374.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LETTER I

TO INNOCENTIUS

The woman struck by seven swords

Written A.D. 370

You have often in the past asked me, my dearest Innocent,¹ to relate that miraculous happening which occurred in my lifetime. To that request I gave a modest, and as I now find by trial, a justified refusal. I distrusted my power of achievement, both because all the language of man is inadequate to the praise of heaven, and also because lack of exercise, like rust upon the mind, has dried up any slight power of eloquence that in the past I might have possessed. You on the other hand declared that in the things of God one ought to consider not the possibility, but the will, and that he who believed in the Word could not find words fail him.

What then shall I do? I cannot fulfil this task, but I do not dare to refuse it. A novice in ship-craft, I am put on board a vessel heavily laden; a poor fellow who has never steered a skiff upon a lake, I am entrusted to the roar of the Euxine Sea. The land fades from sight, around me now 'on every side is pontus,' nunc unda tenebris horrescens et caeca nocte nimborum spumei fluctus canescunt. Hortaris, ut tumida malo vela suspendam, rudentes explicem, clavum regam. Pareo iam iubenti et, quia caritas omnia potest, spiritu sancto cursum prosequente confidam habiturus in utraque parte solacium: si me ad optatos portus aestus adpulerit, gubernator putabor; si inter asperos orationis anfractus inpolitus sermo substiterit, facultatem forsitan quaeras, voluntatem certe flagitare non poteris.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Igitur Vercellae Ligurum civitas haud procul a radicibus Alpium sita, olim potens, nunc raro habitatore semiruta. Hanc cum ex more consularis inviseret, oblatam sibi quandam mulierculam una cum adultero—nam id crimen maritus inpegerat—poenali carceris horrore circumdedit. Neque multo post, cum lividas carnes ungula cruenta pulsaret et sulcatis lateribus dolor quaereret veritatem, infeliciissimus iuvenis volens compendio mortis longos vitare cruciatus, dum in suum mentitur sanguinem, accusavit alienum solusque omnium miser meritus visus est percuti, quia non reliquit innoxiae, unde posset negare. At vero mulier sexo fortior suo, cum eculeus corpus extenderet et sordidas paedore carceris manus sky, on every side the sea';¹ darkness roughens the waves and in the black night of the storm-clouds the billows show white with foam. You bid me hoist the swelling sails to the mast top, to let the sheets run loose and take the tiller in my hand. To-day I obey your command: love is all-powerful, and with the Holy Spirit guiding my course, I may feel confident that in either case I shall find comfort. If the surging waves drive me to the desired haven, I shall be considered a skilful steersman: if my unvarnished tale strikes the rocks among the rough windings of my story, you may perhaps find me lacking in ability but you certainly will not be able to challenge my good-will.

LETTER I

Vercellae then is a Ligurian city near the foothills of the Alps, once a place of importance, but now lying half in ruins with only a few inhabitants. When the governor paid it his usual visit, a woman and her lover were brought before him accused by the husband of adultery, and were by him consigned to the dread torture chamber of the public prison. There by agony the truth was sought; and the unhappy youth soon gave way. As the blood-stained hook furrowed his sides and tore his blackened flesh, he determined to escape from his long-drawn torments by the short road of death, and lying against his own body accused another's as well. So for once a miserable wretch seemed to deserve his fate, for he left an innocent person no chance of denying the charge brought against her. But the woman for her part showed a courage superior to her sex. Her body was stretched upon the rack, and her hands black with the prison filth were bound with cords post tergum vincula cohiberent, oculis, quos tantum tortor alligare non poterat, suspexit ad caelum et volutis per ora lacrimis: 'Tu,' inquit, 'testis, domine Iesu, cui occultum nihil est, qui es scrutator renis et cordis, non ideo me negare velle, ne peream.' At tu, miserrime homo, si interire festinas, cur duos interimis innocentes? Equidem et ipsa cupio mori, cupio invisum hoc corpus exuere, sed non quasi adultera. Praesto iugulum, micantem intrepida excipio mucronem, innocentiam tantum mecum feram. Non moritur, quisquis victurus occiditur.'

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, III. 193.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Igitur consularis pastis cruore luminibus, ut fera, quae gustatum semel sanguinem semper sitit, duplicare tormenta iubet et saevum dentibus frendens similem carnifici minitatus est poenam, nisi confiteretur sexus infirmior, quod non potuerat robur virile reticere.

5. 'Succurre, domine Iesu: ad unum hominem tuum quam plura sunt inventa supplicia!' Crines ligantur ad stipitem et toto corpore ad eculeum fortius alligato vicinus pedibus ignis adponitur, utrumque latus carnifex fodit nec papillis dantur indutiae: inmotam mulierem manentem et a dolore corporis spiritu separato, dum conscientiae bono fruitur, vetuit circa se saevire tormenta. Iudex crudelis quasi superatus adtollitur, illa dominum deprecatur; behind her; but the torturer could not chain her eyes, and with them she looked up to heaven, and cried as the tears rolled down her cheeks: 'Thou, Lord Jesus, from whom nothing is hidden, who dost search out the reins and the heart, Thou art my witness that it is not to save myself from death that I wish to deny this, but that it is to save myself from sin that I refuse to tell a lie. As for you, unhappy man, if you are in haste to perish, why take two innocent lives? I for my part long to strip off this hateful body, I long to meet death, but not as a woman convicted of adultery. I offer my throat to the gleaming sword, I welcome it without a shudder; only I must take my innocence with me. He does not perish, who dies to live again.'

LETTER I

The governor had been feasting his eyes on the gory spectacle, like some wild animal that has once tasted blood and is for evermore athirst. At this he ordered her tortures to be redoubled, and gnashing his teeth in fury, threatened the executioner with a like fate, unless he made the weaker sex confess a crime which manly strength had not been able to conceal.

'O Lord Jesus, bring help: how many punishments have been discovered for this one creature of thine!' Her hair is fastened to the stake, her whole body bound more tightly to the rack, and fire is put to her feet. The executioner stabs her on both sides, and even her breasts are not spared. Still the woman remains firm: her spirit feels not bodily pain, and enjoying still a good conscience she forbids the torture to vent its rage upon her. The cruel judge starts from his seat as though he were defeated; she still prays to the Lord. Her limbs are torn from their joints;

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

solvuntur membra compagibus, illa oculos ad caelum tendit; de communi scelere alius confitetur, illa pro confitente negat et periclitans ipsa alium vindicat periclitantem.

6. Una interim vox: 'Caede, ure, lacera; non feci. Si dictis tollitur fides, veniet dies, quae hoc crimen diligenter excutiat; habebo iudicem meum.' Iam lassus tortor suspirabat in gemitum nec erat novo vulneri locus, iam victa saevitia corpus, quod laniarat, horrebat: extemplo ira excitus consularis: 'Quid miramini,' inquit, 'circumstantes, si torqueri mavult mulier, quam perire? Adulterium certe sine duobus committi non potest et esse credibilius reor noxiam ream negare de scelere, quam innocentem iuvenem confiteri.'

7. Pari igitur prolata in utrumque sententia damnatos carnifex trahit. Totus ad spectaculum populus effunditur, et prorsus quasi migrare civitas putaretur, stipatis prouens portis turba densatur. Et quidem miserrimi iuvenis ad primum statim ictum amputatur gladio caput truncumque in suo sanguine volutatur cadaver. Postquam vero ad feminam ventum est et flexis in terram poplitibus super trementem cervicem micans elevatus est gladius et exercitatum carnifex dexteram totis viribus concitavit, ad primum corporis tactum stetit mucro letalis et leviter perstringens cutem rasurae modicae sanguinem aspersit. Inbellem manum percussor she only lifts her eyes to heaven. Another confesses their common guilt; she on his behalf denies what he confessed, and in danger herself tries to save another from danger.

LETTER I

Her cry was still the same : ' Beat me, burn me, tear me in pieces. I did not do it. If you do not believe my words, the day will soon come that will sift this charge aright. I have One who will judge me.' By this time the torturer was sighing and groaning. There was no room for fresh wounds. The man himself shuddered to see the body he had so mangled, and even his ferocity gave way. But the governor was only roused to fresh rage, and cried out forthwith : ' Why does it surprise you, bystanders, that a woman prefers torture to death? Obviously it takes two persons to commit adultery, and I consider that it is far more likely that a guilty woman should deny a crime than that an innocent youth should confess one.'

The same sentence, therefore, was passed upon both, and the executioner dragged away his victims. The whole populace rushed out to see the sight, pouring in dense masses from the crowded gates, so that you might have thought the entire city was migrating. At the very first stroke of the sword the miserable youth's head was cut off, and his headless corpse rolled over in its own blood. Then came the woman's turn. With bent knees she sank to the ground, and over her quivering neck the gleaming sword was raised. The executioner brought down his well-trained arm with all his might, but directly it touched her body the deadly sword was stayed, and lightly grazing the skin made a scratch just sufficient to draw blood. At his hand's defeat the striker expavit, et victam dexteram gladio marcescente miratus in secundos impetus torquet. Languidus rursus in feminam mucro delabitur et, quasi ferrum ream timeret attingere, circa cervicem torpet innoxium. Itaque furens et anhelus licitor paludamento in cervicem retorto, dum totas expedit vires, fibulam, quae chlamydis mordebat oras, in humum excussit ignarusque rei ensem librat in vulnus et : ' En tibi,' ait mulier, ' ex umero aurum ruit. Collige multo quaesitum labore, ne pereat.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. Rogo, quae est ista securitas? Impendentem non timet mortem, laetatur percussa, carnifex pallet; oculi gladium non videntes tantum fibulam vident et, ne parum esset, quod non formidabat interitum, praestabat beneficium saevienti. Iam igitur et tertius ictus: sacramentum frustraverat trinitatis. Iam speculator exterritus et non credens ferro mucronem aptabat in iugulum, ut, qui secare non poterat, saltim premente manu corpori conderetur: O omnibus inaudita res saeculis!—ad capulum gladius reflectitur, et velut dominum suum victus aspiciens confessus est se ferire non posse.

9. Huc, huc mihi trium exempla puerorum, qui inter frigidus flammaram globos hymnos edidere pro fletibus, circa quorum sarabara sanctamque caesariem trembled and looked in amazement at his conquered arm: then swinging high the craven blade he prepared to give a second stroke. Again the sword fell feebly on the woman and lay still and harmless on her neck, as though the steel feared to touch the accused. Thereupon the headsman, panting now with rage, flung his cloak back over his shoulders, so that he might exert all his strength without hindrance. The action loosened the brooch that fastened his garment, and it fell to the ground, unnoticed by the man, who was poising his sword for another blow. 'Look,' cried the woman, 'your gold brooch has fallen from your shoulder. Pick it up, or you will lose something for which you have worked hard.'

LETTER I

What, I ask, is the secret of such confidence? She has no fear of the death that threatens her, she rejoices in her wounds, it is the executioner who turns pale. Her eyes do not see the sword, they only see the brooch. It is not enough for her to feel no dread of death, she does an act of kindness to her savage tormentor. And now the third blow fell, only to be rendered vain by the sacred power of the Trinity. By this time the soldier was completely frightened, and no longer trusting the blade put the sword point to her throat, with the idea that though it could not cut, the pressure of his hand might force it into her body. But the sword—O marvel unheard of through all the ages!—bent back to the hilt, and in its defeat seemed to look at its master, as if confessing that it could not strike.

Now, now let me recall the example of the three children, who amid the cool circles of the fire sang hymns instead of shedding tears, while the flames played harmlessly about their turbans and their holy innoxium lusit incendium. Huc beati Danihelis revocetur historia, iuxta quem adulantibus caudis praedam suam leonum ora timuerunt. Nunc Susanna nobilis fide mentes omnium subeat, quae iniquo damnata iudicio sancto spiritu puerum replente servata est. Ecce non dispar in utraque misericordia domini: illa liberata per iudicem, ne iret ad gladium, haec a iudice damnata absoluta per gladium est.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Tandem ergo ad feminam vindicandam populus armatur. Omnis aetas, omnis sexus carnificem fugat et coetu in circulum coeunte non credit paene unusquisque, quod vidit. Turbatur tali nuntio urbs propinqua et tota lietorum caterva glomeratur. E quibus medius, ad quem damnatorum cura pertinebat, erumpens et ‘canitiem immundam perfuso pulvere turpans’: ‘Meum,’ inquit, ‘O cives, petitis caput, me illi vicarium datis! Si misericordes, si clementes estis, si vultis servare damnatam, innocens certe perire non debeo.’ Quo fletu vulgi concussus est animus maestusque se per omnes torpor insinuat et mirum in modum voluntate mutata, cum pietatis fuisset, quod ante defenderant, pietatis visum est genus, ut paterentur occidi.

11. Novus igitur ensis, novus percussor adponitur.

LETTER I

locks. Let me repeat again the story of the blessed Daniel, before whom the lions crouched with fawning tails, and trembled at the man who was to be their prey. Let all men remember once more the grandeur of Susanna's faith, who, condemned by an unjust judgment, was saved by a lad inspired by the Holy Spirit. Not unlike was the mercy of the Lord in both cases: Susanna was set free by the judge and saved from the sword: this woman was condemned by the judge but by the sword acquitted.

So at length the populace took up arms to defend the woman. People of every age and every sex join in driving off the headsman. The whole crowd form into a ring about her and hardly one among them can believe his own eyes. The news of their action throws the neighbouring city into confusion, and the governor's attendants muster in force. From their midst the officer charged with the care of condemned criminals dashed forth, and as he 'Poured defiling dust upon grey hair befouled'¹ cried: 'It is my life that you are taking, fellow-countrymen. You are making me her substitute. Even if you do feel mercy and compassion, even if you are set on rescuing a woman condemned to death, surely it is not right for an innocent man like myself to die.' This lamentable appeal shook the people's resolution, and a spirit of gloomy torpor soon became universal. Men's feelings were strangely changed. It had seemed their duty to defend the woman, it now seemed their duty in a way to allow her to be executed.

Accordingly a new sword and a new executioner

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, XII. 611.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Stat victima Christo tantum favente munita. Semel percussa concutitur, iterum repetita quassatur, tertio vulnerata prosternitur et—O divinae potentiae sublimanda maiestas!—quae prius fuerat quarto percussa nec laesa, ideo paululum visa est mori, ne pro ea periret innoxius.

12. Clerici, quibus id officii erat, cruentum linteo cadaver obvolvunt et fossam humum lapidibus construunt ex more tumulum parant. Festinato sol cursu occasum petit, et misericordiam domini celatura nox advenit. Subito feminae palpitatur pectus et oculis quaerentibus lucem corpus animatur ad vitam: iam spirat, iam videt, iam sublevatur et loquitur, iam in illam potest vocem erumpere: ' Dominus, auxiliator meus, non timebo, quid faciat mihi homo.'

13. Anus interim quaedam, quae ecclesiae sustentabatur opibus, debitum caelo spiritum reddidit, et quasi de industria ordine currente rerum vicarium tumulo corpus operitur. Dubia adhuc luce in lictore zabulus occurrit, quaerit cadaver occisae, sepulchrum sibi monstrari petit; vivere putat, quam mori potuisse miratur. Recens a clericis caespes ostenditur et dudum superiecta humus cum his vocibus ingeritur flagitanti: ' Erue scilicet ossa iam condita, infer novum sepulchro bellum, et si hoc parum est, appeared. The victim takes her place, protected only by the favour of Christ. The first blow makes her shake, at the second she totters, the third brings her wounded to the ground. O majesty of God's power, how wondrous, how sublime! Previously she had received four strokes without injury: now for a little while she seemed to die, merely that an innocent man might not suffer in her stead.

LETTER I

Those of the clergy, whose duty it was to perform this office, wrapped the blood-stained corpse in a sheet, and then prepared to dig a grave and duly cover it over with stones. The sun sets in haste, and night comes on to conceal God's mercy in its darkness. Suddenly the woman's breast heaves, her eyes seek the light, her body is quickened to life again. She sighs, she looks round, she rises, she speaks. At last she is able to cry aloud: 'The Lord is on my side. I will not fear. What can man do unto me?'¹

In the meantime an aged female, who had been maintained at the expense of the Church, rendered back her soul to heaven. So opportunely her corpse took the woman's place, and was buried in the tomb. Before dawn the devil came on the scene in the person of the headsman, who began to look about for the body of the woman he had slain, and asked to be shown the place where she was buried. He thought that she was still alive, for he wondered that she was able to die. At his demand the clergy showed him the fresh turf and the ground which now for some time had been heaped up, crying out: 'Dig up the bones forsooth which now have been laid to rest, make new war upon her tomb, and if that does not satisfy you, scatter her limbs for vultures and wild avibus ferisque lanianda membra discerpe; septies percussa debet aliquid morte plus perpeti.’

¹ Psalm cxviii. 6.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

14. Tali invidia carnifice confuso clam domi mulier focilatur et, ne forte creber ad ecclesiam medici commeatus suspicionis panderet viam, eum quibusdam virginibus ad secretiorem villulam secto crine transmittitur. Ibi paulatim virili habitu veste mutata in cicatricem vulnus obducitur. Et—‘O vere ius summum summa malitia!’—post tanta miracula adhuc saeviunt leges.

15. En quo me gestorum ordo protraxit! Iam enim ad Evagrii nostri nomen advenimus. Cuius ego pro Christo laborem si arbitrer a me dici posse, non sapiam, si penitus tacere velim, voce in gaudium erumpente non possim. Quis enim valeat digno canere praeconio Auxentium Mediolanii incubantem huius excubiis sepultum paene ante quam mortuum, Romanum episcopum iam paene factionis laqueis inretitum et vicisse adversarios et non nocuisse superatis?

‘Verum haec ipse equidem spatiis exclusus iniquis Praetereo atque aliis post me memoranda relinquo.’

¹ Terence, Heaut. Tim. 796.

² Evagrius, a presbyter of Antioch, later (c. 388) consecrated bishop of that see; often referred to by Jerome (Letters III, IV, V, and XV); also by Basil, Letter CXXXVIII.

LETTER I

beasts to mangle; a woman who has received seven strokes of the sword ought to suffer something more than death.'

The odium of such an action sent the executioner away in confusion, and the woman was secretly cared for indoors. Finally, lest the doctor's frequent visits to the church should give rise to suspicion, she had her hair cut short, and in company with some virgins was sent to a lonely house in the country. There for a little time she put on men's clothes until the scars formed over her wound. And yet to-day—'How true it is that complete legality is complete injustice!'¹—after all these wondrous happenings the laws are still raging against her.

See now to what point the order of events has brought me. At last we have reached the name of our friend Evagrius.² If I were to think that I could describe all his labours on Christ's behalf, I should indeed be foolish. Were I minded to pass them over completely, I could not do so, for my voice of itself would burst into cries of joy. Who could write a fitting panegyric of the man whose vigilance put Auxentius,³ that pest of Milan, into the grave before the time of his death, and enabled the bishop of Rome to escape from the entangling snares of faction, to overcome his enemies and to show them mercy in defeat? But 'This I must leave for others to relate,

Shut out myself by time and unkind fate.'⁴

³ Auxentius, the Arian bishop of Milan, Ambrose's predecessor, died 374.

⁴ Virgil, Georgics, IV. 147.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Praesentis tantum rei fine contentus sum : imperatorem industria adit, precibus fatigat, merito lenit, sollicitudine promeretur, ut redditam vitae redderet libertati.

VII

AD CHROMATIUM, IOVINUM, EUSEBIUM

I. NON debet charta dividere, quos amor mutuus copulavit, nec per singulos officia mei sunt partienda sermonis, cum sic invicem nos ametis, ut non minus tres caritas iungat, quam duos natura sociavit. Quin potius, si rei condicio pateretur, sub uno litterulae apice nomine indiviso concluderem vestris quoque ita me litteris provocantibus, ut et in uno tres et in tribus unum putarem. Nam postquam sancto Evagrio transmittente in ea ad me heremi parte delatae sunt, quae inter Syros et Sarracenos vastum linitem ducit, sic gavisus sum, ut illum diem Romanae felicitatis, quo primum Marcelli apud Nolam proelio post Cannensem pugnam superba Hannibalis agmina conciderunt, ego vicerim. Et licet supra dictus frater saepe me visitet atque ita ut sua in Christo viscera foveat, tamen longo a me spatio seiunctus

¹ This letter written in A.D. 374 to three young friends (who all later became bishops) from the desert of Chalcis, where Jerome then was living, gives some details of the

LETTER I AND LETTER VII

I am satisfied to record the end of my present story. Evagrius seeks a special interview with the Emperor: wearies him with his prayers, secures his sympathy by the merits of his case, and finally by anxious care wins the day. The Emperor restored to freedom the woman who had been thus restored to life.

LETTER VII

TO CHROMATIUS, JOVINUS AND EUSEBIUS ¹

Family affairs

THOSE whom mutual love has joined together ought not to be separated on a written page. Therefore I must not divide between you individually the words that I owe to you all. Two of you, as brothers, are already natural partners, but so strong is the love which you feel for one another that affection unites the three in a bond that is equally close. Indeed, if actual conditions allowed, I would make one abbreviation include all your names without division; for your letter challenged me to regard you as three in one and one in three. That letter was handed to me by the saintly Evagrius in that part of the desert which forms a broad boundary line between the Syrians and the Saracens, and it filled me with joy, a joy surpassing even the exultation felt at Rome over the victory of Marcellus at Nola, when for the first time after Cannae Hannibal's proud hosts were defeated. The above-named brother often pays me a visit, and cherishes me in Christ like his own flesh; but he is separated from me writer's sister, whose name is unknown, and of the condition of the church in Dalmatia. Cf. p. 308, note 2.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

non minus mihi dereliquit abeundo desiderium, quam adtulerat veniendo laetitiam.

2. Nunc cum vestris litteris fabulor, illas amplexor, illae mecum loquuntur, illae hic tantum Latine sciunt. Hic enim aut barbarus seni sermo discendus est aut tacendum est. Quotiensque carissimos mihi vultus notae manus referunt inpressa vestigia, totiens aut ego hic non sum aut vos hic estis. Credite amori vera dicenti: et cum has scriberem, vos videbam. Quibus hoc primum queror, cur tot interiacentibus spatiis maris et terrarum tam parvam epistulam miseritis, nisi quod ita merui, qui vobis, ut scribitis, ante non scripsi. Chartam defuisse non puto Aegypto ministrante commercia. Et si aliqui Ptolomaeus maria clausisset, tamen rex Attalus membranas e Pergamo miserat, ut penuria chartae pellibus pensaretur; unde pergamenarum nomen ad hanc usque diem tradente sibi invicem posteritate servatum est. Quid igitur? Arbitrer baiulum festinasse? Quamvis longae epistulae una nox sufficit. An vos aliqua occupatione detentos? Nulla necessitas maior est caritate. Restant duo, ut aut vos piguerit aut ego non meruerim. E quibus malo vos incessere tarditatis, quam me condemnare non meriti. Facilius enim negligentia emendari potest, quam amor nasci.

3. Bonosus, ut scribitis, quasi filius ἰχθύος aquosa petit, nos pristina contagione sordentes quasi reguli

¹ I.e. has been baptized. ἰχθύος = Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς Θεοῦ Υἱὸς Σωτήρ. Bonosus, Jerome's foster-brother, studied with him at Rome, joined his band of ascetics at Aquileia, and when this broke up retired to live as a hermit on a small island near Aquileia.

LETTER VII

by a great distance, and his departure always causes me as much regret as his coming has brought delight.

Now I talk to your letter, I embrace it, it carries on a conversation with me, it is the only thing here that knows Latin. In this place an old man has either to learn a barbarous jargon, or else to hold his tongue. The handwriting I know so well brings your dear faces before my eyes; and then either I am no longer here or else you are here with me. Believe love when it tells you the truth: as I write this letter I see you before me. However, I have one complaint to make first. Why is it that with such stretches of sea and land between us you sent me so short a letter? Perhaps I deserved it; for as you say, I did not write first. Paper, I imagine, cannot have failed you now that Egypt supplies the market. Even if some Ptolemy had closed the seas, King Attalus was there to send you skins from Pergamum, and by parchment you could have made up for lack of paper. The very word parchment as it exists to-day, handed down from generation to generation, reveals its origin. Well, am I to suppose that your messenger was pressed for time? One night is sufficient to write a letter in, however long the letter be. Were you prevented by some urgent business? Nothing has a greater claim on you than affection. Two reasons are left; either you felt disinclined, or else I was not deserving. I prefer to accuse you of sloth rather than condemn myself as unworthy. The correction of carelessness is an easier matter than the birth of love.

You tell me that Bonosus, like a true son of the Fish, makes for watery places.¹ For myself, I am et scorpiones arentia quaeque sectamur. Ille iam calcat super colubri caput, nos serpenti terram ex divina sententia comedenti adhuc cibo sumus. Ille potest summum graduum psalmum scandere, nobis adhuc in primo ascensu flentibus nescio an dicere aliquando contingat: 'Levavi oculos meos in montes, unde veniat auxilium mihi.' Ille inter minaces saeculi fluctus in tuto insulae, hoc est ecclesiae gremio, sedens ad exemplum Iohannis librum forte iam devorat, ego in scelerum meorum sepulchro iacens et peccatorum vinculis conligatus dominicum de evangelio expecto clamorem: 'Hieronyme, veni foras.' Bonosus, inquam,—quia secundum prophetam omnis diaboli virtus in lumbo est—trans Euphraten tulit lumbare suum ibi illud in foramine petrae abscondens et postea scissum repperiens cecinit: 'Domine, tu possedisti renes meos; dirupisti vincula mea; tibi sacrificabo hostiam laudis,' me verus Nabuchodonosor ad Babylonem, id est confusionem mentis meae, catenatum duxit; ibi mihi captivitatis iugum inposuit, ibi ferri circulum innectens de canticis Sion cantare praecepit. Cui ego dixi: 'Dominus solvit conpeditos, dominus inluminat caecos'; et, ut breviter coeptam dissimilitudinem finiam, ego veniam deprecor, ille expectat coronam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Soror mea sancti Iuliani in Christo fructus est:

¹ Psalm cxxi. 1. The so-called "Psalms of degrees," cxx-cxxxiv, chanted on the steps of the Temple, are taken as a type of the Christian's progress.

² Revelation, x. 9, 10.

³ Jeremiah, xiii. 4-5.

⁴ Psalm cxxxix. 13.

⁵ Psalm cxxxvii. 3.

⁶ Psalm cxlvi. 7, 8.

⁷ P. 18. n. 1: her conversion is again referred to in still foul with my ancient stains, and like the basilisk and scorpion I seek out any place that is dry. Bonosus to-day treads the serpent's head beneath his heel; I am still food for the creeping monster who by God's decree devours the earth. Bonosus can climb to the highest step in the psalms of degrees; I am still weeping at the beginning of the ascent, and scarcely know whether it will ever be my lot to say¹: 'I lifted up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help.' Bonosus amid the threatening billows of the world sits in the safe retreat of his island, the bosom of the Church, and perhaps, like John, he is even now eating God's book;² I lie in the tomb of my sins, bound in the chains of iniquity, and wait for the Lord's gospel cry: 'Jerome, come forth.' Bonosus, I say—for according to the prophet all the devil's strength is in the loins—has carried his loin-cloth across the Euphrates³ to hide it in a hole of the rock, and after he found it torn he has sung: 'O Lord, thou hast possessed my reins. Thou hast broken my bonds in sunder. I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving.'⁴ As for me, a real Nebuchadnezzar has led me in chains to Babylon, that is, to the babel of a distracted mind. There he has laid upon me the yoke of captivity, there he has fastened an iron ring upon me and bidden me sing one of the songs of Sion.⁵ To him I have made reply: 'The Lord looseth the prisoners; the Lord openeth the eyes of the blind.'⁶ In fact, to complete this comparison of differences in a simple sentence, I pray for mercy, Bonosus awaits a crown.

LETTER VII

My sister⁷ is the fruit in Christ of the saintly

Letter VI, addressed to this same Julian, a deacon of the Church at Aquileia.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

ille plantavit, vos rigate, dominus incrementum dabit. Hanc mihi Iesus pro eo vulnere, quod diabolus inflixerat, praestitit vivam reddendo pro mortua. Huic ego, ut ait gentilis poeta, omnia etiam tuta timeo. Scitis ipsi lubricum adolescentiae iter, in quo et ego lapsus sum et vos non sine timoris^e transitis. Hoc illa cum maxime ingrediens omnium fulcienda praeceptis, omnium est sustentanda solaciis, id est crebris vestrae sanctitudinis epistulis roboranda, et quia caritas omnia sustinet, obsecro ut etiam a papa Valeriano ad cam confortandam litteras exigatis. Nostis puellares animos his rebus plerumque solidari, si se intellegant curae esse maioribus.

5. In mea enim patria rusticitatis vernacula deus venter est et de die vivitur: sanctior est ille, qui ditior est. Accessit huic patellae iuxta tritum populi, proverbium dignum operculum, Lupicinus sacerdos—secundum illud quoque, de quo semel in vita Crassum ait risisse Lucilius: ‘Similem habent labra lactucam asino cardus comedente’—videlicet ut perforatam navem debilis gubernator regat et caecus caecos ducat in foveam talisque sit rector, quales illi qui reguntur.

6. Matrem communem, quae, cum vobis sanctitate

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, IV. 298.

² For the term “Pope” cf. p. 308, note 2.

³ A priest or bishop of Stridon, a Spaniard by birth, who was at variance with Jerome probably because he opposed monasticism.

⁴ Cicero, De Fin. v. 30.

⁵ For this proverb (the precise point of which is not clear) cf. also Eugenius, Carm. 89 (Migne, Patrolog. Lat., LXXXVII, II. Carm. 50, p. 393): Carduus et spina, cum pastum praebet asello, lactuca labris compar est.

LETTER VII

Julian. He planted, you must water, the Lord will give the increase. Jesus has given her to me as compensation for the wound which the devil inflicted. He has brought her back from death to life. But, as the heathen poet says, for her

'All things, though safe in semblance, I do fear.'¹

You know yourselves how treacherous is the path of youth, a path where I fell and which you are now traversing not without fear. At this moment, when she is entering upon it, she needs to be supported by all men's encouragement, confirmed by all men's advice; in other words, strengthened by such frequent letters as your saintliness will suggest. Love endureth all things; and I therefore beg you to get a letter from Pope Valerian² also, so that her courage may be increased. You know that a girl's spirit is often fortified by the thought that her elders are interested in her.

As for my own country, it is enslaved to barbarism, and men's family God is their belly. People live only for the day, and the richer you are the more saintly you are held to be. Furthermore, to use a well-worn popular saying, the cover there is worthy of the dish; for Lupicinus³ is their priest. It bears out the proverb which, as Lucilius tells us, made Crassus laugh for the only time in his life⁴: 'When an ass eats thistles up, his lips have lettuce like themselves.'⁵ I mean that in my country a crippled helmsman steers a leaking ship, a blind man leads the blind into a pit; as the ruler is, so are the ruled.

I send my greetings to your mother, who is a societur, in eo vos praevenit, quia tales genuit, cuius vere venter aureus potest dici, eo salutamus honore, quo nostis; una quoque suspiciendas cunctis sorores, quae sexum vicere cum saeculo, quae oleo ad lampadas largiter preparato sponsi opperiuntur adventum. O beata domus, in qua morantur Anna vidua, virgines prophetissae, geminus Samuhel nutritus in templo! O tecta felicia, in quibus cernimus Macchabaeorum martyrum coronis cinctam martyrem matrem! Nam licet cotidie Christum confiteamini, dum eius praecepta servatis, tamen ad privatam gloriam publica haec accessit vobis et aperta confessio, quod per vos ab urbe vestra Arriani quondam dogmatis virus exclusum est. Et miremini forsitan, quod in fine iam epistulae rursus exorsus sim. Quid faciam? Vocem pectori negare non valeo. Epistulae brevitatis compellit tacere, desiderium vestri cogit loqui. Praeproperus sermo; confusa turbatur oratio; amor ordinem nescit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LETTER VII

mother to us all, with the deep respect which you know I feel. She is your close associate in holy life ; but she has one advantage over you in that she is the mother of such sons as yourselves. Truly her womb may be called golden. I salute your sisters also, for they are worthy of universal respect. They have triumphed over sex and the world, and now await the Bridegroom's coming, their lamps well filled with oil. How happy is the house, where dwells a widowed Anna, virgins that are prophetesses, and twin Samuels¹ reared in the temple precincts. How fortunate the roof that shelters for us the martyr mother of the martyr Maccabees all girt with crowns.² Though every day you confess Christ by keeping his commandments, you have added to this private glory the public fame of an open confession, and it was by your efforts in the past that the poison of the Arian heresy was expelled from your city.³ Perhaps you may wonder at my beginning thus afresh at the end of a letter. What am I to do? I cannot preclude my heart from utterance. The brief limits of a letter force me to be silent, but my longing for your company compels me to speak. My words pour out in eager haste ; my language is confused and disjointed ; but love knows nothing of order.

¹ I.e. Chromatius and Eusebius, cf. sect. v.

² Cf. 2 Maccabees, vii. ³ Aquileia.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

XIV

AD HELIODORUM MONACHUM

I. QUANTO studio et amore contenderim, ut pariter in heremo moraremur, conscium mutuae caritatis pectus agnoscit. Quibus lamentis, quo dolore, quo gemitu te absentem persecutus sim, istae quoque litterae testes sunt, quas lacrimis cernis interlitas. Verum tu quasi parvulus delicatus contemptum rogantis per blandimenta fovisti et ego incautus, quid tunc agerem, nesciebam. Tacerem? Sed quod ardentem volebam, moderate dissimulare non poteram. Impensius obsecrarem? Sed audire nolebas, quia similiter non amabas. Quod unum potuit, spreta caritas fecit. Quem praesentem retinere non valuit, quaerit absentem. Quoniam igitur et tu ipse abiens postularas, ut tibi, postquam ad deserta migrassem, invitatoriam a me scriptam transmitterem, et ego facturum receperam, invito, iam propera. Nolo pristinarum necessitatum recorderis—nudos amat heremus—nolo te antiquae peregrinationis terreat difficultas. Qui in Christo credis, et eius crede sermonibus: ‘Quaerite primum regnum Dei, et haec omnia adponentur vobis.’ Non pera tibi sumenda, non virga est; adfatum dives est, qui cum Christo pauper est.

LETTER XIV

LETTER XIV

TO HELIODORUS

The ascetic life

Written A.D. 374

YOUR own heart conscious of our mutual affection knows with what loving zeal I urged you to let us stay together in the desert. This letter even, blotted, as you see, with tears, bears witness to the grief, the sobs, and the lamentations wherewith I accompanied your departure. You, like some spoilt child, smoothed over your contemptuous refusal then with soft words and I in my folly did not know what to do. Ought I to have held my tongue? I could not conceal my ardent desires under a cloak of indifference. Ought I to have pleaded with more urgency? You would not have listened, for you did not love me as I loved you. The affection you scorned has done the one thing it could. It was not able to keep you when present, but it now comes to seek you when you are far away. At your departure you asked me to send you a letter of invitation when I took up my home in the desert, and I promised that I would do so. That letter of invitation I now send: come, and come quickly. Do not think of old ties—the desert loves the naked—do not be deterred by the hardships of our former travels. As you believe in Christ, believe also in his words: ‘Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you’!¹ You need not take scrip nor staff; he is abundantly rich who is poor with Christ.

¹ St. Matthew, vi. 33.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Sed quid ago? Rursus improvidus obsecro? Abeant preces, blandimenta discedant; debet amor irasci. Qui rogantem contempseras, forsitan audies obiurgantem. Quid facis in paterna domo, delicate miles? Ubi vallum, ubi fossa, ubi hiemps acta sub pellibus? Ecce de caelo tuba canit, cum nubibus debellaturus orbem imperator armatus egreditur, ecce bis acutus gladius ex regis ore procedens obvia quaeque metit: et tu mihi de cubiculo ad aciem, de umbra egrederis ad solem? Corpus adsuetum tunica loricae non suffert, caput opertum linteo galeam recusat, mollem otio manum durus exasperat capulus. Audi edictum regis tui: 'Qui mecum non est, contra me est; et qui mecum non colligit, spargit.' Recordare tiroconii tui diem, quo Christo in baptis^{mate} consepultus sacramenti verba iurasti: pro nomine eius non te matri parciturum esse, non patri. Ecce adversarius in pectore tuo Christum conatur occidere; ecce donativum, quod militaturus acceperas, hostilia castra suspirant. Licet parvulus ex collo pendeat nepos, licet sparso crine et scissis vestibibus ubera, quibus nutrierat, mater ostendat, licet in limine pater iaceat, per calcatum

LETTER XIV

But what am I doing? Why these imprudent entreaties for the second time? A truce to prayers, enough of soft words. It is the duty of offended love to show resentment. You despised my request; perhaps you will listen to my reproof. What business have you, pampered soldier, in your father's house? Where now are the rampart, the trench, and the winter under canvas? Lo, the trumpet sounds from heaven! Lo, our general fully armed comes forth amid the clouds to subdue the world! Lo, from our king's mouth proceeds a sword twice sharpened, which cuts down all that is in its path! Are you coming out, pray, from your chamber to the battle-field, from the shade to the sun? A body that is used to a tunic cannot support a cuirass, a head that has worn a linen hood shrinks from a helmet, a hand that idleness has softened is galled by a hard sword-hilt. Hear your king's proclamation: 'He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth.'¹ Remember the day when you enlisted as a recruit, when, buried with Christ in baptism, you took the oath of allegiance to Him, declaring that in His name you would spare neither father nor mother. Lo, the adversary within your own heart is trying now to slay Christ! Lo, the enemy's camp is sighing now for the bounty which you received before your service began. Though your little nephew² hang on your neck, though your mother with dishevelled hair and torn raiment show you the breasts that gave you suck, though your father fling himself upon the threshold, trample your father underfoot and go your way, fly

¹ St. Matthew, xii. 30.

² Nepotian. Cf. Letters LII and LX.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

perge patrem, siccis oculis ad vexillum crucis vola!
Pietatis genus est in hac re esse crudelem.

3. Veniet postea dies, quo victor revertaris in patriam, quo Hierosolymam caelestem vir fortis coronatus incedas. Tunc municipatum cum Paulo capies, tunc et parentibus tuis eiusdem civitatis ius petes, tunc et pro me rogabis, qui, ut vinceres, incitavi. Neque vero nescio, qua te nunc dicas conpede praepediri. Non est nobis ferreum pectus nec dura praecordia, non ex silice natos Hyrcanae nutriere tigrides. Et nos per ista transivimus. Nunc tibi blandis vidua soror haeret lacertis, nunc illi, cum quibus adolevisti, vernulae aiunt: 'Cui nos servituros relinquis?' Nunc et gerula quondam, iam anus, et nutricius, secundus post naturalem pietatis pater, clamitat: 'Morituros expecta paulisper et sepeli.' Forsitan et laxis uberum pellibus, arata rugis fronte antiquum referens mamma lallare congeminet. Dicant, si volunt, et grammatici: 'In te omnis domus inclinata recumbit.' Facile rumpit haec vincula amor Christi et timor gehennae. 'At scriptura praecipit parentibus obsequendum': sed quicumque eos supra Christum amat, perdit animam suam. Gladium tenet hostis, ut me perimat, et ego de matris lacrimis cogitabo? Propter with tearless eyes to the standard of the Cross. In these matters to be cruel is a son's duty.

LETTER XIV

The day will come later when you shall return in triumph to your true country, when, crowned as a man of might, you shall walk the streets of the heavenly Jerusalem. Then you shall share with Paul the franchise of that city, and ask the same privilege for your parents. Yes, and for me also you shall intercede, who urged you on to victory. I know full well the fetters which you will say impede you. My breast is not of iron nor my heart of stone. I was not born from a rock or suckled by Hyrcanian tigers.¹ I too have passed through all this. Your widowed sister clings to you to-day with loving arms; the house-slaves, in whose company you grew to manhood, cry 'To what master are you leaving us?' Your old nurse and her husband, who have the next claim to your affection after your own father, exclaim, 'Wait for a few months till we die and then give us burial.' Perhaps your foster mother with sagging breasts and wrinkled face may remind you of your old lullaby and sing it once again. Your tutors even, if they wish, may say with Virgil: ²

'On you the whole house resting leans.'

The love of Christ and the fear of hell easily break such bonds as these.

But, you will say, the Scripture bids us to obey our parents. Nay, whosoever loves his parents more than Christ loses his own soul. The enemy takes up his sword to slay me: shall I think of my mother's tears? Shall I desert from my army because of my patrem militiam deseram, cui sepulturam Christi causa non debeo, quam etiam omnibus eius causa debeo? Domino passuro timide consulens Petrus scandalum fuit. Paulus retinentibus fratribus, ne Hierosolymam pergeret, respondit: 'Quid facitis plorantes et conturbantes cor meum? Ego non solum ligari, sed mori in Hierusalem paratus sum pro nomine domini nostri Iesu Christi.' Aries iste pietatis, quo fides quatitur, evangelii retundendus est muro: 'Mater mea et fratres mei hi sunt, quicumque faciunt voluntatem patris mei, qui in caelis est.' Si credunt in Christo, faveant mihi pro eius nomine pugnaturo; si non credunt, 'mortui sepeliant mortuos suos.'

¹ Cf. Aeneid, IV. 366.

² Aeneid, XII. 59.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. 'Sed hoc,' ais, 'in martyrio.' Erras, frater, erras, si putas umquam Christianum persecutionem non pati; et nunc cum maxime oppugnaris, si te oppugnari nescis. Adversarius noster tamquam leo rugiens aliquem devorare quaerens circuit, et tu pacem putas? 'Sedet in insidiis cum divitibus in occultis, ut interficiat innocentem; oculi eius in pauperem respiciunt; insidiatur in occulto sicut leo in spelunca sua; insidiatur ut rapiat pauperem': et tu frondosae arboris tectus umbraculo molles somnos, futura praeda, carpis? Inde me persequitur luxuria, inde avaritia conatur inrumpere, father, to whom in Christ's cause I owe no rites of burial, although in Christ's cause I owe them to all men? Peter with his craven counsel was an offence to Our Lord before His passion. Paul's answer to his brothers, who would have stayed his journey to Jerusalem, was this: 'What mean ye, to weep and to break my heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.'¹ The battering-ram of affection which shakes faith must be beaten back by the wall of the Gospel: 'My mother and my brethren are these, whosoever do the will of my father which is in heaven.'² If men believe in Christ, they should cheer me on as I go to fight in His name. If they do not believe, 'let the dead bury their dead.'³

LETTER XIV

All this is well enough, you reply, if one is a martyr. Ah, you are mistaken, grievously mistaken, my brother, if you think that there is ever a time when the Christian is not suffering persecution. At this very moment you are being furiously attacked when you do not know that any attack is being made. 'Our adversary as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour,'⁴ and do you think you are at peace? 'He sitteth in ambush with the rich in secret to murder the innocent, his eyes are privily set against the poor. He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den; he lieth in wait to catch the poor,'⁵ and do you, his destined prey, enjoy your soft slumbers under the shady covering of a leafy tree? On one side self-indulgence pursues me, on another avarice tries to break in, on another my belly

¹ Acts, xxi. 13.

² St. Matthew, xii. 50.

³ St. Matthew, viii. 22.

⁴ 1 St. Peter, v. 8.

⁵ Psalm x. 8.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

inde venter meus vult mihi deus esse pro Christo, compellit libido, ut habitantem in me spiritum sanctum fugem, ut templum eius violem, persequitur me, inquam, hostis, 'cui nomina mille, mille nocendi artes': et ego infelix victorem me putabo, dum capior?

5. Nolo, frater carissime, examinato pondere delictorum minora arbitraris idolatriae crimina esse, quae diximus; immo apostoli disce sententiam, qui ait: 'Hoc enim scitote intellegentes, quia omnis fornicator aut immundus, aut fraudator, quod est idolatria, non habet hereditatem in regno Dei et Christi.' Et quamquam generaliter adversum Deum sapiat, quidquid diaboli est, et quod diaboli est, idolatria sit, cui omnia idola mancipantur, tamen et in alio loco speciatim nominatimque determinat dicens: 'Mortificate membra vestra, quae in terra sunt, exponentes fornicationem, immunditiam et concupiscentiam malam et cupiditatem, quae sunt idolorum servitus, propter quae venit ira Dei.' Non est tantum in eo servitus idoli, si quis duobus digitulis tura comprehensa in bustum arae iaciat aut haustum patera fundat merum. Neget avaritiam idolatriam, qui potest triginta argenteis dominum venditum appellare iustitiam; neget sacrilegium in libidine, sed is qui membra Christi et hostiam vivam placentem Deo cum publicarum libidinum victimis wishes to be my god in Christ's place: lust urges me to drive away the Holy Spirit that dwells within me and to violate His temple; I am pursued, I repeat, by an enemy who has

LETTER XIV

' A thousand names, a thousand arts for ill ' ;¹

and shall I, poor wretch, deem myself a conqueror when I am being led into captivity?

Do not weigh one transgression too closely against another, dearest brother, nor think that the sins I have mentioned are less heinous than idolatry. Nay, listen to the apostle's verdict: ' For this we know, that no whoremonger or unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.'² Speaking generally all that is of the devil savours of enmity to God, and what is of the devil is idolatry, since all idols are in his service. But in another place the apostle lays down a special law, saying expressly: ' Mortify your members which are upon the earth, laying aside fornication, uncleanness, evil concupiscence and covetousness, which are idolatry, for which things' sake the wrath of God cometh.'³ Idolatry is not confined to taking some grains of incense in two fingers and throwing them upon an altar fire, nor to pouring a libation of wine from a bowl. Let him deny that avarice is idolatry, who can assert that the selling of the Lord for thirty pieces of silver was a righteous act. Let him, but only him, deny that there is sacrilege in carnal lust, who has polluted the living offering of his body pleasing to God by shameful intercourse with the victims of public

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, VII. 337.

² Ephesians, v. 5.

³ Colossians, iii. 5.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

nefaria conluione violavit; non fateatur idolatras eos, sed similis eorum, qui in Actibus Apostolorum ex patrimonio suo partem pretii reservantes praesenti periere vindicta. Animadvertite, frater: non tibi licet de tuis quicquam habere rebus. 'Omnis,' inquit dominus, 'qui non renuntiaverit cunctis quae possidet, non potest meus esse discipulus.'

6. Cur timido animo Christianus es? Respice cum patre relictum rete, respice surgentem de teloneo publicanum, statim apostolum. 'Filius hominis non habet, ubi caput reclinet': et tu amplas porticus et ingentia tectorum spatia metaris? Hereditatem expectas saeculi, coheres Christi? Interpretare vocabulum monachi, hoc est nomen tuum: quid facis in turba, qui solus es? Et haec ego non integris rate vel mercibus quasi ignaros fluctuum doctus nauta praemoneo, sed quasi nuper naufragio eiectus in litus timida navigaturis voce denuntio. In illo aestu Charybdis luxuriae salutem vorat, ibi ore virgineo ad pudicitiae perpetranda naufragia Scyllaceum renidens libido blanditur; hic barbarum litus, hic diabolus pirata cum sociis portat vincla capiendis. Nolite credere, nolite esse securi. Licet in morem stagni fusum aequor adrideat, licet vix summa iacentis elementi spiritu terga crispentur, magnus hic campus montes habet, vice. Let him not confess that those men were idolaters, who in the Acts of the Apostles¹ kept back part of the price of their inheritance, and perished by an instant penalty, but only if he is himself like them. Take heed, brother: it is not lawful for you to keep anything that you possess. 'Whosoever he be of you,' says the Lord, 'that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple'!²

¹ Acts, v. 1.

² St. Luke, xiv. 33.

LETTER XIV

Why are you such a timid Christian? Consider him who left his father and his nets, and how the publican rising from the receipt of custom became at once an apostle. 'The Son of man hath not where to lay his head,'³ and are you planning wide colonnades and spacious halls? Are you looking for an inheritance in this world, you who are joint-heir with Christ? Consider the meaning of the word monk, your proper designation.⁴ What are you, a solitary, doing in a crowd? These warnings of mine are not those of a skilled sailor, with ship and cargo intact, addressed to people ignorant of the sea; nay, rather, like some shipwrecked mariner just cast ashore, I address my faltering words to others who are about to set sail. On one side of the strait the Charybdis of self-indulgence engulfs our salvation; on the other the Scylla of lust, with a smile upon her girlish cheek, lures us on to make shipwreck of our chastity. To the right is a savage coast, to the left the devil with his pirate crew carrying chains for his future captives. Be not credulous, be not over-confident. Though the sea be now as smooth and smiling as a pond, though the mighty monster's back be scarcely ruffled by a breath of air, yet that huge plain contains mountains within

³ St. Matthew, viii. 20.

⁴ Μόναχος, solitary.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

intus inclusum est periculum, intus est hostis. Expedite rudentes, vela suspendite. Crux antennae figatur in frontibus: tranquillitas ista tempestas est.

‘ Quid ergo? quicumque in civitate sunt, Christiani non sunt? ’ Non est tibi eadem causa, quae ceteris. Dominum ausculta dicentem: ‘ Si vis perfectus esse, vade, vende omnia tua et da pauperibus et veni, sequere me. ’ Tu autem perfectum te esse pollicitus es. Nam cum derelicta militia castrasti te propter regnum caelorum, quid aliud quam perfectam sectatus es vitam? Perfectus autem servus Christi nihil praeter Christum habet; si praeter Christum habet, perfectus non est. Et si perfectus non est, cum se perfectum Deo fore pollicitus sit, ante mentitus est. ‘ Os, ’ autem, ‘ quod mentitur, occidit animam. ’ Igitur, ut concludam, si perfectus es, cur bona paternae desideras? Si perfectus non es, dominum fefellisti. Divinis evangelium vocibus tonat: ‘ Non potestis duobus dominis servire, ’ et audet quisquam mendacem Christum facere mamoniae et domino serviendo? Vociferatur ille saepe: ‘ Si quis vult post me venire, abneget se ipsum et tollat crucem suam et sequatur me. ’ Et ego onustus auro arbitror me Christum sequi? ‘ Qui dicit se in Christo manere, debet, quomodo ille ambulavit, et ipse ambulare. ’

7. Quodsi nihil habes, ut responsurum te scio, cur

¹ St. Matthew, xix. 21.

² Wisdom, i. 11.

LETTER XIV

it. There is danger in its depths, the foe is lurking there. Stow your tackle, reef your sails, and let the cross which the yard-arm makes be fastened on your front. That stillness means a tempest.

Well, you may say, are not all my fellow-townsmen Christians? Your case is not the same as that of other men. Listen to the Lord speaking: 'If thou wilt be perfect go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and come and follow me.'¹ You promised to be perfect. When you gave up the army and made yourself an eunuch for the kingdom of heaven's sake, what other purpose had you in view save the perfect life? A perfect servant of Christ has nothing beside Christ: if he has anything beside Christ he is not perfect. And if he is not perfect, when he promised God that he would be perfect, his first promise was a lie. Now 'the mouth that lieth slayeth the soul.'² To conclude, then, if you are perfect why do you hanker after your father's property? If you are not perfect, you have played the Lord false. The Gospel thunders with God's own voice: 'Ye cannot serve two masters';³ and does any man dare to make Christ a liar by serving Mammon and the Lord together? Often does He cry: 'If any one will come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.'⁴ Do I think that I am following Christ when I load myself with gold? 'He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also to walk even as He walked.'⁵

I know what your reply will be—'I possess nothing.' When you are so well equipped for war, why do you

³ St. Matthew, vi. 24.

⁴ St. Matthew, xvi. 24.

⁵ 1 John, ii. 6.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

tam bene paratus ad bella non militas? Nisi forte in patria tua te arbitraris hoc facere, cum in sua dominus signa non fecerit. Et cur id? Cum auctoritate sume rationem: 'Nemo propheta in sua patria honorem habet.' 'Non quaero,' inquires, 'honorem; sufficit mihi conscientia mea.' Neque dominus quaerebat, quippe qui, ne a turbis rex constitueretur, aufugit. Sed ubi honor non est, ibi contemptus est; ubi contemptus, ibi frequens iniuria; ubi autem iniuria, ibi et indignatio; ubi indignatio, ibi quies nulla; ubi quies non est, ibi mens a proposito saepe deducitur; ubi autem per inquietudinem aliquid aufertur ex studio, minus fit ab eo, quod tollitur, et ubi minus est, perfectum non potest dici. Ex hac supputatione illa summa nascitur, monachum perfectum in patria sua esse non posse. Perfectum autem esse nolle delinquere est.

8. Sed de hoc gradu pulsus provocabis ad clericos: 'An de his aliquid audeam dicere, qui certe in suis urbibus commorantur?' Absit ut quicquam de his sinistram loquar, qui apostolico gradui succedentes Christi corpus sacro ore conficiunt, per quos nos etiam Christiani sumus, qui claves regni caelorum habentes quodammodo ante iudicii diem iudicant, qui sponsum domini sobria castitate conservant. Sed alia, ut ante praestruxi, monachi causa est, alia clericorum. Clerici oves pascunt, ego pascor; illi de altario vivunt, mihi quasi infructuosae arbori securis ponitur ad radices, si munus ad altare non not take the field? Perhaps you think you can do so in your own country, although the Lord could do no signs in His. Why could He not? Hear the reason that has His authority: 'No prophet has honour in his own country.' 'I do not seek honour,' you will say; 'my own conscience is enough for me.' Neither did the Lord seek it; for when the crowds would have made Him king He fled away. But where there is no honour, there is contempt; where there is contempt, insult is frequent; where there is insult, there is indignation; where there is indignation, there is no rest; where there is no rest, the mind is often diverted from its purpose. Moreover, where through restlessness something of zeal is lost, zeal is lessened by what it loses, and when a thing is lessened it cannot be called perfect. We may sum up our account by saying that a monk cannot be perfect in his own country; and not to wish to be perfect is a sin.

¹ Cf. p. 412, note 1.

LETTER XIV

Shifted from this position you will appeal to the clergy. 'Do you dare to criticize them,' you will say, 'who yet assuredly remain in their own cities?' Heaven forbid that I should say anything unfavourable about the men who, as successors to the apostles, make the body of Christ for us with holy words; who baptize us as Christians; who hold the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and in a way judge us before the Judgment Day; who in sober chastity guard the bride of Christ. But, as I have laid down already, the case of a monk is different from that of the clergy.¹ The clergy feed Christ's sheep; I, a monk, am of their flock. The clergy live of the altar; if I bring no gift to the altar steps, I am a barren tree and the axe is laid to my

Ans. E. to.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

defero. Nec possum obtendere paupertatem, cum in evangelio anum videam duo, quae sola sibi supererant, aera mittentem. Mihi ante presbyterum sedere non licet; illi, si peccavero, licet tradere me Satanae in interitum carnis, ut spiritus salvus fiat.

Et in veteri quidem lege, quicumque sacerdotibus non obtemperasset, aut extra castra positus lapidabatur a populo aut gladio cervice subiecto contemptum expiabat cruore. Nunc vero inoboediens spiritali mucrone truncatur aut eiectus de ecclesia rabido daemonum ore discerpitur. Quod si te quoque ad eundem ordinem pia fratrum blandimenta sollicitant, gaudebo de ascensu, timebo de lapsu. 'Qui episcopatum desiderat, bonum opus desiderat.' Scimus ista, sed iunge, quod sequitur: 'Oportet autem huiusmodi inreprehensibilem esse, unius uxoris virum, sobrium, pudicum, prudentem, ornatum, hospitalem, docibilem, non vinolentum, non percussorem, sed modestum.' Et ceteris de eo, quae sequuntur, explicitis non minore in tertio gradu adhibuit diligentiam dicens: 'Diaconos similiter pudicos, non bilingues, non multo vino deditos, non turpilucros, habentes mysterium fidei in conscientia pura. Et hi autem probentur primam et sic ministrent nullum crimen habentes.' Vae illi homini, qui vestem non habens nuptialem ingreditur ad cenam! Nihil superest, nisi ut statim audiat: 'Amice, quomodo roots. I cannot plead poverty, for in the Gospel I see the aged woman offering the last two pennies she had left. It is not permitted me to sit in the presence of a presbyter: it is permitted him, if I sin, to deliver me to Satan, for the destruction of the flesh that the spirit may be saved.¹

¹ 1 Corinthians, v. 5.

² Deut., xvii. 12.

LETTER XIV

Under the old law anyone who refused obedience to the priests was put outside the camp and stoned by the people, or else he was beheaded and expiated his contempt with his blood.² To-day the disobedient are smitten with the spiritual sword, or they are expelled from the Church and torn in pieces by the ravening jaws of demons. If the pious persuasion of your brethren invites you to take clerical orders, I shall rejoice at your present rise and fear a future fall. 'If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.'³ We know the passage: you must continue the quotation: 'Such an one must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, chaste, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach, not given to wine, no striker but patient.'⁴ After setting out some further details the apostle shows no less care in dealing with clergy of the third degree. 'Likewise must the deacons be grave,' he says, 'not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre, holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them minister, being found blameless.'⁵ Woe to the man who enters the feast without a wedding garment! Nothing remains for him but the quick challenge, 'Friend, how camest thou in

³ 1 Timothy, iii. 1.

⁴ 1 Timothy, iii. 2.

⁵ 1 Timothy, iii. 8.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

huc venisti?' et illo obmutescente dicatur ministris: 'Tollite illum pedibus et manibus et mittite eum in tenebras exteriores; ibi erit fletus et stridor dentium.' Vae illi, qui acceptum talentum in sudario ligans ceteris lucra facientibus id tantum, quod acceperat, reservavit! Ilico indignantis domini clamore feritur: 'Serve nequam, quare non dedisti pecuniam meam ad mensam, et ego veniens cum usuris exegissem?' id est: 'deposuisses ad altare, quod ferre non poteras. Dum enim tu, ignavus negotiator, denarium tenes, alterius locum, qui pecuniam duplicare poterat, occupasti.' Quam ob rem sicut is, qui bene ministrat, bonum gradum sibi acquirit, ita, qui indigne ad calicem domini accedit, reus erit dominici corporis et sanguinis.

9. Non omnes episcopi episcopi. Adtendis Petrum, sed et Iudam considera. Stephanum suspicis, sed et Nicolaum respice, quem dominus in Apocalypsi sua odit; qui tam turpia et nefanda commentus est, ut Ophitarum heresis ex illa radice nascatur. Probet se unusquisque et sic accedat. Non facit ecclesiastica dignitas Christianum. Cornelius centurio adhuc ethnicus dono spiritus sancti inundatur; presbyteros Danihel puer iudicat; Amos ruborum mora destringens repente propheta est; David pastor adlegitur in regem; minimum discipulum Iesus amat plurimum. Inferius, frater,

¹ St. Matthew, xxii. 11.

² St. Luke, xix. 23.

³ The assumed founder of the sect of the Nicolaitanes, Rev., ii. 6.

LETTER XIV

hither?' And as he stands speechless, the servant will be bidden: 'Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.'¹ Woe to the man who receives a talent and ties it in a napkin, merely keeping what he has received while others make a profit! At once his angry lord's rebuke shall strike him: 'Thou wicked servant, wherefore gavest thou not my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required mine own with usury?'² That is, 'You should have laid down at the altar what you yourself were not able to carry. For while you, a slothful trader, keep a penny back, you occupy the place of another who could have doubled the money.' Wherefore, as he who ministers well wins for himself an honourable place, so he who comes to the Lord's cup unworthily shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

Not all bishops are true bishops. You notice Peter; but mark Judas as well. You look up to Stephen; but consider also Nicolas³ whom the Lord in His Apocalypse abominates, the man whose foul and shameful teachings gave rise to the Ophite⁴ heresy. Let a man examine himself and so let him come. Ecclesiastical rank does not make a man a Christian. The centurion Cornelius was still a heathen when he was cleansed by the gift of the Holy Spirit. Daniel was but a child when he judged the elders. Amos was plucking blackberries when in a moment he was made a prophet. David was only a shepherd when he was chosen to be king. The least of his disciples was the one whom Jesus loved most. My brother, sit down in the lower place, ⁴ The Ophites were an obscure Gnostic sect.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

accumbe, ut minore veniente sursum iubearis accedere. Super quem dominus requiescit, nisi super humilem et quietum et trementem verba sua? Cui plus creditur, plus ab eo exigitur. 'Potentes potenter tormenta patientur.' Nec sibi quisquam de corporis tantum mundi castitate supplaudeat, cum omne verbum otiosum, quodcumque locuti fuerint homines, reddituri sint pro eo rationem in die iudicii, cum etiam convicium in fratrem homicidii sit reatus. Non est facile stare loco Pauli, tenere gradum iam cum Christo regnantium, ne forte veniat angelus, qui scindat velum templi tui, qui candelabrum tuum loco moveat. Aedificaturus turrem futuri operis sumptus supputa. Infatuatum sal ad nihilum est utile, nisi ut proiciatur foras et a porcis conculcetur. Monachus si ceciderit, rogabit pro eo sacerdos; pro sacerdotis lapsu quis rogaturus est?

10. Sed quia e scopulosis locis enavigavit oratio et inter cavas spumeis fluctibus cautes fragilis in altum cumba processit, expandenda vela sunt ventis et quaestionum scopulis transvadatis laetantium more nautarum epilogi celeuma cantandum est. O desertum Christi floribus vernans! O solitudo, in qua illi nascuntur lapides, de quibus in Apocalypsi civitas magni regis extruitur! O heremus familiari Deo gaudens! Quid agis, frater, in saeculo, qui maior es mundo? Quam diu te tectorum umbrae that when one less honourable comes you may be bidden to go up higher. Upon whom does the Lord rest save upon him that is lowly and of a contrite spirit and that trembleth at his words? The more that is entrusted to a man, the more is demanded from him: 'The mighty will suffer torments mightily.'¹ Let no man applaud himself because of his bodily chastity alone on the day of judgment, for men shall render account for every idle word they have spoken, and abuse of a brother shall be counted as the sin of murder. It is no easy thing to stand in Paul's place and to hold the rank of those who now reign with Christ. Perchance an angel may come to rend the veil of your temple and to remove your candlestick from its place. If you are thinking of building a tower, reckon up the cost of the structure first. Salt that has lost its savour is worthless: it can only be cast out and trodden underfoot by swine. If a monk falls, a priest will intercede for him; but who shall intercede for a fallen priest?

LETTER XIV

My discourse has now sailed clear of the reefs, and from the midst of hollow crags with foaming waves my frail bark has won her way into deep water. Now I may spread my canvas to the wind, and leaving the rocks of controversy astern, like some merry sailor sing a cheerful epilogue. O wilderness, bright with Christ's spring flowers! O solitude, whence come those stones wherewith in the Apocalypse the city of the mighty king is built! O desert, rejoicing in God's familiar presence! What are you doing in the world, brother, you who are more than the universe? How long is the shade of a roof going premunt? Quam diu fumeus harum urbium carcer includit? Crede mihi, nescio quid plus lucis aspicio. Libet sarcina carnis abiecta ad purum aetheris volare fulgorem. Paupertatem times? sed beatos pauperes Christus appellat. Labore terreris? sed nemo athleta sine sudoribus coronatur. De cibo cogitas? sed fides famem non sentit. Super nudam metuis humum exesa ieiuniis membra conlidere? sed dominus tecum iacet. Squalidi capitis horret inculta caesaries? sed caput tuum Christus est. Infinita heremi vastitas terret? sed tu paradisum mente deambula. Quotiescumque illuc cogitatione conscenderis, totiens in heremo non eris. Scabra sine balneis adtrahitur cutis? sed qui in Christo semel lotus est, non illi necesse est iterum lavare. Et, ut breviter, ad cuncta apostolum audias respondentem: 'Non sunt condignae passionis huius saeculi ad superventuram gloriam, quae revelabitur in nobis.' Delicatus es, carissime, si et hic vis gaudere cum saeculo et postea regnare cum Christo.

¹ Wisdom, vi. 6.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Veniet, veniet illa dies, qua corruptivum hoc et mortale incorruptionem induat et immortalitatem. Beatus servus, quem dominus invenerit vigilantem. Tunc ad vocem tubae pavebit terra cum populis, tu gaudebis. Iudicaturus domino lugubre mundus immugiet; tribus ad tribum ferient pectora; potentissimi quondam reges nudo latere to confine you? How long shall the smoky prison of these cities shut you in? Believe me, I see something more of light than you behold. How sweet it is to fling off the burden of the flesh, and to fly aloft to the clear radiance of the sky! Are you afraid of poverty? Christ calls the poor blessed. Are you frightened by the thought of toil? No athlete gains his crown without sweat. Are you thinking about food? Faith feels not hunger. Do you dread bruising your limbs worn away with fasting on the bare ground? The Lord lies by your side. Is your rough head bristling with uncombed hair? Your head is Christ. Does the infinite vastness of the desert seem terrible? In spirit you may always stroll in paradise, and when in thought you have ascended there you will no longer be in the desert. Is your skin rough and scurfy without baths? He who has once washed in Christ needs not to wash again. Listen to the apostle's brief reply to all complaints: 'The sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall come after them, which shall be revealed in us.'¹ You are a pampered darling indeed, dearest brother, if you wish to rejoice here with this world and afterwards to reign with Christ.

LETTER XIV

The day, the day will come when this corrupt and mortal body shall put on incorruptibility and become immortal. Happy the servant whom the Lord then shall find on the watch. Then at the voice of the trumpet the earth with its peoples shall quake, and you will rejoice. When the Lord comes to give judgment the universe will utter a mournful groan; the tribes of men will beat their breasts; kings once palpitabunt; exhibebitur cum prole sua vere tunc ignitus Iuppiter; adducetur et cum suis stultus Plato discipulis; Aristoteli argumenta non proderunt. Tunc tu rusticanus et pauper exultabis, ridebis et dices: 'Ecce crucifixus Deus meus, ecce iudex, qui obvolutus pannis in praeseptio vagiit. Hic est ille operarii et quaestuariae filius, hic, qui matris gestatus sinu hominem Deus fugit in Aegyptum, hic vestitus coccino, hic sentibus coronatus, hic magus daemonium habens et Samarites. Cerne manus, Iudaeae, quas ~~fix~~eras; cerne latus, Romane, quod foderas. Videte corpus, an idem sit, quod dicebatis clam nocte tulisse discipulos.' Ut haec tibi, frater, dicere, ut his interesse contingat, qui nunc labor durus est?

¹ Romans, viii. 18.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

XXII

AD EUSTOCHIUM

1. 'AUDI, filia, et vide et inclina aurem tuam et obliviscere populum tuum et domum patris tui; et concupiscet rex decorem tuum.' In quadragesimo quarto psalmo Deus ad animam loquitur humanam,

LETTER XIV AND LETTER XXII

most mighty will shiver with naked flanks; Jupiter with all his offspring will then be shown amid real fires; Plato with his disciples will be revealed as but a fool; Aristotle's arguments will not help him. Then you the poor rustic will exult, and say with a smile: 'Behold my crucified God, behold the judge. This is he who once was wrapped in swaddling clothes and uttered baby cries in a manger. This is the son of a working man and a woman who served for wages. This is he who, carried in his mother's arms, fled into Egypt, a God from a man. This is he who was clad in a scarlet robe and crowned with thorns. This is he who was called a magician, a man with a devil, a Samaritan. Behold the hands, ye Jews, that you nailed to the cross. Behold the side, ye Romans, that you pierced. See whether this is the same body that you said the disciples carried off secretly in the night.'

O my brother, that it may be yours to say these words and to be present on that day, what labour now can seem hard?

LETTER XXII

TO EUSTOCHIUM

The virgin's profession

Written A.D. 384

'HEAR, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people and thy father's house, and the king shall desire thy beauty.'¹ So in the forty-fourth Psalm God speaks to the ut secundum exemplum Abrahae exiens de terra sua et de cognatione sua relinquat Chaldaeos, qui 'quasi daemonia' interpretantur, et habitet in regione viventium, quam alibi propheta suspirat, dicens: 'Credo videre bona domini in terra viventium.' Verum non sufficit tibi exire de patria, nisi obliviscaris populi et domum patris tui et carne contempta sponsi iungaris amplexibus. 'Ne respexeris,' inquit, 'retro nec steteris in tota circa regione; in montem salvum te fac, ne forte comprehendaris.' Non expedit adprehenso aratro respicere post tergum nec de agro reverti domum nec post Christi tunicam ad tollendum aliud vestimentum tecta descendere. Grande miraculum: pater filiam cohortatur: 'Ne memineris patris.' 'Vos de patre diabolo estis et desideria patris vestri vultis facere' dicitur ad Iudaeos et alibi: 'Qui facit peccatum, de diabolo est.' Tali primum parente generati nigri sumus et post paenitentiam necdum culmine virtutis ascenso dicimus: 'Nigra sum et speciosa filia Hierusalem.'

¹ Psalm xlv. 11. (Vulg. Psalm xliv.)

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Exivi de domo infantiae meae, oblita sum patris, renascor in Christo. Quid pro hoc mercedis accipio? Sequitur: 'Et concupiscet rex decorem tuum.' Hoc ergo illud magnum est sacramentum: 'Propter hoc relinquet homo patrem et matrem et adhaerebit uxori suae et erunt ambo—in carne una?' Iam

¹ Psalm xxvii. 13.

² Genesis, xix. 17.

³ St. John, viii. 44.

⁴ 1 John, iii. 8.

⁵ Song of Solomon, i. 5. Jerome here alters the text of the Vulgate: Nigra sum sed formosa, filiae Jerusalem. Vulg. Cant., i. 4.

⁶ Ephesians, v. 31.

LETTER XXII

human soul, that, following Abraham's example, it should go out from its own land and from its kins men, and leave the Chaldaeans, that is the demons, and dwell in the country of the living, for which elsewhere the prophet sighs, saying: 'I trust to see the good things of the Lord in the land of the living.'¹ But for you it is not enough to go out from your own land, unless you forget your people and your father's house, so that despising the flesh you may be joined to your bridegroom's embrace. 'Look not behind thee,' the Scripture says, 'neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain; lest thou be consumed.'² It is not right for one who has grasped the plough to look behind him or to return home from the field, or after putting on Christ's tunic to descend from the roof for other raiment. A wonder: a father charges his daughter: 'Do not remember your father.' 'Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father it is your will to do.'³ So it was said to the Jews. And in another place. 'He that committeth sin is of the devil.'⁴ Born of such a parent first we are black by nature, and even after repentance, until we have climbed to virtue's height, we may say, 'I am black and comely, a daughter of Jerusalem.'⁵

You may say—I have gone out from my childhood's home, I have forgotten my father, I am born again in Christ. What reward do I receive for this? The context tells you—'And the king shall desire thy beauty.' This then is the great sacrament. 'For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be,'⁶ no longer, as there, 'of one flesh,' non, ut ibi, in una carne, sed spiritu. Non est sponsus tuus adrogans, non superbus: Aethiopiassam duxit uxorem. Statim ut volueris sapientiam veri audire Salomonis et ad eum veneris, confitebitur tibi cuncta, quae novit, et inducet te rex in cubiculum suum et mirum in modum colore mutato sermo tibi ille conveniet: 'Quae est ista, quae ascendit dealbata?'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Haec idcirco, mi domina Eustochium—dominam quippe debeo vocare sponsam domini mei—ut ex ipso principio lectionis agnosceres non me nunc laudes virginitatis esse dicturum, quam probasti optime, eam cum secuta es, nec enumeraturum molestias nuptiarum, quomodo uterus intumescat, infans vagiat, cruciet paelex, domus cura sollicitet, et omnia, quae putantur bona, mors extrema praecidat—habent enim et maritatae ordinem suum, honorabiles nuptias et cubile immaculatum—sed ut intellegeres tibi exeunti de Sodoma timendum esse Loth uxoris exemplum. Nulla in hoc libello adulatio—adulator quippe blandus inimicus est—nulla erit rhetorici pompa sermonis, quae te iam inter angelos statuatur et beatudine virginitatis exposita mundum subiciat pedibus tuis.

3. Nolo tibi venire superbiam de proposito, sed timorem. Onusta incedis auro, latro vitandus est. Stadium est haec vita mortalibus: hic contendimus, ut alibi coronemur. Nemo inter serpentes et scorpiones securus ingreditur. 'Inebriatus est,' but of one spirit. Your bridegroom is not arrogant, not haughty; He has married a woman of Ethiopia. As soon as you resolve to hear the wisdom of the true Solomon, and come to Him, He will avow to you all His knowledge; He will lead you as a king to His chamber; your colour will be miraculously changed, and to you the words will be fitting: 'Who is this that goeth up and hath been made white?'¹

LETTER XXII

I am writing this to you, Lady Eustochium (I am bound to call my Lord's bride 'Lady'), that from the very beginning of my discourse you may learn that I do not to-day intend to sing the praises of the virginity which you have adopted and proved to be so good. Nor shall I now reckon up the disadvantages of marriage, such as pregnancy, a crying baby, the tortures of jealousy, the cares of household management, and the cutting short by death of all its fancied blessings. Married women have their due allotted place, if they live in honourable marriage and keep their bed undefiled. My purpose in this letter is to show you that you are fleeing from Sodom and that you should take warning by Lot's wife. There is no flattery in these pages. A flatterer is a smooth-spoken enemy. Nor will there be any pomp of rhetoric in expounding the beatitude of virginity, setting you among the angels and putting the world beneath your feet.

I would have you draw from your vows not pride but fear. When you walk laden with gold you must beware of robbers. For mortals this life is a race: we run it on earth that we may receive our crown elsewhere. No man can walk secure amid serpents and scorpions. The Lord says: 'My sword hath inquit dominus, 'gladius meus in caelo,' et tu pacem arbitraris in terra, quae tribulos generat et spinas, quam serpens comedit? 'Non est nobis conluctatio adversus carnem et sanguinem, sed adversus principatus et potestates huius mundi et harum tenebrarum, adversus spiritalia nequitiae in caelestibus.' Magnis inimicorum circumdamur agminibus, hostium plena sunt omnia. Caro fragilis et cinis futura post modicum pugnat sola cum pluribus.

¹ Song of Solomon, viii. 5. (Septuagint.)

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Cum autem fuerit dissoluta et venerit princeps mundi istius et invenerit in ea nihil, tunc segura audies per prophetam: 'Non timebis a timore nocturno, a sagitta volante per diem, a negotio perambulante in tenebris, ab incursu et daemonio meridiano. Cadent a latere tuo mille et decem milia a dextris tuis, ad te autem non adpropinquabit.' Quodsi eorum te multitudo turbaverit et ad singula incitamenta vitiorum coeperis aestuare et dixerit tibi cogitatio tua: 'Quid faciemus?' respondit Heliseus: 'Noli timere, quoniam plures nobiscum sunt, quam cum illis,' et orabit et dicet: 'Domine, adaperi oculos puellae tuae et videat.' Et apertis oculis videbis igneum currum, qui te ad exemplum Heliae in astra sustollat, et tunc laeta cantabis: 'Anima nostra quasi passer erepta est de laqueo venantium: laqueus contritus est et nos liberati sumus.'

4. Quamdiu hoc fragili corpusculo continemur, quamdiu 'habemus thesaurum istum in vasis ficti-

¹ Isaiah, xxxiv. 5.

³ Psalm xci. 5.

⁵ Psalm cxxiv. 7.

² Ephesians, vi. 12.

⁴ 2 Kings, vi. 16.

⁶ 2 Corinthians, iv. 7.

LETTER XXII

drunk its fill in heaven';¹ and do you expect peace on the earth, which yields only thorns and thistles and is itself the serpent's food? 'Our wrestling is not against flesh and blood, but against the principalities, against the powers, against the world rulers of this darkness, against the spiritual hosts of wickedness in the heavenly places.'² We are surrounded by the thronging hosts of our foes, our enemies are on every side. The flesh is weak and soon it will be ashes, but to-day it fights alone against a multitude.

But when the flesh has been melted away and the Prince of yonder world has come and found in it no sin, then in safety you shall listen to the prophet's words: 'Thou shall not be afraid for the terror by night nor for the arrow that flieth by day; nor for the trouble which haunteth thee in the darkness; nor for the demon and his attacks at noonday. A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.'³ If the hosts of the enemy beset you, if the allurements of sin begin to burn within your breast, if in your troubled thoughts you ask—'What shall I do?' Elisha's words will give you an answer: 'Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.'⁴ He will pray for you and will say: 'Lord, open the eyes of thy handmaid that she may see.' And when your eyes have been opened you will see a chariot of fire which will carry you, as it carried Elijah, up to the stars; and then you will joyfully sing: 'Our soul is escaped as a sparrow out of the snare of the fowlers: the snare is broken and we are escaped.'⁵

As long as we are held down by this frail body; as long as we keep our treasure in earthen vessels,⁶

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

libus' et concupiscit spiritus adversus carnem et caro adversus spiritum, nulla est certa victoria. Adversarius noster diabolus tamquam leo rugiens aliquid devorare quaerens circuit. 'Posuisti,' ait David, 'tenebras et facta est nox. In ipsa pertransibunt omnes bestiae silvae, catuli leonum rugientes, ut rapiant et quaerant a Deo escam sibi.' Non quaerit diabolus homines infideles, non eos, qui foris sunt et quorum carnes rex in olla succendit Assyrius: de ecclesia Christi rapere festinat. Escae eius secundum Ambacum electae sunt: Iob subvertere cupit et devorato Iuda ad cribrandos apostolos expetit potestatem. Non venit salvator pacem mittere super terram, sed gladium. Cecidit Lucifer, qui mane oriebatur, et ille, qui in paradiso deliciarum nutritus est, meruit audire: 'Si alte feraris ut aquila, inde te detraham, dicit dominus.' Dixerat enim in corde suo: 'Super sidera caeli ponam sedem meam et ero similis altissimo.' Unde cotidie ad eos, qui per scalam Iacob somniant descendunt, loquitur Deus: 'Ego dixi: dii estis et filii altissimi omnes. Vos autem sicut homines moriemini et tamquam unus de principibus cadetis.' Cecidit enim primus diabolus, et cum stet Deus in synagoga deorum, in medio autem deos discernat, apostolus eis, qui dii esse desinunt, scribit: 'Ubi enim in vobis dissensiones et aemulationes, nonne homines estis et secundum hominem ambulatis?'

5. Si Paulus apostolus, vas electionis et preparatus in evangelium Christi, ob carnis aculeos et incentiva

¹ Psalm civ. 20.

² Reference doubtful, but perhaps cf. Jeremiah xxix. 22.

³ Habakkuk, i. 16.

⁴ Isaiah, xiv. 13.

⁵ Psalm lxxxii. 6.

⁶ I Corinthians, iii. 3.

LETTER XXII

and the flesh lusteth against the spirit, the spirit against the flesh: so long can there be no sure victory. Our adversary the devil goeth about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. David says: 'Thou makest darkness and it is night; wherein all the beasts of the forest do creep forth. The young lions roar after their prey and seek their meat from God.'¹ The devil does not look for unbelievers or for those who are without, whose flesh the Assyrian king roasted in a pot:² it is the Church of Christ that he hastens to ravish. According to Habakkuk: 'His dainty morsels are of the choicest.'³ He desires Job's ruin, and after devouring Judas he seeks power to put all the apostles through his sieve. The Saviour came not to send peace upon the earth but a sword. Lucifer fell, Lucifer who used to rise with the dawn; and he who was nurtured in a paradise of delight heard the well-earned sentence: 'Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord.'⁴ For he had said in his heart: 'I will exalt my throne above the stars of God and I will be like the Most High.' Wherefore God every day says to the angels as they go down the stairway which Jacob saw in his dream: 'I have said ye are Gods and all of you are children of the Most High. But ye shall die like men and fall like one of the princes.'⁵ The devil fell first, and since God stands in the congregation of the Gods and judges them in the midst, the apostle writes to those who are ceasing to be Gods: 'Whereas there is among you envying and strife, are ye not carnal and walk as men?'⁶

The apostle Paul, who was a chosen vessel set apart for the gospel of Christ, because of the spur of vitiorum reprimat corpus suum et servituti subicit, ne aliis praedicans ipse reprobus inveniatur, et tamen videt aliam legem in membris suis repugnantem legi mentis suae et captivantem se in lege peccati, si post nuditatem, ieiunia, famem, carcerem, flagella, supplicia in semet versus exclamat: 'Infelix ego homo, quis me liberabit de corpore mortis huius?' tu te putas securam esse debere? Cave, quaeso, ne quando de te dicat Deus: 'Virgo Israhel cecidit: non est, qui suscitet eam.' Audenter loquor: cum omnia Deus possit, suscitare virginem non potest post ruinam. Valet quidem liberare de poena, sed non valet coronare corruptam. Timeamus illam prophetiam, ne in nobis etiam compleatur: 'et virgines bonae deficient.' Observa, quid dicat: 'et virgines bonae deficient': quia sunt et virgines malae. 'Qui viderit,' inquit, 'mulierem ad concupiscendum iam moechatus est eam in corde suo.' Perit ergo et mente virginitas. Istae sunt virgines malae, virgines carne, non spiritu, virgines stultae, quae oleum non habentes excluduntur ab sponso.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Si autem et illae virgines virgines sunt, ob alias tamen culpas virginitate corporum non salvantur, quid fiet illis, quae prostituerunt membra Christi et mutaverunt templa Sancti Spiritus in lupanar? Ilico audient: 'Descende, sede in terra, virgo filia Babylonis, sede in terra: non est thronus filiae

¹ Romans, vii. 24.

³ Amos, viii. 13.

² Amos, v. 2.

⁴ St. Matthew, v. 28.

LETTER XXII

the flesh and the allurements of sin, keeps his body down and subjects it to slavery, lest in preaching to others he himself be found a reprobate. But still he sees that there is another law in his members fighting against the law of his will, and that he is still led captive to the law of sin. After nakedness, fasting, hunger, prison, scourging and torture, he turns back upon himself and cries: 'Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?'¹ If that is so with him, do you think that you ought to lay aside all fear? Beware, pray, lest God some day should say of you: 'The virgin of Israel is fallen and there is none to raise her up.'² I will say it boldly; though God can do all things, he cannot raise a virgin up after she has fallen. He is able to free one who has been corrupted from the penalty of her sin, but he refuses her the crown. Let us be fearful lest in our case also the prophecy be fulfilled: 'Good virgins shall faint.'³ Note that it is of good virgins he speaks, for there are bad ones as well. The Scripture says: 'Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.'⁴ Virginity therefore can be lost even by a thought. Those are the evil virgins, virgins in the flesh, but not in the spirit: foolish virgins, who, having no oil in their lamps, are shut out by the Bridegroom.

But if even those virgins are virgins, and yet are not saved by their bodily virginity when they have other faults, what shall be done to those who have prostituted the members of Christ and changed the temple of the Holy Spirit into a brothel? Straightway they shall hear the words: 'Come down and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter of Babylon; sit in the dust, for there

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Chaldaeorum; non vocaberis ultra mollis et delicata. Accipe molam, mole farinam, discoperi velamentum, denuda crura tua, transi flumina et revelabitur ignominia tua et apparebunt opprobria tua,' et hoc post Dei Filii thalamos, post oscula fratruelis et sponsi illa, de qua quondam sermo propheticus concinebat: 'Adstitit regina a dextris tuis in vestitu deaurato, circumdata varietate.' Nudabitur et posteriora eius ponentur in facie ipsius; sedebit ad aquas solitudinis et posito vase divaricabit pedes suos omni transeunti et usque ad verticem polluetur. Rectius fuerat homini subisse coniugium, ambulasse per plana, quam ad altiora tendentem in profundum inferi cadere.

Non fiat, obsecro, civitas meretrix fidelis Sion, ne post trinitatis hospitium ibi daemones saltent et sirenae nidificent et hiricii. Non solvatur fascia pectoralis, sed statim ut libido titillaverit sensum, ut blandum voluptatis incendium dulci nos calore perfuderit, erumpamus in vocem: 'Dominus auxiliator meus, non timebo, quid faciat mihi caro.' Cum paululum interior homo inter vitia et virtutes coeperit fluctuare, dicito: 'Quare tristis es, anima mea, et quare conturbas me? Spera in domino, quoniam confitebor illi, salutare vultus mei et Deus meus.' Nolo sinas cogitationem crescere; nihil in

¹ Isaiah, xlvi. 1.

² Psalm xlv. 10. Vulgate.

³ Ezekiel, xvi. 25. cf. Jeremiah, xiii. 26.

⁴ Psalm cxviii. 6.

⁵ Psalm xlii. 11.

LETTER XXII

is no throne for the daughter of the Chaldaeans; no more shalt thou be called tender and delicate. Take the millstone and grind meal; uncover thy locks, make bare thy legs, pass over the rivers; thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen.' ¹ And this, after the bride-chamber of God the Son, after the kisses of her kinsman and her bridegroom, she of whom once the word of the prophet sang: 'Upon thy right hand stood the queen in a vestment of gold wrought about with divers colours.' ² But now she shall be made naked and her skirts shall be placed upon her face: she shall sit by the waters of loneliness and lay down her pitcher; and shall open her feet to every one that passeth by and shall be polluted to the crown of her head. ³ Better had it been for her to have submitted to marriage with a man and to have walked on the plain, rather than to strain for the heights and fall into the depths of hell.

Let not the faithful city of Sion become a harlot, I pray you; let not demons dance and sirens and satyrs nest in the place that once sheltered the Trinity. Loose not the belt that confines the bosom. As soon as lust begins to tickle the senses and the soft fires of pleasure envelop us with their delightful warmth, let us break forth and cry: 'The Lord is on my side: I will not fear what the flesh can do unto me.' ⁴ When for a moment the inner man shows signs of wavering between vice and virtue, say: 'Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him who is the health of my countenance and my God.' ⁵ I would not have you allow any such thoughts to rise. Let nothing disorderly, te Babylonium, nihil confusionis adolescat. Dum parvus est hostis, interfice; nequitia elidatur in semine. Audi psalmistam loquentem: 'Filia Babylonis misera, beatus, qui retribuet tibi retributionem tuam; beatus qui tenebit et adlidet parvulos tuos ad petram.' Quia ergo impossibile est in sensum hominis non intruere notum medullarum calorem, ille laudatur, ille praedicatur beatus, qui, statim ut coeperit cogitare, interfecit cogitatus et elidit eos ad petram: petra autem est Christus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. O quotiens in heremo constitutus et in illa vasta solitudine, quae exusta solis ardoribus horridum monachis praestat habitaculum, putavi me Romanis interesse deliciis! Sedebam solus, quia amaritudine repletus eram. Horrebam sacco membra deformis, squalida cutis situm Aethiopicae carnis adduxerat. Cotidie lacrimae, cotidie gemitus et, si quando repugnantem somnus imminens oppressisset, nuda humo vix ossa haerentia conlidebam. De cibis vero et potu taceo, cum etiam languentes aqua frigida utantur et coctum aliquid accepisse luxuriae sit. Ille igitur ego, qui ob gehennae metum tali me carcere ipse damnaveram, scorpionum tantum socius et ferarum, saepe choris intereram puellarum. Pallebant ora ieiuniis et mens desiderii aestuabat nothing that is of Babylon find shelter in your breast. Slay the enemy while he is small: nip evil in the bud, and then you will not have a crop of tares. Hearken to the words of the Psalmist: 'Hapless daughter of Babylon, happy shall he be that rewardeth thee as thou hast served us. Happy shall he be that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones.'¹ It is impossible that the body's natural heat should not sometimes assail a man and kindle sensual desire; but he is praised and accounted blessed, who, when thoughts begin to rise, gives them no quarter, but dashes them straightway against the rock: 'And the Rock is Christ.'²

¹ Psalm cxxxvii. 9.

LETTER XXII

Oh, how often, when I was living in the desert, in that lonely waste, scorched by the burning sun, which affords to hermits a savage dwelling-place, how often did I fancy myself surrounded by the pleasures of Rome! I used to sit alone; for I was filled with bitterness. My unkempt limbs were covered in shapeless sackcloth; my skin through long neglect had become as rough and black as an Ethiopian's. Tears and groans were every day my portion; and if sleep ever overcame my resistance and fell upon my eyes, I bruised my restless bones against the naked earth. Of food and drink I will not speak. Hermits have nothing but cold water even when they are sick, and for them it is sinful luxury to partake of cooked dishes. But though in my fear of hell I had condemned myself to this prison-house, where my only companions were scorpions and wild beasts, I often found myself surrounded by bands of dancing girls. My face was pale with fasting; but though my limbs were cold

² 1 Corinthians, x. 4.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

in frigido corpore et ante hominem suum iam carne praemortua sola libidinum incendia bulliebant.

Ita omni auxilio destitutus ad Iesu iacebam pedes, rigabam lacrimis, crine tergebam et repugnantem carnem ebdomadarum inedia subiugabam. Non erubesco infelicitatis meae, quin potius plango non esse, quod fuerim. Memini me clamantem diem crebro iunxisse cum nocte nec prius a pectoris cessasse verberibus, quam domino rediret increpante tranquillitas. Ipsam quoque cellulam meam quasi cogitationum conscium pertimescebam et mihimet iratus et rigidus solus deserta penetrabam. Sicubi concava vallium, aspera montium, rupium praerupta cernebam, ibi meae orationi locus, illud miserrimae carnis ergastulum; et, ut mihi ipse testis est dominus, post multas lacrimas, post caelo oculos inhaerentes nonnunquam videbar mihi interesse agminibus angelorum et laetus gaudensque cantabam: 'Post te in odorem unguentorum tuorum currimus.'

8. Si autem haec sustinent illi, qui exeso corpore solis cogitationibus oppugnantur, quid patitur puella, quae deliciis fruitur? Nempe illud apostoli: 'Vivens mortua est.' Si quid itaque in me potest esse consilii, si experto creditur, hoc primum moneo, hoc obtestor, ut sponsa Christi vinum fugiat pro veneno. Haec adversus adulescentiam prima arma sunt daemonum. Non sic avaritia quatit, inflat superbia,

¹ Song of Solomon, i. 3.

² 1 Timothy, v. 6.

LETTER XXII

as ice my mind was burning with desire, and the fires of lust kept bubbling up before me when my flesh was as good as dead.

And so, when all other help failed me, I used to fling myself at Jesus' feet; I watered them with my tears, I wiped them with my hair; and if my flesh still rebelled I subdued it by weeks of fasting. I do not blush to confess my misery; nay, rather, I lament that I am not now what once I was. I remember that often I joined night to day with my wailings and ceased not from beating my breast till tranquillity returned to me at the Lord's behest. I used to dread my poor cell as though it knew my secret thoughts. Filled with stiff anger against myself, I would make my way alone into the desert; and when I came upon some hollow valley or rough mountain or precipitous cliff, there I would set up my oratory, and make that spot a place of torture for my unhappy flesh. There sometimes also—the Lord Himself is my witness—after many a tear and straining of my eyes to heaven, I felt myself in the presence of the angelic hosts and in joy and gladness would sing: 'Because of the savour of thy good ointments we will run after thee.'¹

If such are the temptations of men whose bodies are emaciated with fasting so that they have only evil thoughts to withstand, how must it fare with a girl who clings to the enjoyment of luxuries? Surely, as the apostle says: 'She is dead while yet she liveth.'² Therefore, if I may advise you and if experience gives my advice weight, I would begin with an urgent exhortation. As Christ's spouse avoid wine as you would avoid poison. Wine is the first weapon that devils use in attacking the young. The restlessness of greed, the windiness of pride, the delectat ambitio. Facile aliis caremus vitiis: hic hostis intus inclusus est. Quocumque pergimus, nobiscum portamus inimicum. Vinum et adulescentia duplex incendium voluptatis. Quid oleum flammae adicimus? Quid ardenti corpusculo fomenta ignium ministramus?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Paulus ad Timotheum: 'Iam noli,' inquit, 'aquam bibere, sed vinum modicum utere propter stomachum et frequentes tuas infirmitates.' Vide, quibus causis vini potio concedatur: vix hoc stomachi dolor et frequens meretur infirmitas. Et ne nobis forsitan de aegrotationibus blandiremur, modicum praecepit esse sumendum, medici potius consilio quam apostoli—licet et apostolus sit medicus spiritalis—et, ne Timotheus inbecillitate superatus evangelii praedicandi non posset habere discursus. Alioquin se dixisse meminerat et: 'vinum, in quo est luxuria,' et: 'bonum est homini vinum non bibere et carnem non manducare.' Noe vinum bibit et inebriatus est rudi adhuc saeculo; et tunc primum plantavit vineam: inebriare vinum forsitan nesciebat. Et ut intellegas scripturae in omnibus sacramentum—margarita quippe est sermo Dei et ex omni parte forari potest—post ebrietatem nudatio femorum subsecuta est, libido iuncta luxuriae. Prius venter et statim cetera; manducavit enim populus et bibit, 'et surrexerunt ludere.' Loth, amicus Dei, in monte

¹ 1 Timothy, v. 23.

³ Romans, xiv. 21.

² Ephesians, v. 18.

⁴ Exodus, xxxii. 6.

LETTER XXII

delights of ostentation are nothing to this. Other vices we easily forgo: this is an enemy within our walls and wherever we go we carry our foe with us. Wine and Youth—behold a double source for pleasure's fire. Why throw oil on the flame; why give fresh fuel to a wretched body that is already ablaze?

Paul says to Timothy: 'Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and for thine often infirmities.'¹ Notice the reasons why wine is allowed: it is to cure pain in the stomach and to relieve a frequent infirmity and hardly then. And lest perchance we should indulge ourselves on the ground of illness, Paul recommends that but a little wine should be taken, advising rather as a physician than as an apostle—although indeed an apostle is a spiritual physician. He was afraid that Timothy might be overcome by weakness and might not be able to complete the many journeys that the preaching of the Gospel rendered necessary. In any case, he remembered that he had said elsewhere: 'Wine, wherein is wantonness'² and 'It is good for a man neither to drink wine nor to eat flesh.'³ Noah took wine and became drunken. But living in the rude age after the Flood, when the vine first was planted, he was unaware perhaps of its inebriating qualities. And that you may see the mystery of the Scripture in all its fullness—for the word of God is a pearl and may be pierced right through—note that after his drunkenness there followed the uncovering of his thighs: lust was near neighbour to wantonness. First the belly is swollen, then the other members are roused. 'The people sat down to eat and drink and rose up to play.'⁴ Lot, the friend of God, after salvatus et de tot millibus populis solus iustus inventus inebriatur a filiabus suis; et licet putarent genus hominum defecisse et hoc facerent liberorum magis desiderio quam libidinis, tamen virum iustum sciebant hoc nisi ebrium non esse facturum; denique, quid fecerit ignoravit; et—quamquam voluntas non sit in crimine, error in culpa est—inde nascuntur Moabitae et Ammanitae, inimici Israhel qui usque ad quartam et decimam progeniem et usque in aeternum non ingrediuntur ecclesiam Dei.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Helias, cum Iezabel fugeret et sub quercu fessus iaceret, veniente ad se angelo suscitatur et dicitur ei: “Surge et manduca.” Et respexit, et ecce ad caput eius panis olyrac et vas aquae.’ Revera non poterat Deus conditum ei merum mittere et ex oleo cibos et carnes contusione mutatas? Heliseus filios prophetarum invitat ad prandium et herbis agrestibus eos alens consonum prandentium audit clamorem: ‘Mors in olla, homo Dei.’ Non iratus est cocis—lautioris enim mensae consuetudinem non habebat—sed farina desuper iacta amaritudinem dulcoravit eadem spiritus virtute, qua Moyses mutaverat Merra. Necnon et illos, qui ad se comprehendendum venerant, oculis pariter ac mente caecatos, cum Samariam nescios induxisset, qualibus epulis refici imperarit, ausculta: ‘Pone eis panem et

¹ Genesis, xix. 16, 35.

³ 1 Kings, xix. 4-7.

² Deuteronomy, xxiii. 3.

⁴ 2 Kings, iv. 40.

LETTER XXII

he had been saved upon the mountain as the one man found righteous among all those thousands, was intoxicated by his daughters.¹ They may have thought that the human race had ended and have acted rather from a desire for offspring than from love of sinful pleasure; but they knew full well that the righteous man would not abet them unless he were drunken. In fact he did not know what he was doing: but although there be no wilfulness in his sin the error of his fault remains. As the result he became the father of Moab and Ammon, Israel's enemies, who 'even to the fourteenth generation shall not enter into the congregation of the Lord for ever.'²

When Elijah in his flight from Jezebel was lying weary and alone beneath the oak tree, an angel came and raised him up and said, "Arise and eat." And he looked, and behold there was a cake and a cruse of water at his head.'³ Could not God have sent him spiced wine and dainty condiments and tenderly basted meats, if He had willed? Elisha invited the sons of the prophets to dinner, and when he gave them field herbs to eat he heard his guests cry out with one accord, 'There is death in the pot, O man of God.'⁴ He, however, was not angry with the cooks—for he was not used to very sumptuous fare—but threw some meal upon the herbs and thus sweetened their bitterness by the same spiritual virtue wherewith Moses once sweetened the waters of Marah. Again, when the men sent to seize the prophet had been blinded alike in eyes and understanding, that he might bring them unawares to Samaria, notice the food with which Elisha ordered them to be refreshed. 'Set bread and water before aquam; et manducent et bibant et remittantur ad dominum suum.' Potuit et Danihelo de regis ferculis opulentior mensa transferri, sed Ambacum messorum prandium portat, arbitrator, rusticanum. Ideoque et 'desideriorum vir' appellatus est, quia panem desiderii non manducavit et vinum concupiscentiae non bibit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Innumerabilia sunt scripturis respersa divinis, quae gulam damnent et simplices cibos praebeant; verum quia nunc non est praepositum de ieiuniis disputare et universa exsequi sui est tituli et voluminis, haec sufficiant pauca de plurimis. Alioquin ad exemplum horum potes tibi ipsa colligere, quomodo et primus de paradiso homo ventri magis oboediens quam Deo in hanc lacrimarum deictus est vallem et ipsum dominum fame Satanus temptaverit in deserto et apostolus clamitet: 'Esca ventri et venter escae, Deus autem et hunc et illa destruet,' et de luxuriosis: 'Quorum deus venter est.' Id enim colit unusquisque, quod diligit. Ex quo sollicite providendum est, ut, quos saturitas de paradiso expulit, reducat esuries.

11. Quodsi volueris respondere te nobili stirpe generatam, semper in deliciis, semper in plumis, non posse a vino et esculentioribus cibis abstinere nec his legibus vivere districtius, respondebo: 'Vive ergo lege tua, quae Dei non potes.' Non quo Deus, universitatis creator et dominus, intestinorum

¹ 2 Kings, vi. 18 ff.

² Daniel, i. 8.

³ Apoc. Bel and the Dragon, 33.

⁴ Cf. Dan. x. 11, 'a man greatly beloved' (A. and R. V.); the Septuagint has ἀνὴρ ἐπιθυμῶν; but Jerome here renders the Vulgate desideriorum vir after his own fashion.

⁵ 1 Corinthians, vi. 13.

⁶ Philippians, iii. 19.

LETTER XXII

them,' he said; 'let them eat and drink and go back to their master.'¹ Daniel too might have had rich dishes served him from the king's table,² but it was a mower's breakfast that Habakkuk brought,³ which must, methinks, have been but country fare. Therefore he was called 'the man of desires,'⁴ because he refused to eat the bread of desire or drink the wine of lustfulness.

From the Scriptures we may collect countless divine answers condemning gluttony and approving simple food. But as it is not my present purpose to discuss the question of fasting, and an exhaustive inquiry would need a volume to itself, these few remarks from the many I could make must suffice. In any case the examples I have given will enable you to understand why the first man, obeying his belly rather than God, was cast down from Paradise into this vale of tears. You will see also why Satan tempted Our Lord Himself with hunger in the wilderness, and why the apostle cries: 'Meats for the belly and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both it and them,'⁵ and why he says of the wanton: 'Whose God is their belly.'⁶ Every man worships what he loves. Wherefore we must take all care that abstinence may bring back to Paradise those whom repletion once drove out.

You may choose perhaps to answer that a girl of good family like yourself, accustomed to luxury and down pillows, cannot do without wine and tasty food and would find a stricter rule of life impossible. To that I can only say: 'Live then by your own rule, since you cannot live by God's.' Not that God, the Lord and Creator of the universe, takes any delight in the rumbling of our intestines or the emptiness of nostrorum rugitu et inanitate ventris pulmonumque delectetur ardore, sed quo aliter pudicitia tuta esse non possit. Iob Deo carus et testimonio ipsius immaculatus et simplex, audi, quid de diabolo suspicetur: 'Virtus eius in lumbis et potestas eius in umbilico.' Honesti viri mulierisque genitalia inmutatis sunt appellata nominibus. Unde et de lumbis David super sedem eius promittitur esse sessurus; et septuaginta et quinque animae introierunt Aegyptum, quae exierunt de femore Iacob, et postquam conluctante Deo latitudo femoris eius emarcuit, a liberorum opere cessavit; et qui pascha facturus est, accinctis mortificatisque lumbis facere praecipitur; et ad Iob dicit Deus: 'Accingere sicut vir lumbos tuos'; et Iohannes zona pellicia cingitur et apostoli iubentur accinctis lumbis habere in manibus evangelii lucernas. Ad Hierusalem vero, quae respersa sanguine in campo invenitur erroris, in Ezechiel dicitur: 'Non est praecisus umbilicus tuus.' Omnis igitur adversus viros diaboli virtus in lumbis est, omnis in umbilico contra feminas fortitudo.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Vis scire ita esse, ut dicimus? Accipe exempla. Sampson leone fortior, saxo durior et qui unus et nudus mille est persecutus armatos, in Dalilae mollescit amplexibus; David secundum cor domini electus et qui venturum Christum sancto saepe ore cantaverat, postquam deambulans super tectum domus suae Bersabee captus est nuditate, adulterio iunxit homicidium. Ubi et illud breviter adtende,

¹ Job, xl. 16.

² Job, xxxviii. 3.

³ Ezechiel, xvi. 4.

LETTER XXII

our stomach or the inflammation of our lungs; but because this is the only way of preserving chastity. Job was dear to God, his purity and frankness witnessed by God's own testimony; yet hear what he thinks of the devil: 'His strength is in the loins and his force is in the navel.'¹ The words are used for decency's sake, but the male and female generative organs are meant. So the descendant of David, destined according to the promise to sit upon his throne, is said to come from his loins. The seventy-five souls who entered into Egypt are said in the same way to have come from Jacob's thigh. And when after wrestling with the Lord the stoutness of his thigh shrank away Jacob begat no more children. Those who celebrate the Passover also are bidden to do so with their loins girded and mortified. God says to Job: 'Gird up thy loins like a man.'² John wears a leather girdle; and the apostles are bidden to gird their loins before they take the lamps of the Gospel. Ezekiel tells us how Jerusalem is found in the plain of wandering, all bespattered with blood, and he says: 'Thy navel has not been cut.'³ In his assaults on men therefore all the devil's strength is in the loins: against women his force is in the navel.

Would you like to be sure that it is as I say? Here are some examples. Samson was stronger than a lion and harder than rock; alone and unprotected he chased a thousand armed men; but in Dalilah's soft arms his vigour melted away. David was chosen as a man after God's heart, and his lips had often sung of the future coming of Christ the Holy One: but as he walked upon his housetop he was fascinated by Bathsheba's nakedness and added murder to adultery. Notice for a moment that even in one's own house the quod nullus sit, etiam in domo, tutus aspectus. Quapropter ad Deum paenitens loquitur: 'Tibi soli peccavi et malum coram te feci.' Rex enim alium non timebat. Salomon, per quem se cecinit ipsa sapientia, qui disputavit 'a cedro Libani usque ad hysopum, quae exit per parietem,' recessit a domino, quia amator mulierum fuit. Et ne aliquis etiam de sanguinis sibi propinquitate confideret, in illicitum Thamar sororis Amnon frater exarsit incendium.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

13. Piget dicere, quot cotidie virgines ruant, quantas de suo gremio mater perdat ecclesia, supra quot sidera superbus inimicus ponat thronum suum, quot petras excavet et habitet coluber in foraminibus earum. Videas plerasque viduas ante quam nuptas infelicem conscientiam mentita tantum veste protegere, quas nisi tumor uteri et infantum prodiderit vagitus, erecta cervice et ludentibus pedibus incedunt. Aliae vero sterilitatem praebebunt et necdum sati hominis homicidium faciunt. Nonnullae, cum se senserint concepisse de scelere, aborti venena meditantur et frequenter etiam ipsae commortuae trium criminum reae ad inferos perducuntur, homicidae sui, Christi adulterae, necdum nati filii parricidae. Istae sunt, quae solent dicere: 'Omnia munda mundis. Sufficit mihi conscientia mea. Cor mundum desiderat Deus. Cur me abstinence a cibis, quos Deus creavit ad utendum?' Et si quando

¹ Psalm li. 4.

² 1 Kings, iv. 33.

³ I.e. unmarried women who pretend to be widows.

LETTER XXII

eyes are never safe from danger. Therefore in repentance he says to the Lord: 'Against Thee, Thee only, have I sinned and done this evil in thy sight.'¹ He was a king and feared no one else but God. Solomon too, by whose lips Wisdom herself used to speak, who knew of all plants 'from the cedar of Lebanon to the hyssop that grows out of the wall,'² went back from God because he became a lover of women. And that no one may trust in kinship by blood, remember that Ammon was fired by an illicit passion for his sister Thamar.

It wearies me to tell how many virgins fall daily, what notabilities Mother Church loses from her bosom: over how many stars the proud enemy sets his throne, how many hollow rocks the serpent pierces and makes his habitation. You may see many women who have been left widows before they were ever wed,³ trying to conceal their consciousness of guilt by means of a lying garb. Unless they are betrayed by a swelling womb or by the crying of their little ones they walk abroad with tripping feet and lifted head. Some even ensure barrenness by the help of potions, murdering human beings before they are fully conceived. Others, when they find that they are with child as the result of their sin, practise abortion with drugs, and so frequently bring about their own death, taking with them to the lower world the guilt of three crimes: suicide, adultery against Christ, and child murder. Yet these are the women who will say: 'To the pure all things are pure. My conscience is enough for me. A pure heart is what God craves. Why should I refrain from the food which God made for enjoyment?' When they wish to appear bright and lepidae et festivae volunt videri et se mero ingurgitaverint, ebriati sacrilegium copulantes aiunt: 'Absit, ut ego me a Christi sanguine abstinenceam.' Et quam viderint tristem atque pallentem, miseram et monacham et Manicheam vocant, et consequenter; tali enim proposito ieiunium heresis est. Hae sunt, quae per publicum notabiliter incedunt et furtivis oculorum nutibus adolescentium gregem post se trahunt, quae semper audiunt per prophetam: 'Facies meretricis facta est tibi, impudorata es tu.' Purpura tantum in veste sit tenuis, et laxius, ut crines decidant, ligatum caput, soccus vilior et per humeros maforte volitans, strictae manicae bracchiis adhaerentes et solutis genibus fractus incessus: haec est apud illas tota virginitas. Habeant istiusmodi laudatores suos et sub virginali nomine lucrosius pereant: libenter talibus non placemus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

14. Pudet dicere, pro nefas! Triste, sed verum est: unde in ecclesias agapetarum pestis introiit? Unde sine nuptiis aliud nomen uxorum? Immo unde novum concubinarum genus? Plus inferam: unde meretrices univirae? Eadem domo, uno cubiculo, saepe uno tenentur et lectulo, et suspiciosos nos vocant, si aliquid aestimemus. Frater sororem virginem deserit, caelibem spernit virgo germanum, et, cum in eodem proposito esse se simulent, quaerunt alienorum spiritale solacium, ut domi habeant merry, they drench themselves with wine, and then joining profanity to drunkenness they cry: 'Heaven forbid that I should abstain from the blood of Christ.' When they see a woman with a pale sad face, they call her 'a miserable Manichæan': and quite logically too, for on their principles fasting is heresy. As they walk the streets they try to attract attention and with stealthy nods and winks draw after them troops of young men. Of them the prophet's words are true: 'Thou hast a whore's forehead: thou refusest to be ashamed.'¹ Let them have only a little purple in their dress, and loose bandeau on their head to leave the hair free; cheap slippers, and a Maforte² fluttering from their shoulders; sleeves fitting close to their arms, and a loose-kneed walk: there you have all their marks of virginity. Such women may have their admirers, and it may cost more to ruin them because they are called virgins. But to such virgins as these I prefer to be displeasing.

¹ Jeremiah, iii. 3.

LETTER XXII

There is another scandal of which I blush to speak; yet, though sad, it is true. From what source has this plague of 'dearly beloved sisters' found its way into the Church? Whence come these unwedded wives, these new types of concubines, nay, I will go further, these one-man harlots? They live in the same house with their male-friend; they occupy the same room and often even the same bed; and yet they call us suspicious if we think that anything is wrong. A brother leaves his virgin sister; a virgin, scorning her unmarried brother, seeks a stranger to take his place. Both alike pretend to have but one object: they are seeking spiritual consolation among ² The 'Maforte' was a sort of cape, usually of a lilac colour.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

carnale commercium. Istiusmodi homines in Proverbiis Salomonis arguit Deus dicens: 'Alligabit quis ignem in sinu et vestimenta eius non conburentur? aut ambulabit supra carbonis ignis et pedes illius non ardebunt?'

15. Explois igitur et exterminatis his, quae nolunt esse virgines, sed videri, nunc ad te mihi omnis dirigitur oratio, quae quanto prima Romanae urbis virgo nobilis esse coepisti, tanto tibi amplius laborandum est, ne et praesentibus bonis careas et futuris. Et quidem molestias nuptiarum et incerta coniugii de domestico exemplo didicisti, cum soror tua Blesilla aetate maior, sed proposito minor, post acceptum maritum septimo mense viduata est. O infelix humana condicio et futuri nescia! Et virginitatis coronam et nuptiarum perdidit voluptatem. Et quamquam secundum pudicitiae gradum teneat, tamen quas illam per momenta sustinere aestimas cruces spectantem cotidie in sorore, quod ipsa perdidit, et, cum difficilius experta careat voluptate, minorem continentiae habere mercedem? Sit tamen et illa secunda, sit gaudens: centesimus et sexagesimus fructus de uno sunt semine castitatis.

16. Nolo habeas consortia matronarum, nolo ad nobilium accedas domos, nolo te frequenter videre, quod contemnens virgo esse voluisti. Si sibi solent

¹ Proverbs, vi. 27.

LETTER XXII

strangers: but their real aim is to indulge at home in carnal intercourse. About such folk as these Solomon in Proverbs speaks the scornful words: 'Can a man take fire in his bosom and his clothes not be burned? Can one go upon hot coals and not burn his feet?'¹

Let us therefore drive off and expel from our company such women as only wish to seem and not to be virgins. Now I would direct all my words to you who, inasmuch as you have been at the beginning the first virgin of high rank at Rome, will now have to labour the more diligently so as not to lose your present and your future happiness. As for the troubles of wedded life and the uncertainties of marriage, you know of them by an example in your own family. Your sister Blesilla, superior to you in age but inferior in firmness of will, has become a widow seven months after taking a husband. How luckless is our mortal state, how ignorant of the future! She has lost both the crown of virginity and the pleasures of wedlock. Although the widowed state ranks as the second degree of chastity, can you not imagine the crosses which every moment she must bear, seeing in her sister daily that which she herself has lost? It is harder for her than for you to forgo the delights that she once knew, and yet she receives a less reward for her present continence. Still, she too may rejoice and be not afraid. The fruit that is an hundredfold and that which is sixtyfold both spring from one seed, the seed of chastity.

I would not have you consort overmuch with married women or frequent the houses of the great. I would not have you look too often on what you spurned when you desired to be a virgin. Women adplaudere mulierculae de iudicibus viris et in aliqua positis dignitate, si ad imperatoris uxorem concurrat ambitio salutantium, cur tu facias iniuriam viro tuo? Ad hominis coniugem Dei sponsa quid properas? Discce in hac parte superbiam sanctam, scito te illis esse meliorem. Neque vero earum te tantum cupio declinare congressus, quae maritorum inflantur honoribus, quas eunuchorum greges saepiunt et in quarum vestibus adtenuata in filum metalla texuntur, sed etiam eas fuge, quas viduas necessitas fecit, non quo mortem optare debuerint maritorum, sed quo datam occasionem pudicitiae libenter arripere. Nunc vero tantum veste mutata pristina non mutatur ambitio. Praecedat caveas basternarum ordo semivir et rubentibus buccis cutis farsa distenditur, ut cas putes maritos non amisisse, sed quaerere. Plena adulatoribus domus, plena convivis. Clerici ipsi, quos et magisterio esse oportuerat et timori, osculantur capita patronarum et extenta manu, ut benedicere eos putes velle, si nescias, pretium accipiunt salutandi. Illae interim, quae sacerdotes suo vident indigere praesidio, eriguntur in superbiam et, quia maritorum expertae dominatum viduitatis praeferunt libertatem, castae vocantur et nonnae et post cenam dubiam apostolos somniant.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

17. Sint tibi sociae, quas videris quod ieiunia of the world, you know, plume themselves if their husband is a judge or holds some high position. Even if an eager crowd of visitors flocks to greet the Emperor's wife, why should you insult your Husband? Why should you, who are God's bride, hasten to visit the wife of a mortal man? In this regard you must learn a holy pride; know that you are better than they. And not only do I desire you to avoid the company of those who are puffed up by their husbands' honours, who surround themselves with troops of eunuchs, and wear robes inwrought with fine threads of gold: you must also shun such women as are widows from compulsion, not choice. Not that they ought to have desired their husbands' death; but they have been unwilling to accept their opportunity for chastity. As it is, they only change their dress: their old love of show remains unchanged.

LETTER XXII

Look at them as they ride in their roomy litters with a row of eunuchs walking in front: see their red lips and their plump sleek skins: you would not think they had lost a husband, you would fancy they were looking for one. Their houses are full of flatterers, full of guests. The very clergy, whose teaching and authority ought to inspire respect, kiss these ladies on the forehead, and then stretch out their hand—you would think, if you did not know, that they were giving a benediction—to receive the fee for their visit. The women meanwhile, seeing that priests need their help, are lifted up with pride. They know by experience what a husband's rule is like, and they prefer their liberty as widows. They call themselves chaste nuns, and after a diversified dinner they dream apostles.

Let your companions be those who are pale of face

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

tenuant, quibus pallor in facie est, quas et aetas probavit et vita, quae cotidie in cordibus canunt: 'Ubi pascis? ubi cubas in meridie?' Quae ex affectu dicunt: 'Cupio dissolui et esse cum Christo.' Esto subiecta parentibus, imitare sponsum tuum. Rarus sit egressus in publicum: martyres tibi quaerantur in cubiculo tuo. Nunquam causa deerit procedendi, si semper, quando necesse est, processura sis. Moderatus cibus et nunquam venter repletus. Plurimae quippe sunt, quae, cum vino sunt sobriae, ciborum largitate sunt ebriae. Ad orationem tibi nocte surgenti non indigestio ructum faciat, sed inanitas. Crebrius lege et disce quam plurima. Tenenti codicem somnus obrepat et cadentem faciem pagina sancta suscipiat. Sint tibi cotidiana ieiunia et refectio satietatem fugiens. Nihil prodest biduo triduoque transmissio vacuum portare ventrem, si pariter obruitur, si compensatur saturitate ieiunium. Ilico mens repleta torpescit et inrigata humus spinas libidinum germinat. Si quando senseris exteriorem hominem florem adolescentiae suspirare et accepto cibo cum te in lectulo compositam dulcis libidinum pompa concusserit, arripe scutum fidei, in quo ignitae diaboli extinguuntur sagittae. 'Omnes adulterantes, quasi clibanus' corda eorum.

At tu Christi comitata vestigiis et sermonibus eius intenta dic: 'Nonne cor nostrum erat ardens in via,

¹ Song of Solomon, i. 7.

² Philippians, i. 23.

³ A visit to a martyr's shrine was often made an excuse for going abroad.

⁴ Hosea, vii. 4.

LETTER XXII

and thin with fasting, approved by their years and their conduct, who daily within their hearts sing the words: 'Tell me where thou feedest thy flock, where thou makest it to rest at noon,'¹ and lovingly say: 'I have a desire to depart and to be with Christ.'² Follow your Husband's example, and like Him be subject to your parents. Walk not often abroad, and if you wish the help of the martyrs seek it in your own chamber.³ You will never lack a reason for going out if you always go out when there is need. Take food in moderation and never overload your stomach. Many women are temperate over wine, but intemperate as to the amount of food they take. When you rise at night to pray, let any uneasiness of breath be caused not by indigestion but by an empty stomach. Read often and learn all you can. Let sleep steal upon you with a book in your hand, and let the sacred page catch your drooping head. Let your fasts be of daily occurrence, and let refreshment ever avoid satiety. It is of no avail to carry an empty stomach for two or three days if that fast is to be made up for by a clogging repletion. The mind when cloyed straightway grows sluggish and the watered ground puts forth the thorns of lust. If ever you feel that your outward being is sighing for the bloom of youth, and if, as you lie on your couch after a meal, you are shaken by the vision of lust's alluring train, then catch up the shield of faith, and it will quench the devil's fiery darts. 'They are all adulterers,' says the prophet, 'they have made their hearts like an oven.'⁴

But do you keep close to Christ's footsteps and be ever intent upon his words. Say to yourself: 'Did not our heart burn within us by the way, while cum aperiret nobis Iesus scripturas?’ et illud: ‘Ignitum eloquium tuum, et servus tuus dilexit illud.’ Difficile est humanam animam non amare et necesse est, ut in quoscumque mens nostra trahatur affectus. Carnis amor spiritus amore superatur; desiderium desiderio restinguitur. Quidquid inde minuitur, hinc crescit. Quin potius semper ingemina: ‘Super lectum meum in noctibus quaesivi, quem dilexit anima mea.’ ‘Mortificate,’ ait apostolus, ‘membra vestra super terram.’ Unde et ipse confidenter aiebat: ‘Vivo autem iam non ego, vivit autem in me Christus.’ Qui mortificavit membra sua et in imagine perambulabat, non timet dicere: “Factus sum tanquam uter in pruina”; quidquid enim in me fuit umoris, excoctum est,’ et: ‘Infirmata sunt in ieiunio genua mea,’ et: ‘Oblitus sum manducare panem meum; a voce gemitus mei adhaesit os meum carni meae.’

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

18. Esto cicada noctium. Lava per singulas noctes lectum tuum, in lacrimis stratum tuum riga. Vigila et fiere sicut passer in solitudine. Psalle spiritu, psalle et mente: ‘Benedic, anima mea, dominum et ne obliviscaris omnes retributiones eius, qui propitiatur cunctis iniquitatibus tuis, qui sanat omnes infirmitates tuas et redimit ex corruptione vitam tuam.’ Quis nostrum ex corde dicere potest: ‘Quia cinerem quasi panem manducavi et potionem meam cum fletu miscebam?’ An non flendum est,

¹ St. Luke, xxiv. 32.

² Psalm cxix. 140 (cviii. Vulg.).

³ Song of Solomon, iii. 1.

⁴ Colossians, iii. 5.

⁵ Galatians, ii. 20.

⁶ Psalm cxix. 83. A. V. has smoke for frost. Jerome quotes the Vulgate (cxviii.).

⁷ Psalm cix. 24.

⁸ Psalm cii. 5.

⁹ I.e. Be as active at night as the grasshopper is in the day-

LETTER XXII.

Jesus opened to us the Scriptures? '1 and again: 'Thy word is tried to the uttermost, and thy servant loveth it.' 2 It is hard for the human soul not to love something, and our mind of necessity must be drawn to some sort of affection. Carnal love is overcome by spiritual love: desire is quenched by desire: what is taken from the one is added to the other. Nay rather, as you lie upon your couch, say these words and repeat them continually: 'By night have I sought Him whom my soul loveth.' 3 'Mortify your members on earth,' 4 says the apostle; and because he did so himself, he could afterwards boldly say: 'I live, yet not I but Christ liveth in me.' 5 He who mortifies his members, and as he walks through this world knows it to be vanity, is not afraid to say: "I am become like a leather bottle in the frost." 6 For whatever there was in me of the moisture of lust has dried away.' And again: 'My knees are weak with fasting.' 7 'I forget to eat my bread. By reason of the voice of my groaning my bones cleave to my skin.' 8

Be thou the grasshopper of the night. 9 Wash your bed and water your couch nightly with tears. Keep vigil and be like the sparrow alone upon the housetop. Let your spirit be your harp, and let your mind join in the psalm: 'Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction.' 10 Who of us can say from our heart: 'I have eaten ashes like bread and mingled my drink with weeping'? 11 And yet ought I not to time when he is always heard. Cf. Virg. Ec. II. 13, sole sub ardenti resonant arbusta cicadis.

¹⁰ Psalm ciii. 2.

¹¹ Psalm cii. 9.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

non gemendum, cum me rursus serpens invitat ad illicitos cibos? cum de paradiso virginitatis eiectum tunicis vult vestire pellicis, quas Helias ad paradysum rediens proiecit in terram? Quid mihi et voluptati, quae in brevi perit? Quid cum hoc dulci et mortifero carmine sirenarum? Nolo illi subiacere sententiae, quae in hominem est lata damnatum: in doloribus et anxietatibus paries, mulier—lex ista non mea est—‘Et ad virum conversio tua.’ Sit conversio illius ad maritum, quae virum non habet Christum, et ad extremum ‘morte morieris’ finis iste coniugii. Meum propositum sine sexu est. Habeant nuptiae suum tempus et titulum: mihi virginitas in Maria dedicatur et Christo.

19. Dicat aliquis: ‘Et audes nuptiis detrahere, quae a domino benedictae sunt?’ Non est detrahere nuptiis, cum illis virginitas antefertur. Nemo malum bono comparat. Glorientur et nuptae, cum a virginibus sunt secundae. ‘Crescite,’ ait, ‘et multiplicamini et replete terram.’ Crescat et multiplicetur ille, qui inpleturus est terram: tuum agmen in caelis est. ‘Crescite et multiplicamini.’ Hoc expletur edictum post paradysum et nuditatem et ficus folia auspicantia pruriginem nuptiarum. Nubat et nubatur ille, qui in sudore faciei comedit panem suum, cui terra tribulos generat et spinas, cuius herba sentibus

¹ Genesis, iii. 16.

² Genesis, ii. 17.

³ Genesis, i. 28.

LETTER XXII

weep and groan when the serpent again invites me to take forbidden fruit, and when, after driving us from the Paradise of virginity, he tries to clothe us in tunics of skin, such as Elijah on his return to Paradise threw upon the ground? What have I to do with the short-lived pleasures of sense? What have I to do with the sirens' sweet and deadly songs? You must not be subject to the sentence whereby condemnation was passed upon mankind: 'In pain and in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children.'¹ Say to yourself: 'That is a Law for a married woman, but not for me.' 'And thy desire shall be to thy husband.' Say to yourself: 'Let her desire be to her husband who has not a Husband in Christ;' and at the last 'Thou shalt surely die.'² Say once more: 'Death is the end of marriage. But my vows are independent of sex. Let married women keep to their own place and title: for me virginity is consecrated in the persons of Mary and of Christ.'

Some one may say: 'Do you dare to disparage wedlock, a state which God has blessed?' It is not disparaging wedlock to prefer virginity. No one can make a comparison between two things, if one is good and the other evil. Let married women take their pride in coming next after virgins. 'Be fruitful,' God said, 'and multiply and replenish the earth.'³ Let him then be fruitful and multiply who intends to replenish the earth: but your company is in heaven. The command to increase and multiply is fulfilled after the expulsion from Paradise, after the recognition of nakedness, after the putting on of the fig leaves which augured the approach of marital desire. Let them marry and be given in marriage who eat their bread in the sweat of their brow, whose land brings forth thorns suffocatur: meum semen centena fruge fecundum est.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘Non omnes capiunt verbum Dei, sed hi quibus datum est.’ Alium eunuchum necessitas faciat, me voluntas. ‘Tempus et amplexandi et tempus abstinendi manus a complexu; tempus mittendi lapides et tempus colligendi.’ Postquam de duritia nationum generati sunt filii Abraham, coeperunt sancti lapides volvi super terram. Pertranseunt quippe mundi istius turbines et in curru Dei rotarum celeritate volvuntur. Consuant tunicas, qui inconsutam desursum tunicam perdiderunt, quos vagitus delectat infantum in ipso lucis exordio fletu lugente, quod nati sunt. Eva in paradiso virgo fuit: post pellicias tunicas initium nuptiarum. Tua regio paradisos. Serva quod nata es, et dic: ‘Revertere, anima mea, in requiem tuam.’

Et ut scias virginitatem esse naturae, nuptias post delictum: virgo nascitur caro de nuptiis in fructu reddens, quod in radice perdiderat. ‘Exiet virga de radice Iesse et flos de radice ascendet.’ Virga mater est domini, simplex, pura, sinceris nullo extrinsecus germine cohaerente et ad similitudinem Dei unione fecunda. Virgae flos Christus est dicens: ‘Ego flos campi et lilium convallium.’ Qui et in alio loco lapis praedicatur de monte sine manibus significante propheta virginem nasciturum de virgine. Manus

¹ St. Matthew, xix. 11.

³ Psalm cxvi. 7.

⁵ A pun on virga, virgo.

² Ecclesiastes, iii. 5.

⁴ Isaiah, xi. 1. (Vulgate.)

⁶ Song of Solomon, ii. 1.

⁷ Daniel, ii. 45.

LETTER XXII

and thistles, and whose crops are choked with brambles. My seed produces fruit a hundredfold.

‘Not all men can receive God’s saying, but only those to whom it is given.’¹ Some men may be eunuchs of necessity: I am one by choice. ‘There is a time to embrace, and a time to refrain from embracing. There is a time to cast away stones, and a time to gather stones together.’² Now that out of the hardness of the Gentiles sons have been born to Abraham, they begin to be holy stones rolling upon the earth. So they pass through the storms of this world and roll on with rapid wheels in God’s chariot. Let those stitch themselves coats who have lost that raiment which was woven from the top in one piece, and delight in the cries of infants lamenting that they are born as soon as they see the light of day. Eve in Paradise was a virgin: it was only after she put on a garment of skins that her married life began. Paradise is your home. Keep therefore as you were born, and say: ‘Return unto thy rest, O my soul.’³

That you may understand that virginity is natural and that marriage came after the Fall, remember that what is born of wedlock is virgin flesh and that by its fruit it renders what in its parent root it had lost. ‘There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a flower shall grow out of his roots.’⁴ That virgin⁵ rod is the mother of Our Lord, simple, pure, unsullied; drawing no germ of life from without, but like God Himself fruitful in singleness. The flower of the rod is Christ, who says: ‘I am the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valleys.’⁶ In another passage He is foretold to be ‘a stone cut out of the mountain without hands,’⁷ the prophet signifying thereby that He will be born a virgin of a quippe accipiuntur pro opere nuptiarum, ut ibi: 'Sinistra eius sub capite meo et dextera eius amplexabitur me.' In huius sensus congruit voluntatem etiam illud, quod animalia, quae a Noe bina in arcam inducuntur, immunda sunt—inpar numerus est mundus—quod Moyses et Iesus Nave nudis in sanctam terram pedibus iubentur incedere, et discipuli sine calciamentorum onere et vinculis pellium ad praedicationem evangelii destinantur; quod milites vestimentis Iesu sorte divisis caligas non habuere, quas tollerent. Nec enim potuerat habere dominus, quod prohibuerat in servis.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

20. Laudo nuptias, laudo coniugium, sed quia mihi virgines generant: lego de spinis rosas, de terra aurum, de concha margaritum. Numquid, qui arat, tota die arabit? Nonne et laboris sui fruge laetabitur? Plus honorantur nuptiae, quando, quod de illis nascitur, plus amatur. Quid invides, mater, filiae? Tuo lacte nutrita est, tuis educata visceribus in tuo adolevit sinu, tu illam sedula pietate servasti: indignaris, quod noluit militis uxor esse, sed regis? Grande tibi beneficium praestitit: socrus Dei esse coepisti.

'De virginibus,' inquit apostolus, 'praecipuum domini non habeo': cur? Quia, et ipse ut esset virgo, non fuit imperii, sed propriae voluntatis. Neque enim audiendi sunt, qui eum uxorem habuisse virgin. The word 'hands' is to be taken as meaning the marital act, as in the passage: 'His left hand is under my head and his right hand doth embrace me.'¹ It agrees also with this interpretation, that the unclean animals are led into Noah's ark in pairs, while of the clean an uneven number is taken. In the same way Moses and Joshua were bidden to take off their shoes before they walked on holy ground. When the disciples were appointed to preach the new Gospel they were told not to burden themselves with shoes or shoe-latchets. And when the soldiers cast lots for Jesus' garments they found no shoes that they could take away. For the Lord could not Himself possess what He had forbidden to His servants.

¹ Song of Solomon, ii. 6.

² 1 Corinthians, vii. 25.

LETTER XXII

I praise wedlock, I praise marriage; but it is because they produce me virgins. I gather the rose from the thorn, the gold from the earth, the pearl from the oyster. Shall the ploughman plough all day? Shall he not also enjoy the fruit of his labour? Wedlock is the more honoured when the fruit of wedlock is the more loved. Why, mother, grudge your daughter her virginity? She has been reared on your milk, she has come from your body, she has grown strong in your arms. Your watchful love has kept her safe. Are you vexed with her because she chooses to wed not a soldier but a King? She has rendered you a high service: from to-day you are the mother by marriage of God.

The apostle says: 'Concerning virgins I have no commandment of the Lord.'² Why so? Because he himself was a virgin, not by order but of his own free will. Those people must not be listened to who pretend that he had a wife. When he is discussing configunt, cum de continentia disserens et suadens perpetuam castitatem intulerit: 'Volo autem omnes esse sicut me ipsum,' et infra: 'Dico autem in-nuptis et viduis: bonum est illis, si sic permaneant, sicut et ego,' et in alio loco: 'Numquid non habemus potestatem uxores circumducendi sicut et ceteri apostoli?' Quare non habet domini de virginitate praeceptum? Quia maioris est mercis, quod non cogitur et offertur, quia, si fuisset virginitas imperata, nuptiae videbantur ablatae et durissimum erat contra naturam cogere angelorumque vitam hominibus extorquere et id quodam more damnare, quod conditum est.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

21. Alia fuit in veteri lege felicitas. 'Beatus, qui habet semen in Sion et domesticos in Hierusalem,' et maledicta sterilis, quae non pariebat, et: 'Fili tui sicut novella olivarum in circuitu mensae tuae,' et repromissio divitiarum, et: 'Non erit infirmus in tribubus tuis.' Nunc dicitur: 'Ne te lignum arbitreris aridum; habes locum pro filiis et filiabus in caelestibus sempiternum';⁶ nunc benedicuntur pauperes et Lazarus diviti praefertur in purpura; nunc, qui infirmus est, fortior est. Vacuus erat orbis, et ut de typis taceam, sola erat benedictio liberorum. Propterea et Abraham iam senex Cetturae copulatur et Iacob mandragoris redimitur

¹ 1 Corinthians, vii. 7, 8.

² 1 Corinthians, ix. 5.

³ Isaiah, xxxi. 9. LXX. version.

⁴ Psalm cxxviii. 3.

LETTER XXII

continence and recommending perpetual chastity, he says: 'I wish that all men were even as I myself.'¹ And later: 'I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, it is good for them if they abide even as I.' And in another place: 'Have we not power to lead about women even as the other apostles?'² Why then has he no commandment from the Lord concerning virginity? Because that which is freely offered is worth more than what is extorted by force, and to command virginity would have been to abrogate wedlock. It would have been a stern task to force men against their nature and to extort from them the life that angels enjoy: moreover it would have meant condemning in a way what has been ordained.

The old law had a different ideal of felicity. There it is said: 'Blessed is he who hath seed in Zion and a family in Jerusalem':³ and cursed is the barren woman who beareth not children. And again: 'Thy children shall be as olive plants around thy table.'⁴ To such men riches are promised, and we are told that 'there was not one feeble man among the tribes.'⁵ But to-day the word is: 'Think not that you are a dry tree; for instead of sons and daughters you have a place for ever in heaven.'⁶ Now the poor are blessed, and Lazarus is set before Dives in his purple. Now he who is weak has thereby the greater strength. But in the old days the world was empty of people, and, omitting those whose childlessness was but a type for the future, the only benediction possible was the gift of children. It was for this reason that Abraham in his old age married Keturah; that Jacob was hired with mandrakes; and that

¹ Psalm cv. 37.

⁶ Cf. Isaiah, lvi. 3.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

et conclusam vulvam in ecclesiae figuram Rachel pulchra conqueritur.

Paulatim vero increscente segete messor inmissus est. Virgo Helias, Helisaeus virgo, virgines multi filii prophetarum. Hieremiae dicitur: 'Et tu ne accipias uxorem.' Sanctificatus in utero captivitate propinquante uxorem prohibetur accipere. Aliis verbis id ipsud apostolus loquitur: 'Existimo ergo hoc bonum esse propter instantem necessitatem, quoniam bonum est homini sic esse.' Quae est ista necessitas, quae aufert gaudia nuptiarum? 'Tempus breviatum est; reliquum est, ut et qui habent uxores sic sint, quasi non habentes.' In proximo est Nabuchodonosor. Promovit se leo de cubili suo. Quo mihi superbissimo regi servitura coniugia? Quo parvulos, quos propheta conploret dicens: 'Adhaesit lingua lactantis ad faucem ipsius in siti. Parvuli postulaverunt panem, et, qui frangeret eis, non erat'? Inveniebatur ergo, ut diximus, in viris tantum hoc continentiae bonum et in doloribus iugiter Eva pariebat. Postquam vero virgo concepit in utero et peperit nobis puerum, 'cuius principatus in umero eius,' Deum fortem, patrem futuri saeculi, soluta maledictio est. Mors per Evam, vita per Mariam. Ideoque et ditius virginitatis donum fluxit in feminas, quia coepit a femina. Statim ut Filius Dei ingressus

¹ 1 Corinthians, vii. 26.

² 1 Corinthians, vii. 29.

³ Lamentations, iv. 4.

LETTER XXII

fair Rachel—a type of the Church—complained of the closing of her womb.

But gradually the crop grew high and the reaper was sent in. Elijah was a virgin, and so was Elisha, and so were many of the sons of the prophets. Jeremiah was told that he must not take a wife. He had been sanctified in his mother's womb, and now that the captivity was drawing near he was forbidden to marry. The apostle gives the same injunction in different words: 'I think therefore that this is good by reason of the present distress, namely that it is good for a man to be as he is.'¹ What is this distress which abrogates the joys of wedlock? The apostle tells us: 'The time is short: it remaineth that those who have wives be as though they had none.'² Now is Nebuchadnezzar again drawing nigh.' Now has the lion come out from his den. What to me is a wife, if she shall fall as a slave to some proud king? What good will little ones do, if their lot must be that which the prophet deplores: 'The tongue of the sucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst; the young children ask for bread and there was none to break it'?³ In the old days, as I have said, the virtue of continence was confined to men, and Eve continually bore children in travail. But now that a virgin has conceived in the womb a child, upon whose shoulders is government, a mighty God, Father of the age to come, the fetters of the old curse are broken. Death came through Eve: life has come through Mary. For this reason the gift of virginity has been poured most abundantly upon women, seeing that it was from a woman it began. As soon as the est super terram, novam sibi familiam instituit, ut, qui ab angelis adorabatur in caelo, haberet angelos in terris. Tunc Olofernae caput Iudith continens amputavit; tunc Aman, quod interpretatur 'iniquitas,' suo igne combustus est; tunc Iacobus et Iohannes relicto patre, rete, navicula, secuti sunt salvatorem affectum sanguinis et vincula saeculi et curam domus pariter relinquentes; tunc primum auditum est: 'Qui vult venire post me, neget se ipsum sibi et tollat crucem suam et sequatur me.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Nemo enim miles cum uxore pergit ad proelium. Discipulo ad sepulturam patris ire cupienti non permittitur. 'Vulpes foveas habent et volucres caeli nidos; filius autem hominum non habet, ubi caput reclinet'; ne forsitan contristeris, si anguste mauseris. 'Qui sine uxore est, sollicitus est ea, quae domini sunt, quomodo placeat Deo, qui autem cum uxore est, sollicitus est, quae sunt huius mundi, quomodo placeat uxori. Divisa est mulier et virgo: quae non est nupta, cogitat, quae sunt domini, ut sit sancta corpore et spiritu; nam quae nupta est, cogitat, quae sunt mundi, quomodo placeat viro.'

22. Quantas molestias habeant nuptiae et quot sollicitudinibus vinciantur, in eo libro, quem adversus Helvidium de beatae Mariae perpetua virginitate edidimus, puto breviter expressum. Nunc eadem replicare perlongum est et, si cui placet, de illo potest haurire fonticulo. Verum, ne penitus videar

¹ St. Mark, viii. 34.

² St. Matthew, viii. 20.

³ I Corinthians, vii. 32-34.

⁴ Cf. App., p. 489.

LETTER XXII

Son of God set foot on earth, He formed for Himself a new household, that as He was adored by angels in heaven He might have angels also on earth. Then chaste Judith once more cut off the head of Holofernes. Then Haman—whose name means ‘iniquity’—was once more burned in his own fire. Then James and John forsook father and net and ship, and followed the Saviour: they put behind them the love of their kin, the ties of this world, and the care of their home. Then first the words were heard: ‘Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.’¹

For no soldier takes a wife with him when he is marching into battle. Even when a disciple was fain to go and bury his father, the Lord forbade him and said: ‘Foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests: but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head.’² So you must not complain if you are scantily lodged. ‘He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord: but he that is married careth for the things of the world, how he may please his wife. There is a difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman cares for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit; but she that is married cares for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.’³

How great are the inconveniences involved in wedlock, and how many anxieties encompass it, I think I have briefly described in my treatise against Helvidius⁴ on the perpetual virginity of the blessed Mary. It would be tedious to go over the same ground again, and anyone who wishes to can draw from my little spring. But lest I should be thought omississe, nunc dicam, quod cum apostolus sine intermissione orare nos iubeat et, qui in coniugio debitum solvit, orare non possit, aut oramus semper et virgines sumus, aut orare desinimus, ut coniugio serviamus. 'Et si nupserit,' inquit, 'virgo, non peccat; tribulationem tamen carnis habebunt huiusmodi.' Et in principio libelli praefatus sum me de angustiis nuptiarum aut nihil omnino aut pauca dicturum et nunc eadem admoneo. At, si tibi placet scire, quot molestiis virgo libera, quot uxor adstricta sit, lege Tertulliani ad amicum philosophum et de virginitate alios libellos et beati Cypriani volumen egregium et papae Damasi super hac re versu prosaque composita et Ambrosii nostri quae nuper ad sororem scripsit opuscula. In quibus tanto se fudit eloquio, ut, quidquid ad laudem virginum pertinet, exquisierit, ordinavit, expresserit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

23. Nobis diverso tramite inceditur: virginitatem non efferimus, sed servamus. Nec sufficit scire, quod bonum est, nisi custodiatur adtentius, quod electum est, quia illud iudicii est, hoc laboris, et illud commune cum pluribus, hoc cum paucis. 'Qui perseveraverit,' inquit, 'usque ad finem, hic salvus erit,' et: 'Multi vocati, pauci autem electi.' Itaque obtestor te coram Deo et Christo Iesu et electis angelis eius, ne vasa templi, quae solis sacerdotibus videre concessum est, facile in publicum proferas, ne sacrarium

¹ 1 Corinthians, vii. 28.

² Not extant.

³ The De habitu virginum of Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage (fl. 258), is still extant, as are the three books De Virginibus of Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, which were written for Marcellina (pp. 187 and 485); the treatise of Damasus is now lost.

⁴ St. Matthew, xxiv. 13.

⁵ St. Matthew, xx. 16.

LETTER XXII

to have passed over this subject completely, I will say now that the apostle bids us pray without ceasing, and that the man who in the married state renders his wife her due cannot so pray. Either we pray always and are virgins; or we cease to pray that we may perform our marital service. The apostle says also: 'If a virgin marry she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh.'¹ At the outset of my book I promised that I should say little or nothing of the troubles of wedlock, and now I give you the same warning again. But if you wish to know from how many vexations a virgin is free and by how many a wife is fettered, you should read Tertullian's 'To a philosophic friend,'² and his other treatises on virginity; the blessed Cyprian's notable book; the writings of Pope Damasus in prose and verse; and the essays recently written by our own Ambrose for his sister.³ In these he has poured forth his soul with such eloquence that he has sought out, set forth, and arranged all that bears on the praise of virgins.

I must proceed by a different path. Far from trumpeting the praises of virginity, I only wish to keep it safe. To know what is good is not enough; when you have chosen it you must guard it with jealous care. The first is a matter of judgment and we share it with many: the second calls for labour and for that few care. The Lord says: 'He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved,'⁴ and 'Many are called but few are chosen.'⁵ Therefore before God and Jesus Christ and His chosen angels I adjure you to guard what you have, and not lightly to expose to the public gaze the vessels of the Lord's temple which priests alone are allowed to see. No man that is profane may look upon God's

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Dei quisquam profanus inspiciat. Ozias arcam, quam non licebat, adtingens subita morte prostratus est. Neque enim aureum vas et argenteum tam carum Deo fuit, quam templum corporis virginalis. Praecessit umbra, nunc veritas est. Tu quidem simpliciter loqueris et ignotos quoque blanda non despicias, sed aliter impudici vident oculi. Non norunt animae pulchritudinem considerare, sed corporum. Ezechias thesaurum Dei monstrat Assyriis, sed Assyrii videre, quod cuperent. Denique frequentibus bellis Iudaea convulsa vasa primum domini capta atque translata sunt et inter epulas et concubinarum greges, quia palma vitiorum est honesta polluere, Baltasar potat in fialis.

24. Ne declines aurem tuam in verba mala. Saepe indecens aliquid loquentes temptant mentis arbitrium. Si libenter audias, virgo, quod dicitur, si ad ridicula quaeque solvaris, quidquid dixeris, laudant; quidquid negaveris, negant. Facetam vocant et sanctam et in qua nullus sit dolus, 'Ecce vera Christi ancilla,' dicentes, 'ecce tota simplicitas, non ut illa horrida, turpis, rusticana, terribilis et quae ideo forsitan maritum invenire non potuit.' Naturali ducimur malo: adulatoribus nostris libenter favemus et, quamquam nos respondeamus indignos et calidus rubor ora perfundat, tamen ad laudem suam intrinsecus anima laetatur.

Sponsa Christi arca est testamenti extrinsecus et sanctuary. When Uzziah laid hands upon the ark,¹ which it was not lawful to touch, he was struck down by sudden death. And no vessel of gold or silver was ever so dear to God as the temple of a virgin's body. What was shadowed in the past presaged the reality of to-day. You indeed may speak frankly to strangers and look at them with kindly eyes: but the unchaste see differently. They cannot appreciate the beauty of the soul, they only regard the beauty of the body. Hezekiah showed God's treasure to the Assyrians, but the Assyrians only saw in it something to covet.² And so it was that Judaea was rent asunder by continual wars, and that the first things taken and carried away were the Lord's vessels. From them as drinking cups Belshazzar quaffed his wine—for the crown of vice is to pollute what is noble—surrounded by his concubines at the feast.³

¹ 2 Samuel, vi. 6, 7. ² 2 Kings, xx. 15. ³ Daniel, v. 2.

LETTER XXII

Never incline your ear to words of mischief. Men often make an improper remark, that they may test a virgin's real purpose. If you hear it with pleasure and are ready to unbend at a joke, they approve of all you say, and anything you deny they deny also. They call you both merry and good, one in whom there is no guile. 'Behold,' they cry, 'a true hand-maid of Christ: behold complete frankness. She is not like that rough, ugly country fright who probably could not find a husband just for that reason.' A natural weakness easily beguiles us. We willingly smile on such flatterers, and although we may blush and say we are unworthy of their praise, the soul within us rejoices to hear their words.

Like the ark of the covenant Christ's bride should be overlaid with gold within and without; she should intrinsicus deaurata, custos legis domini. Sicut in illa nihil aliud fuit nisi tabulae testamenti, ita et in te nullus sit extrinsecus cogitatus. Super hoc propitiatorio quasi super cherubim sedere vult dominus. Mittit discipulos suos, ut in pullo asinae curis te saecularibus solvant, ut paleas et lateres Aegypti derelinquens Moysen sequaris in heremo et terram repromissionis introeas. Nemo sit, qui prohibeat, non mater, non soror, cognata, germanus; dominus te necessariam habet. Quod si voluerint impedire, timeant flagella Pharaonis, qui populum Dei ad colendum eum nolens dimittere passus est illa, quae scripta sunt. Iesus ingressus templum omnia, quae templi non erant, proiecit. Deus enim zelotes est et non vult domum patris fieri speluncam latronum. Alioquin, ubi aera numerantur, ubi sunt caveae columbarum et simplicitas enecatur, ubi in pectore virginali saecularium negotiorum cura aestuat, statim velum templi scinditur; sponsus consurgit iratus et dicit: 'Relinquetur vobis domus vestra deserta.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Lege evangelium et vide, quomodo Maria ad pedes domini sedens Marthae studio praeferatur—et certe Martha sedulo hospitalitatis officio domino atque discipulis convivium praeparabat: 'Martha,' inquit, 'Martha, sollicita es et turbaris circa plurima; pauca autem necessaria sunt aut unum. Maria bonam partem elegit, quae non auferetur ab ea.' Esto et tu Maria, cibus praeferto doctrinam. Sorores tuae

¹ St. Matthew, xxiii. 38.

² St. Luke, x. 41.

LETTER XXII

guard the law of the Lord. As in the ark there was nothing but the tablets of the covenant, so in you let there be no thought of anything outside. On that mercy seat it is God's pleasure to sit as once He sat upon the cherubim. He sends His disciples, that as He rode upon the foal of an ass, so He may ride upon you, setting you free from the cares of this world so that you may leave the bricks and straw of Egypt and follow Him, the true Moses, through the wilderness and enter the land of promise. Let no one prevent you, neither mother nor sister nor kinswoman nor brother: the Lord hath need of you. If they seek to hinder, let them fear the scourges that fell on Pharaoh, who, because he would not let God's people go to worship Him, suffered what is written in the Scriptures. Jesus entered into the temple and cast out those things which were not of the temple. For God is jealous and He does not allow His Father's house to be made a den of robbers. In any case, where money is counted, where there are pens of doves for sale, where simplicity is slain, where a virgin's breast is disturbed by thoughts of worldly business, there at once the veil of the temple is rent and the Bridegroom rising in anger says: 'Your house is left unto you desolate.'¹

Read the Gospel, and see how Mary sitting at the feet of the Lord is preferred to the busy Martha. Martha, in her anxious and hospitable zeal, was preparing a meal for the Lord and His disciples: but Jesus said to her: 'Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things. But few things are needful or one. And Mary hath chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her.'² Be thou too Mary, and prefer the Lord's cursitent et quaerant, quomodo Christum hospitem habeant; tu insemel saeculi onere proiecto sede ad pedes domini et dic: 'Inveni eum, quem quaerebat anima mea; tenebo eum et non dimittam eum,' et ille respondeat: 'Una est columba mea, perfecta mea; una est matri suae, electa generici suae,' caelesti videlicet Hierusalem.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

25. Semper te cubiculi tui secreta custodiant, semper tecum sponsus ludat intrinsecus. Oras: loqueris ad sponsum; legis: ille tibi loquitur, et, cum te somnus oppresserit, veniet post parietem et mittet manum suam per foramen et tanget ventrem tuum, et tremefacta consurges et dices: 'Vulnerata caritatis ego sum,' et rursus ab eo audies: 'Hortus conclusus soror mea sponsa; hortus conclusus, fons signatus.' Cave ne domum exeas, ne velis videre filias regionis alienae, quamvis fratres habeas patriarchas et Israhel parente laeteris: Dina egressa corrumpitur. Nolo te sponsum quaerere per plateas, nolo circumire angulos civitatis. Dicas licet: 'Surgam et circumibo in civitate, in foro et in plateis et quaeram quem dilexit anima mea,' et interrogas: 'Nunquid, quem dilexit anima mea, vidistis?' nemo tibi respondere dignabitur. Sponsus in plateis non potest inveniri—'Arta et angusta via est, quae ducit ad vitam'—denique sequitur: 'Quaesivi eum et non inveni eum, vocavi eum et non respondit mihi.'

¹ Song of Solomon, iii. 4.

³ I.e. to pull the latch open.

⁵ Song of Solomon, iv. 12.

⁷ Song of Solomon, iii. 2.

² Song of Solomon, vi. 9.

⁴ Song of Solomon, v. 8.

⁶ Genesis, xxxiv. 1.

⁸ St. Matthew, vii. 14.

LETTER XXII

teaching to food. Let your sisters run to and fro, and seek how they may entertain Christ as a guest. Do you once for all cast away the burden of this world and sit at the Lord's feet, and say: 'I have found him whom my soul sought; I will hold him, I will not let him go.'¹ And He will answer: 'My dove, my undefiled is but one; she is the only one of her mother, she is the choice one of her that bare her.'² And that mother is the Jerusalem that is in heaven.

Let the seclusion of your own chamber ever guard you; ever let the Bridegroom sport with you within. If you pray, you are speaking to your Spouse: if you read, He is speaking to you. When sleep falls on you, He will come behind the wall and will put His hand through the hole in the door³ and will touch your flesh. And you will awake and rise up and cry: 'I am sick with love.'⁴ And you will hear Him answer: 'A garden inclosed is my sister, my spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed.'⁵ Go not from home nor visit the daughters of a strange land, though you have patriarchs for brothers and rejoice in Israel as your father. Dinah went out and was seduced.⁶ I would not have you seek the Bridegroom in the public squares; I would not have you go about the corners of the city. You may say: 'I will rise now and go about the city: in the streets and in the broad ways I will seek Him whom my soul loveth.'⁷ But though you ask the watchmen: 'Saw ye Him whom my soul loveth?' no one will deign to answer you. The Bridegroom cannot be found in the city squares. 'Strait and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life.'⁸ And the Song goes on: 'I sought him but I could not find him: I called him but he gave me no answer.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Atque utinam non invenisse sufficiat. Vulneraberis, nudaberis et gemebunda narrabis: 'Invenrunt me custodes, qui circumeunt civitatem; percusserunt me, vulneraverunt me, tulerunt theristrum meum a me.' Si autem hoc exiens patitur illa, quae dixerat: 'Ego dormio et cor meum vigilat,' et: 'Fasciculus stactae fratruelis meus mihi, in medio uberum meorum commorabitur,' quid de nobis fiet, quae adhuc adulescentulae sumus, quae sponsa intrante cum sponso remanemus extrinsecus? Zelotypus est Iesus, non vult ab aliis videri faciem tuam. Excuses licet atque causeris: 'Adducto velamine ora contexi, te quaesivi, tibi dixi: "Adnuntia mihi, quem dilexit anima mea, ubi pascis, ubi cubas in meridie, nequando fiam sicut cooperta super greges sodalium tuorum,"' indignabitur, timebit, et dicet: 'Si non cognoveris temet ipsam, o pulchra in mulieribus, egredere tu in vestigiis gregum et pasce haedos tuos in tabernaculis pastorum.' 'Sis,' inquit, 'pulchra et inter omnes mulieres species tua diligatur ab sponso, nisi te cognoveris et omni custodia servaveris cor tuum, nisi oculos iuvenum fugeris, egredieris de thalamo meo et pasces haedos, qui staturi sunt a sinistris.'

26. Itaque, mi Eustochia, filia, domina, conserva, germana—aliud enim aetatis, aliud meriti, illud religionis, hoc caritatis est nomen—audi Esaiam

¹ Song of Solomon, v. 7.

³ Song of Solomon, i. 7.

² Song of Solomon, i. 13.

⁴ Song of Solomon, i. 8.

LETTER XXII

Would that failure to find Him were all. You will be wounded and stripped, you will lament and say: 'The watchmen who go about the city found me: they smote me, they wounded me, they took away my veil from me.'¹ If this was the punishment that going forth brought to her who said: 'I sleep but my heart waketh,' and 'A bundle of myrrh is my cousin unto me; he shall lie all night between my breasts';² if she, I say, suffered so much because she went abroad, what shall be done to us who are but young girls, to us who, when the bride goes in with the Bridegroom, still remain without? Jesus is jealous: He does not wish others to see your face. You may excuse yourself and say: 'I have drawn my veil, I have covered my face, I have sought Thee there, and I have said: "Tell me, O Thou whom my soul loveth, where Thou feedest Thy flock, where Thou makest it to rest at noon. For why should I be as one that is veiled beside the flocks of Thy companions?"'³ But He will be wroth and angry, and He will say: 'If thou know not thyself, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock and feed thy goats beside the shepherd's tents.'⁴ 'Though you be fair,' says He, 'and though of all faces yours be dearest to the Bridegroom, yet unless you know yourself and keep your heart with all diligence and avoid the eyes of lovers, you will be turned from My bridal-chamber to feed the goats which shall be set on the left hand.'

Therefore, my Eustochium, daughter, lady, fellow-servant, sister—for the first name suits your age, the second your rank, the third our religion, and the last our affection—hear the words of Isaiah: 'Come, loquentem: 'Populus meus, intra in cubicula tua, claude ostium tuum, abscondere pusillum quantum, donec pertranseat ira domini.' Foris vagentur virgines stultae, tu intrinsecus esto cum sponso, quia, si ostium cluseris et secundum evangelii praeceptum in occulto oraveris patrem tuum, veniet et pulsabit et dicet: 'Ecce ego sto ante ianuam et pulso. Si quis mihi aperuerit, intrabo et cenabo cum eo et ipse mecum,' et tu statim sollicita respondebis: 'Vox fratruelis mei pulsantis: aperi mihi, soror mea, proxima mea, columba mea, perfecta mea.' Nec est, quod dicas: 'Dispoliavi me tunicam meam, quomodo induar eam? Lavi pedes meos, quomodo inquinabo eos?' Ilico surge et aperi, ne te remorante pertranseat et postea conqueraris dicens: 'Aperui fratrueli meo, fratruelis meus pertransiit.' Quid enim necesse est, ut cordis tui ostia clausa sint sponso? Aperiantur Christo, claudantur diabolo secundum illud: 'Si spiritus potestatem habentis ascenderit super te, locum ne dederis ei.' Danihel in cenaculo suo—neque enim manere poterat in humili—fenestras ad Hierusalem apertas habuit: te tu habeto fenestras apertas, sed unde lumen introeat, unde videas civitatem Dei. Ne aperias illas fenestras, de quibus dicitur: 'Mors intravit per fenestras vestras.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

27. Illud quoque tibi vitandum est cautius, ne vanae gloriae ardore capiaris. 'Quomodo,' inquit Iesus, 'potestis credere gloriam ab hominibus accipientes?' Vide, quale malum sit, quod qui

¹ Isaiah, xxvi. 20.

³ Song of Solomon, v. 2, 3.

⁵ Ecclesiastes, x. 4.

² Revelation, iii. 20.

⁴ Song of Solomon, v. 6.

⁶ Jeremiah, ix. 21.

LETTER XXII

my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation of the Lord be over-past.'¹ Let foolish virgins roam abroad; do you for your part stay within with the Bridegroom. If you shut your door, and according to the Gospel precept pray to your Father in secret, He will come and knock, and He will say: 'Behold I stand at the door and knock: if any man open, I will come in to him and will sup with him, and he with me.'² And you forthwith will eagerly make reply: 'It is the voice of my beloved that knocketh, saying "Open to me, my sister, my nearest, my dove, my undefiled."' You must not say: 'I have put off my coat; how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet; how shall I defile them?'³ Arise straightway and open: lest, if you linger, He pass on and leave you mournfully to cry: 'I opened to my cousin, but my cousin was gone.'⁴ Why need the door of your heart be closed to the Bridegroom? Let it be open to Christ but closed to the devil, according to the saying: 'If the spirit of him who hath power rise up against thee, leave not thy place.'⁵ Daniel when he could no longer remain below withdrew to an upper room, but he kept its windows open towards Jerusalem. Do you too keep your windows open on the side where light may enter and you may see the eye of the Lord. Open not those other windows of which it is said: 'By our windows death came in.'⁶

You must also avoid with especial care the traps that are set for you by a desire for vainglory. Jesus says: 'How can ye believe, which receive glory one from another?'⁷ Consider then how evil that thing

⁷ St. John, v. 44.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

habuerit, non potest credere. Nos vero dicamus: 'Quoniam gloriatio mea es tu,' et: 'Qui gloriatur, in domino gloriatur,' et: 'Si adhuc hominibus placerem, Christi servus non essem,' et: 'Mihi absit gloriari, nisi in cruce domini mei Iesu Christi, per quem mihi mundus crucifixus est et ego mundo,' et illud: 'In te laudabimur tota die,' et: 'In domino laudabitur anima mea.'

Cum facis elemosynam, Deus solus videat. Cum ieiunas, laeta sit facies tua. Vestis nec satis munda nec sordida et nulla diversitate notabilis, ne ad te obvia praetereuntium turba consistat et digito demonstreris. Frater est mortuus, sororis est corpusculum deducendum: cave ne, dum hoc saepius facis, ipsa moriaris. Ne satis religiosa velis videri nec plus humilis, quam necesse est, ne gloriam fugiendo quaeras. Plures enim paupertatis, misericordiae atque ieiunii arbitros declinantes in hoc ipso placere cupiunt, quod placere contemnunt; et mirum in modum laus, dum vitatur, adpetitur. Ceteris perturbationibus, quibus mens hominis gaudet, aegrescit, sperat et metuit, plures invenio extraneos; hoc vitio pauci admodum sunt qui caruerint, et ille est optimus, qui quasi in pulchro corpore rara naevorum sorde respergitur.

Neque vero moneo, ne de divitiis glorieris, ne de generis nobilitate te iactes, ne te ceteris praeferas: scio humilitatem tuam, scio te ex affectu dicere: 'Domine, non est exaltatum cor meum neque elati

¹ 1 Corinthians, i. 31.

³ Galatians, vi. 14.

² Galatians, i. 10.

⁴ Psalm xliv. 8.

LETTER XXII

must be whose presence forbids belief. Let us rather say: 'Thou art my glorying,' and, 'He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord,'¹ and, 'If I yet pleased men I should not be the servant of Christ,'² and, 'Far be it from me to glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom the world hath been crucified unto me and I unto the world,'³ and again, 'In God we boast all the day long; my soul shall make her boast in the Lord.'⁴

When you are giving alms, let God alone see you. When you are fasting, keep a cheerful face. Let your dress be neither elegant nor slovenly, and let it not be noticeable by any strangeness that might attract the notice of passers-by and make people point their fingers at you. If a brother dies or the body of a beloved sister has to be carried to burial, take care that you do not attend such funerals too often, or you may die yourself. Do not try to seem very devout nor more humble than is necessary. It is possible to seek glory by avoiding it. Many men who screen from view their poverty, charity, and fasting, reveal their desire for admiration by the very fact that they spurn it, and, strangely enough, seek praise while avoiding it. From the other perturbations of the mind, from exultation, despondency, hope and fear I find many free; but desire for praise is a fault which few escape, and that man is best whose character, like a fair skin, is disfigured by the fewest blemishes.

I am not going to warn you against boasting of your wealth, or priding yourself on your birth, or setting yourself up as superior to others. I know your humility. I know that you can say from your heart: 'Lord, my heart is not haughty nor my eyes sunt oculi mei.' Novi et apud te et apud matrem tuam superbiam, per quam diabolus cecidit, locum penitus non habere. Unde et super ea scribere supersedi. Stultissimum quippe est docere, quod noverit ille, quem doceas. Sed ne hoc ipsud tibi iactantiam generet, quod saeculi iactantiam contempsisti, ne cogitatio tacita subrepat, ut quia in auratis vestibus placere desisti, placere coneris in sordibus et, quando in conventu fratrum veneris vel sororum, humili sedeas scabello, te causeris indignam, vocem ex industria quasi confecta ieiuniis tenues et deficientis imitata gressum umeris innitaris alterius. Sunt quippe nonnullae exterminantes facies suas, ut pareant hominibus ieiunare; quae, statim ut aliquem viderint, ingemescunt, demittunt supercilium et operta facie vix unum oculum liberant ad videndum; vestis pulla, cingulum saccum et sordidis manibus pedibusque; venter solus, quia videri non potest, aestuat cibo; his cotidie psalmus ille cantatur: 'Deus dissipavit ossa hominum sibi placentium.' Aliae virili habitu, veste mutata, erubescunt feminae esse, quod natae sunt, crinem amputant et impudenter erigunt facies eunuchinas. Sunt, quae ciliis vestiuntur et cucullis fabrefactis, ut ad infantiam redeant, imitantur noctuas et bubones.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

28. Sed ne tantum videar disputare de feminis,

¹ Psalm cxxxi. 1.

² Psalm liii. 5. (Roman Psalter.)

LETTER XXII

lofty.'¹ I know that with you, as with your mother, the pride through which the devil fell finds no lodging. Therefore it would be superfluous to write to you on this subject: for indeed it is the height of folly to teach a pupil what he already knows. But beware lest your contempt for the world's boastfulness breed in you a boastfulness of another kind. Harbour not the secret thought that as you have ceased to please in cloth of gold you may now try to please in homespun. When you come into a gathering of brethren and sisters, do not sit in too lowly a place or pretend that you are unworthy of a footstool. Do not lower your voice on purpose, as though you were worn out by fasting; nor yet lean upon a friend's shoulder imitating the gait of one who is completely exhausted. Some women indeed actually disfigure themselves, so as to make it obvious that they have been fasting. As soon as they catch sight of anyone they drop their eyes and begin sobbing, covering up the face, all but a glimpse of one eye, which they just keep free to watch the effect they make. They wear a black dress and a girdle of sackcloth; their feet and hands are unwashed: their stomach alone—because it cannot be seen—is busy churning food. Of these the psalm is sung every day: 'The Lord will scatter the bones of them that please themselves.'² Other women change their garb and put on men's dress; they cut their hair short and lift up their chins in shameless fashion; they blush to be what they were born to be—women, and prefer to look like eunuchs. Others again dress themselves in goat's hair, and returning to their childhood's fashions put on a baby's hood and make themselves look like so many owls.

Women are not the only persons of whom I must viros quoque fuge, quos videris catenatos, quibus feminei contra apostolum crines, hircorum barba, nigrum pallium et nudi in patientiam frigoris pedes. Haec omnia argumenta sunt diaboli. Talem olim Antimum, talem nuper Sofronium Roma congemuit. Qui postquam nobilium introierint domos et deceperint mulierculas 'oneratas peccatis, semper discentes et numquam ad scientiam veritatis pervenientes,' tristitiam simulant et quasi longa ieiunia furtivis noctium cibis protrahunt; pudet reliqua dicere, ne videar invehi potius quam monere.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Sunt alii—de mei ordinis hominibus loquor—qui ideo ad presbyterium et diaconatum ambiunt, ut mulieres licentius videant. Omnis his cura de vestibus, si bene oleant, si pes laxa pelle non folleat. Crines calamistri vestigio rotantur, digiti de anulis radiant et, ne plantas umidior via spargat, vix imprimunt summa vestigia. Tales cum videris, sponso magis aestimato quam clericos. Quidam in hoc omne studium vitamque posuerunt, ut matronarum nomina, domos moresque cognoscant.

E quibus unum, qui huius artis est princeps, breviter strictimque describam, quo facilius magistro cognito discipulos recognoscas. Cum sole festinus exsurgit; salutandi ei ordo disponitur; viarum

¹ 2 Corinthians, xi. 14.

² Unknown.

³ 2 Timothy, iii. 6.

LETTER XXII

warn you. Avoid those men also whom you see loaded with chains and wearing their hair long like a woman's, in contravention of the apostle's precept;¹ and with all this a shaggy goat's beard, a black cloak, and bare feet braving the cold. All these things are plain signs of the devil. Antimus² some time ago was the sort of man I mean, and just lately Sophronius² has been another for Rome to groan over. Such men as these make their way into noble houses, and deceive 'silly women laden with sins, ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.'³ They put on a mournful face and pretend to make long fasts, which for them are rendered easy by secret nocturnal banquets. I am ashamed to say more, lest I should seem to be using the language of invective rather than of admonition.

There are other men—I speak of those of my own order—who only seek the office of presbyter and deacon that they may be able to visit women freely. These fellows think of nothing but dress; they must be nicely scented, and their shoes must fit without a crease. Their hair is curled and still shows traces of the tongs; their fingers glisten with rings; and if there is wet on the road they walk across on tiptoe so as not to splash their feet. When you see these gentry, think of them rather as potential bridegrooms than as clergymen. Indeed some of them devote their whole life and all their energies to finding out about the names, the households, and the characters of married ladies.

I will give you a brief and summary portrait of the chief practitioner in this line, that from the master's likeness you may recognize his disciples. He rises with the sun in haste; the order of his morning calls conpendia requiruntur, et paene usque ad cubilia dormientium senex inportunus ingreditur. Si pulvillum viderit, si mantele elegans, si aliquid domesticae suppellectilis, laudat, miratur, adtrectat, et se his indigere conquerens non tam inpetrat quam extorquet, quia singulae metuunt veredarium urbis offendere. Huic inimica castitas, inimica ieiunia; prandium nidoribus probat et alitem quae vulgo ^{ΥΕΡΩΝ} 'ποππυζων' nominatur. Os barbarum et procax et in convicia semper armatum. Quocumque te verteris, primus in facie est. Quidquid novum insonuerit, aut auctor aut exaggerator est famae. Equi per horarum momenta mutantur tam nitidi, tam feroces, ut illum Thracii regis putes esse germanum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

29. Variis callidus hostis pugnat insidiis. Sapientior erat coluber omnibus bestiis, quas fecerat dominus Deus super terram. Unde et apostolus: 'Non,' inquit, 'ignoramus eius astutias.' Nec affectatae sordes nec exquisitae munditiae conveniunt Christianis. Si quid ignoras, si quid de scripturis dubitas, interroga eum, quem vita commendat, excusat aetas, fama non reprobatur, qui possit dicere: 'Desponsavi enim vos uni viro, virginem castam exhibere Christo.' Aut si non est, qui possit exponere, melius est aliquid nescire securam, quam cum periculo discere. Memento, quoniam in medio

¹ Cf. Virgil, Aeneid, I. 752. Diomede was a great horseman.

² Genesis, iii. 1.

³ 2 Corinthians, ii. 11.

⁴ 2 Corinthians, xi. 2.

LETTER XXII

is duly arranged; he takes short cuts, and importunately thrusts his old head almost into the bedchambers of ladies still asleep. If he sees a cushion, or an elegant table cover, or indeed any article of furniture that he fancies, he begins praising and admiring it and takes it in his hand, and so, lamenting that he has nothing like this, he begs or rather extorts it from the owner, as all the women are afraid to offend the town gossip. He hates chastity and he hates fasting: what he likes is a savoury lunch—say a plump young bird such as is commonly called a cheeper. He has a rough and saucy tongue always well equipped with abusive words. Wherever you betake yourself, he is the first man you see. Whatever news is noised abroad, he either originates the story or else exaggerates it. He changes horses every hour; and his nags are so sleek and spirited that you might take him to be own brother to Diomedes of Thrace.¹

Our cunning enemy fights against us with many varied stratagems. 'The serpent was more subtile than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made.'² So the apostle says: 'We are not ignorant of his devices.'³ Neither an affected shabbiness nor an elaborate elegance of attire becomes a Christian. If you feel ignorant or have any doubt about some passage in Scripture, ask advice from some man whose life commends him, whose age puts him above suspicion, and whose reputation stands high with all; one who can say: 'I have espoused you to one husband, a chaste virgin to present to Christ.'⁴ If there is no one at hand able to resolve your difficulty, remember that peaceful ignorance is better than dangerous instruclaqueorum ambulas et multae veteranae virgines castitatis indubitata in ipso mortis limine coronam perdidere de manibus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Si quae ancillae sunt comites propositi tui, ne erigaris adversus eas, ne inferis ut domina. Unum sponsum habere coepistis, simul psallitis Christo, simul corpus accipitis, cur mensa diversa sit? Provocentur et aliae. Honor virginum sit invitatio ceterarum. Quodsi aliquam senseris infirmiore in fide, suscipe, consolare, blandire et pudicitiam illius fac lucrum tuum. Si qua simulat fugiens servitatem, huic aperte apostolum lege: 'Melius est nubere quam uri.'

Eas autem virgines viduasque, quae otiosae et curiosae domus circumeunt matronarum, quae rubore frontis adtrito parasitos vicere mimorum. quasi quasdam pestes abice. 'Corrumpunt mores bonos confabulationes pessimae.' Nulla illis nisi ventris cura est et quae ventri proxima. Istiusmodi hortari solent et dicere: 'Mi catella, rebus tuis utere et vive, dum vivis,' et: 'Numquid filiis tuis servas?' Vinosae atque lascivae quidvis mali insinuant, ac ferreas quoque mentes ad delicias molliunt, et 'cum luxuriatae fuerint in Christo, nubere volunt habentes damnationem, quia primam fidem inritam fecerunt.'

¹ 1 Corinthians, vii. 9.

² 1 Corinthians, xv. 33.

³ 1 Timothy, v. 11.

LETTER XXII

tion. You walk in the midst of snares, and many veteran virgins, whose chastity never was doubted, on the very threshold of death have let the crown slip from their hands.

If any of your handmaids have taken the vow with you, do not lift yourself up against them or pride yourself as being the mistress. From now you all have one Bridegroom; you sing psalms together; together you receive the Body of Christ. Why then should you separate at meals? You must challenge other mistresses: let the respect paid to your virgins be an invitation for the rest to do the same. If you find one of your girls weak in faith, take her aside, comfort and caress her, make her chastity your treasure. But if one merely pretends to have a vocation in order to escape from service, read aloud to her the apostle's words: 'It is better to marry than to burn.'¹

Cast from you like the plague those idle and inquisitive virgins and widows who go about to married women's houses and surpass the very parasites in a play by their unblushing effrontery. 'Evil communications corrupt good manners,'² and these women care for nothing but their belly and its adjacent members. Creatures of this sort will give you wheedling advice: 'My pretty pet, make the best of what you have and live your own life. What is the use of saving for your children?' Flown with wine and wantonness, they instil all sorts of mischief into a girl's mind, and tempt even the firmest soul with the soft delights of pleasure. 'And when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ they will marry, having condemnation because they have rejected their first faith.'³

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Nec tibi diserta multum velis videri aut lyricis festiva carminibus metro ludere. Non delumbem matronarum salivam delicata secteris, quae nunc strictis dentibus, nunc labiis dissolutis, balbutientem linguam in dimidiata verba moderantur, rusticum putantes omne, quod nascitur. Adeo illis adulterium etiam linguae placet. 'Quae enim communicatio luci ad tenebras, qui consensus Christo et Belial?' Quid facit cum psalterio Horatius? cum evangelii Maro? cum apostolo Cicero? Nonne scandalizatur frater, si te viderit in idolio recumbentem? Et licet 'omnia munda mundis et nihil reiciendum sit, quod cum gratiarum actione percipitur,' tamen simul bibere non debemus calicem Christi et calicem daemoniorum. Referam tibi meae infelicitatis historiam.

30. Cum ante annos plurimos domo, parentibus, sorore, cognatis et, quod his difficilius est, consuetudine lautioris cibi propter caelorum me regna castrassem, et Hierosolymam militaturus pergerem, bybliotheca, quam mihi Romae summo studio ac labore confeceram, carere non poteram. Itaque miser ego lecturus Tullium ieiunabam; post noctium crebras vigiliis, post lacrimas, quas mihi praeteritorum recordatio peccatorum ex imis visceribus eruebat, Plautus sumebatur in manibus. Si quando in memet reversus prophetam legere coepissem, sermo horrebat incultus, et quia lumen caecis oculis non videbam, non oculorum putabam culpam esse, sed solis. Dum

¹ 2 Corinthians, vi. 14.

LETTER XXII

Do not seek to appear over-eloquent or compose trifling songs in verse. Do not in false refinement follow the sickly taste of those married ladies who habitually speak with a lisp and clip all their words, now pressing their teeth together, and now opening their lips wide, fancying that anything produced naturally is countrified. So much do they like adultery even of the tongue. 'What communion hath light with darkness? What concord hath Christ with Belial?'¹ What has Horace to do with the Psalter, Virgil with the Gospels and Cicero with Paul? Is not a brother made to stumble if he sees you sitting at table in an idol's temple? Although unto the pure all things are pure and nothing is to be refused if it be received with thanksgiving, still we ought not to drink the cup of Christ and the cup of devils at the same time. I will tell you the story of my own unhappy experience.

Many years ago for the sake of the kingdom of heaven I cut myself off from home, parents, sister, relations, and, what was harder, from the dainty food to which I had been used. But even when I was on my way to Jerusalem to fight the good fight there, I could not bring myself to forgo the library which with great care and labour I had got together at Rome. And so, miserable man that I was, I would fast, only to read Cicero afterwards. I would spend long nights in vigil, I would shed bitter tears called from my inmost heart by the remembrance of my past sins; and then I would take up Plautus again. Whenever I returned to my right senses and began to read the prophets, their language seemed harsh and barbarous. With my blind eyes I could not see the light: but I attributed the fault not to my eyes ita me antiquus serpens inluderet, in media ferme quadragesima medullis infusa febris corpus invasit exhaustum et sine ulla requie—quod dictu quoque incredibile sit—sic infelicia membra depasta est, ut ossibus vix haererem.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Interim parabantur exsequiae et vitalis animae calor toto frigente iam corpore in solo tam tepente pectusculo palpitabat, cum subito raptus in spiritu ad tribunal iudicis pertrahor, ubi tantum luminis et tantum erat ex circumstantium claritate fulgoris, ut proiectus in terram sursum aspicere non auderem. Interrogatus condicionem Christianum me esse respondi: et ille, qui residebat, ‘Mentiris,’ ait, ‘Ciceronianus es, non Christianus; “ubi thesaurus tuus, ibi et cor tuum.”’ Ilico obmutui et inter verbera—nam caedi me iusserat—conscientiae magis igne torquebar illum mecum versiculum reputans: ‘In inferno autem quis confitebitur tibi?’ Clamare tamen coepi et heulans dicere: ‘Miserere mei, domine, miserere mei.’ Haec vox inter flagella resonabat. Tandem ad praesidentibus genua provoluti, qui adstiterant, precabantur, ut veniam tribueret adulescentiae, ut errori locum patientiae commodaret exacturus deinde cruciatum, si gentilium but to the sun. While the old serpent was thus mocking me, about the middle of Lent a fever attacked my weakened body and spread through my inmost veins. It may sound incredible, but the ravages it wrought on my unhappy frame were so persistent that at last my bones scarcely held together.

¹ St. Matthew, vi. 21.

LETTER XXII

Meantime preparations were made for my funeral: my whole body grew gradually cold, and life's vital warmth only lingered faintly in my poor throbbing breast. Suddenly I was caught up in the spirit and dragged before the Judge's judgment seat: and here the light was so dazzling, and the brightness shining from those who stood around so radiant, that I flung myself upon the ground and did not dare to look up. I was asked to state my condition and replied that I was a Christian. But He who presided said: 'Thou liest; thou art a Ciceronian, not a Christian. "For where thy treasure is there will thy heart be also."' ¹ Straightway I became dumb, and amid the strokes of the whip—for He had ordered me to be scourged—I was even more bitterly tortured by the fire of conscience, considering with myself the verse: 'In the grave who shall give thee thanks?' ² Yet for all that I began to cry out and to bewail myself, saying: 'Have mercy upon me, O Lord, have mercy upon me': and even amid the noise of the lash my voice made itself heard. At last the bystanders fell at the knees of Him who presided, and prayed Him to pardon my youth and give me opportunity to repent of my error, on the understanding that the extreme of torture should be inflicted on me if ever I read again the works of ² Psalm vi. 5.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

litterarum libros aliquando legissem. Ego, qui tanto constrictus articulo vellem etiam maiora promittere, deiurare coepi et nomen eius obtestans dicere: 'Domine, si umquam habuero codices saeculares, si legero, te negavi.'

In haec sacramenti verba dimissus revertor ad superos et mirantibus omnibus oculos aperio tanto lacrimarum imbri perfusos, ut etiam incredulis fidem facerent ex dolore. Nec vero sopor ille fuerat aut vana somnia, quibus saepe deludimur. Teste est tribunal, ante quod iacui, iudicium teste est, quod timui—ita mihi numquam contingat talem incidere quaestionem!—liventes habuisse me scapulas, plagas sensitse post somnum et tanto dehinc studio divina legisse, quanto mortalia ante non legeram.

31. Avaritiae quoque tibi vitandum est malum, non quo aliena non adpetas—hoc enim et leges publicae puniunt,—sed quo tua, quae sunt aliena, non serves. 'Si in alieno,' inquit, 'fideles non fuistis, quod vestrum est, quis dabit vobis?' Aliena nobis auri argentique sunt pondera, nostra possessio spiritalis est, de qua alibi dicitur: 'Redemptio viri propriae divitiae.' 'Nemo potest duobus dominis servire; aut enim unum odiet et alterum amabit, aut unum patietur et alterum contemnet. Non potestis

¹ St. Luke, xvi. 12.

² Proverbs, xiii. 8.

LETTER XXII

Gentile authors. In the stress of that dread hour I should have been willing to make even larger promises, and taking oath I called upon His name: 'O Lord, if ever again I possess worldly books or read them, I have denied thee.'

After swearing this oath I was dismissed, and returned to the upper world. There to the surprise of all I opened my eyes again, and they were so drenched with tears, that my distress convinced even the incredulous. That this experience was no sleep nor idle dream, such as often mocks us, I call to witness the judgment seat before which I fell and the terrible verdict which I feared. May it never be my lot again to come before such a court as that! I profess that my shoulders were black and blue, and that I felt the bruises long after I awoke from my sleep. And I acknowledge that henceforth I read the books of God with a greater zeal than I had ever given before to the books of men.

You must also avoid the sin of love of money. Not merely must you refuse to claim what belongs to another, for that is an offence punished by the laws of the State; you must also give up clinging to your own property, which has now become no longer yours. The Lord says: 'If ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?'¹ 'That which is another man's' is a mass of gold and silver; 'that which is your own' is the spiritual heritage of which it is said elsewhere: 'The ransom of a man's life is his riches.'² 'No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Deo servire et mammonae,' id est divitiis. Nam gentili Syrorum lingua 'mammona' divitiae nuncupantur Cogitatio victus spinae sunt fidei, radix avaritiae, cura gentilium.

At dices: 'Puella sum delicata et quae meis manibus laborare non possum. Si ad senectam venero, si aegrotare coepio, quis mei miserebitur?' Audi ad apostolos loquentem Iesum: 'Ne cogitatis in corde vestro, quid manducetis, neque corpori vestro, quid induamini. Nonne anima plus est quam esea et corpus plus est quam vestimentum? Respiciite volatilia caeli, quoniam non serunt neque metunt neque congregant in horrea et pater vester caelestis pascit illa.' Si vestis defuerit, lilia proponentur; si esurieris, beatos audies pauperes et esurientes; si aliquis adfluxerit dolor, legito: 'Propter hoc conplaceo mihi in infirmitatibus meis,' et: 'Datus est mihi stimulus carnis meae, angelus Satanae, qui me colafizet,' ne extollar. Laetare in omnibus iudiciis Dei; 'Exultaverunt,' enim, 'filiae Iudae in omnibus iudiciis tuis, domine.' Illa tibi semper in ore vox resonet: 'Nudus exivi de utero matris meae, nudus et redeam,' et: 'Nihil intulimus in hunc mundum nec auferre quid possumus.'

32. At nunc plerasque videas armaria stipare vestibus, tunicas mutare cotidie et tamen tineas non posse superare. Quae religiosior fuerit, unum exierit vestimentum et plenis arcis pannos trahit. Inficitur

¹ St. Matthew, vi. 24.

² St. Matthew, vi. 25.

³ St. Matthew, vi. 28.

⁴ 2 Corinthians, xii. 7, 10.

⁵ Psalm xcvii. 8.

⁶ Job, i. 21.

⁷ 1 Timothy, vi. 7.

LETTER XXII

God and Mammon.'¹ By Mammon understand riches: for in the heathen tongue of the Syrians riches are so called. The thorns that choke our faith are the taking thought for our subsistence. Care for the things of the Gentiles is the root of love of money.

But you say: 'I am a delicate girl and I cannot work with my hands. If I reach old age and fall sick who will take pity on me?' Hear Jesus speaking to the apostles: 'Take no thought what ye shall eat; nor yet for your body what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat and the body more than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they gather into barns: yet your heavenly Father feedeth them.'² If clothing fail you, the lilies shall be put before you.³ If you are hungry, you shall hear how blessed are the poor and hungry among men. If any pain afflict you, read the words: 'Therefore I take pleasure in my infirmities,' and, 'There was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.'⁴ Rejoice in all God's judgments; for does not the psalmist say: 'The daughters of Judah rejoiced because of thy judgments, O Lord'?⁵ Let the words be ever on your lips: 'Naked came I out of my mother's womb and naked shall I return thither,'⁶ and, 'We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.'⁷

But to-day you see many women packing their wardrobes with dresses, putting on a fresh frock every day, and even so unable to get the better of the moth. The more scrupulous sort wear one dress till it is threadbare, but though they go about in rags their boxes are full of clothes. Parchments are dyed membrana colore purpureo, aurum liquescit in litteras, gemmis codices vestiuntur et nudus ante fores ^{agapen} aerum Christus emoritur. Cum manum porrexerint, bucinant; cum ad agapen vocaverint, praeco conducitur. Vidi nuper—nomina taceo, ne saturam putes—nobilissimam mulierum Romanarum in basilica beati Petri semiviris antecedentibus propria manu, quo religiosior putaretur, singulos nummos dispertire pauperibus. Interea—ut usu nosse perfacile est—anus quaedam annis pannisque obsita praecurrit, ut alterum nummum acciperet; ad quam cum ordine pervenisset, pugnus porrigitur pro denario et tanti criminis reus sanguis effunditur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘Radix malorum omnium est avaritia,’ ideoque et ab apostolo idolorum servitus appellatur. ‘Quaere primum regnum Dei et haec omnia adponentur tibi.’ Non occidet dominus fame animam iusti: ‘Iuvenior fui et senui et non vidi iustum derelictum nec semen eius quaerens panem.’ Helias corvis ministrantibus pascitur; vidua Sareptena ipsa cum filiis nocte moritura prophetam pascit esuriens et mirum in modum capsace completo, qui alendus venerat, alit. Petrus apostolus: ‘Argentum,’ inquit, ‘et aurum non habeo; quod autem habeo, hoc tibi do. In nomini domini Iesu Christi surge et ambula.’ At nunc multi, licet sermone taceant, re loquuntur: ‘Fidem et misericordiam non habeo; quod autem

¹ In the early Church the Eucharist was preceded by an ‘agape,’ or love-feast. All contributed, all sat down together, and the meal ended with a psalm.

² 1 Timothy, vi. 10.

³ St. Matthew, vi. 33.

⁴ Psalm xxxvii. 25.

⁵ Acts, iii. 6.

LETTER XXII

purple, gold is melted for lettering, manuscripts are decked with jewels: and Christ lies at their door naked and dying. When they hold a hand out to the needy, they sound the trumpet. When they invite to a love-feast,¹ they hire a crier. Just lately I saw the greatest lady in Rome—I will not give her name, for this is not a satire—standing in the church of the blessed Peter with her band of eunuchs in front. She was giving money to the poor with her own hand to increase her reputation for sanctity; and she gave them each a penny! At that moment—as you might easily know by experience—an old woman, full of years and rags, ran in front of the line to get a second coin; but when her turn came she got, not a penny, but the lady's fist in her face, and for her dreadful offence she had to pay with her blood.

'The love of money is the root of all evil,'² and therefore the apostle calls it slavery to idols. 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all these things shall be added unto you.'³ The Lord will never let a righteous soul die of hunger. The psalmist says: 'I have been young and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread.'⁴ Elijah was fed by ministering ravens. The widow of Zarephath, herself and her sons within an ace of death that night, went hungry that she might feed the prophet: by a miracle the flour barrel was filled and he who had come to be fed supplied food. The apostle Peter says: 'Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ, rise up and walk.'⁵ To-day many people, though they do not say it in words, by their deeds declare: 'Faith and pity have I habeo, aurum et argentum non do tibi.' Habentes igitur victum et vestimentum his contenti sumus. Audi, Iacob in sua oratione quid postulet: ' Si fuerit dominus Deus mecum et servaverit me in via hac, per quam ego iter facio, et dederit mihi panem ad manducandum et vestem ad induendum.' Tantum necessaria deprecatus est et post annos viginti dives dominus et ditior pater ad terram revertitur Chanaan. Infinita de scripturis exempla subpeditant, quae et avaritiam doceant esse fugiendam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

33. Verum quia nunc ex latere de ea dicitur et suo, si Christus adnuerit, volumini reservatur, quid ante non plures annos Nitriae gestum sit, referam. Quidam e fratribus parcior magis quam avarior et nesciens triginta argenteis dominum venditum centum solidos, quos lina texendo quaesierat, moriens dereliquit. Initum inter monachos consilium—nam in eodem loco circiter quinque milia divisis cellulis habitant—quid facto opus est. Alii pauperibus distribuendos esse dicebant, alii dandos ecclesiae, nonnulli parentibus remittendos. Macarius vero et Pambos et Isidorus et ceteri, quos patres vocant, sancto in eis loquente spiritu decreverunt infodiendos esse cum domino suo dicentes: ' Pecunia tua tecum in perditionem.' Nec hoc crudeliter quisquam factum putet: tantus per totam Aegyptum cunctos terror invasit, ut unum solidum dimisisse sit criminis.

34. Et quoniam monachorum fecimus mentionem et te scio libenter audire, quae sancta sunt, aurem paulisper adcommoda. Tria sunt in Aegypto genera

¹ Genesis, xxviii. 20.

² Cf. Index and Appendix, p. 484.

³ Acts, viii. 20.

LETTER XXII

none; but such as I have, gold and silver, these give I thee not.' Having food and raiment let us be content. Hear the words of Jacob in his prayer: 'If God will be with me and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, then shall the Lord be my God.'¹ He prayed only for necessities; yet twenty years afterwards he returned to the land of Canaan, rich in goods and richer still in children. Endless are the examples that Scripture supplies teaching us to beware of love of money.

As I have touched on this subject—if Christ allows I keep it for a special book—I will relate an incident that occurred not many years ago at Nitria. A brother, rather thrifty than avaricious, forgetting that the Lord was sold for thirty pieces of silver, left behind him at his death a hundred gold coins which he had earned by weaving linen. The monks held a council as to what was to be done with it, for there were about five thousand of them in the neighbourhood living in separate cells; some said that the money should be distributed among the poor; others that it should be given to the Church; others that it should be sent back to the dead man's parents. But Macarius, Pambos, Isidore,² and the other Fathers, the Holy Spirit speaking by them, decreed that the coins should be buried with their owner, saying: 'Thy money perish with thee.'³ Let no one think their decision too harsh; for so great a fear has fallen upon all in Egypt that it is now a crime to leave a single gold piece.

Since I have mentioned the monks, and know that you like to hear about holy things, lend me your ear awhile. There are in Egypt three classes of monachorum: coenobium, quod illi 'sauhes' gentili lingua vocant, nos 'in commune viventes' possumus appellare; anchoretae, qui soli habitant per deserta et ab eo, quod procul ab hominibus recesserint, nuncupantur; tertium genus est, quod dicunt 'remnuoth,' deterrimum atque neglectum et quod in nostra provincia aut solum aut primum est. Hi bini vel terni nec multo plures simul habitant suo arbitrato ac ditione viventes, et de eo, quod laboraverint, in medium partes conferunt, ut habeant alimenta communia. Habitant autem quam plurimum in urbis et castellis, et, quasi ars sit sancta, non vita, quidquid vendiderint, maioris est pretii. Inter hos saepe sunt iurgia, quia suo viventes cibo non patiuntur se alicui esse subiectos. Re vera solent certare ieiuniis et rem secreti victoriae faciunt. Apud hos affectata sunt omnia: laxae manicae, caligae follicantes, vestis grossior, crebra suspiria, visitatio virginum, detractatio clericorum, et si quando festior dies venerit, saturantur ad vomitum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

35. His igitur quasi quibusdam pestibus exterminatis veniamus ad eos, qui plures in commune habitant, id est, quos vocari coenobium diximus. Prima apud eos confoederatio est oboedire maioribus et, quidquid iusserint, facere. Divisi sunt per decurias atque centurias, ita ut novem hominibus decimus praesit et rursus decem praepositos sub se centesimus habeat. Manent separati, sed iunctis

¹ From κοινὸς βίος, living a life in common.

² An Egyptian word not elsewhere found.

³ From ἀναχωρεῖν, to withdraw.

⁴ Monks who lived in groups under no fixed rule. Cf. Cassian. Collat. xviii. 7.

⁵ I.e. Pannonia.

LETTER XXII

monks. First, there are the cenobites,¹ called in their Gentile tongue Sauhes,² or, as we should say, men living in a community. Secondly, there are the anchorites,³ who live in the desert as solitaries, so called because they have withdrawn from the society of men. Thirdly, there is the class called Remnuoth,⁴ a very inferior and despised kind, though in my own province⁵ they are the chief if not the only sort of monks. These men live together in twos and threes, seldom in larger numbers, and live according to their own will and ruling. A portion of what they make they contribute to a common fund which provides food for all. In most cases they live in cities or in fortified places, and anything they sell is very dear, the idea being that their workmanship, not their life, is sanctified. Quarrels are frequent among them; for while they supply their own food, they will not brook subordination. It is true that they compete with one another in fasting, making what should be a private matter an occasion for a triumph. Everything with them is done for effect: loose sleeves, big boots, clumsy dress, constant sighing, visiting virgins, disparaging the clergy, and when a feast day comes, they eat so much that they make themselves ill.

Avoiding these then as though they were the plague, let us come to the more numerous class who live together and are called, as we have said, cenobites. Among them the first principle of their association is to obey superiors and do whatever they command. They are divided into sections of ten and a hundred; each tenth man is over nine others, while the hundredth has ten such officers under him. They live apart from each other, but cellulis. Usque ad horam nonam quasi iustitium est: nemo pergit ad alium exceptis his, quos decanos diximus, ut, si cogitationibus forte quis fluctuat, illius consoletur alloquiis. Post horam nonam in commune concurritur, psalmi resonant, scripturae ex more recitantur et completis orationibus cunctisque residentibus medius, quem patrem vocant, incipit disputare. Quo loquente tantum silentium fit, ut nemo ad alium respicere, nemo audeat excreare. Dicentis laus in fletu est audientum. Tacite voluntur per ora lacrimae et ne in singultus quidem erumpit dolor. Cum vero de regno Christi, de futura beatitudine, de gloria coeperit adnuntiare ventura, videas cunctos moderato suspirio et oculis ad caelum levatis intra se dicere: 'Quis dabit mihi pinnas sicut columbae, et volabo et requiescam?'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Post hoc concilium solvitur et unaquaeque decuria cum suo parente pergit ad mensas, quibus per singulas ebdomadas vicissim ministrant. Nullus in cibo strepitus, nemo comedens loquitur. Vivuntur pane, leguminibus et olere, quae sale et oleo condiuntur. Vinum tantum senes accipiunt, quibus et parvulis saepe fit prandium, ut aliorum fessa sustentetur aetas, aliorum non frangatur incipiens. Dehinc consurgunt pariter et hymno dicto ad praesepia redeunt. Ibi usque ad vesperam cum suis unusquisque loquitur et dicit: 'Vidistis illum et illum, in adjoining cells. No monk may visit another before three o'clock in the afternoon, except only the deans or leaders of ten, whose business it is to comfort with soothing words any one disturbed by restless thoughts: until then, there is a cessation of all business. After three o'clock they meet together to sing psalms and duly read the Scriptures. When the prayers have ended and all have sat down, one, whom they call Father, stands up in their midst and discourses; a silence so complete being observed while he is speaking that no one dares to look at his neighbour or to clear his throat. The highest praise that can be given to the preacher is the weeping of his audience. But the tears that run down their cheeks are silent, and not even a sob reveals their emotion. But when he begins to announce the kingdom of Christ, the future happiness, and the coming glory you may see everyone with a gentle sigh and lifted gaze saying to himself: 'Oh, that I had the wings of a dove. For then would I fly away and be at rest.'¹

¹ Psalm lv. 6.

LETTER XXII

After the discourse the meeting breaks up, and each set of ten goes with its Father to its own table; taking turns to serve, each man for a week at a time. No noise is made over the food; no one talks while eating. The fare consists of bread, pulse and greens, and salt and oil is their only condiment. The old men alone receive wine, they often having a special meal prepared in company with the children, so that the weariness of age is refreshed and the weakness of childhood is not impaired. They then rise from table together and after singing a hymn return to their quarters. There each one talks till evening with his friends thus: 'Have you noticed So-and-quanta in ipso sit gratia, quantum silentium, quam moderatus incessus?' Si infirmum viderint, consolantur; si in Deo amore ferventem, cohortantur ad studium. Et quia nocte extra orationes publicas ni suo cubili unusquisque vigilat, circumeunt cellulas singulorum et aure adposita, quid faciant, diligenter explorant. Quem tardiozem deprehenderit, non increpant, sed dissimulato, quod norunt, eum saepius visitant et prius incipientes provocant magis orare, quam cogunt. Opus diei statutum est, quod decano redditum fertur ad oeconomicum, qui et ipse per singulos menses patri omnium cum magno redditu tremore rationem. A quo etiam cibi, cum facti fuerint, degustantur et, quia non licet dicere cuiquam: 'Tunicam et sagum textaque iuncis strata non habeo,' ille ita universa moderatur, ut nemo quid postulet, nemo debeat. Si vero quis coeperit aegrotare, transfertur ad exedram latiore et tanto senum ministerio confovetur, ut nec delicias urbium nec matris quaerat affectum. Dominicis diebus oratione tantum et lectionibus vacant; quod quidem et omni tempore completis opusculis faciunt. Cotidie de scripturis aliquid discitur. Ieiunium totius anni aequale est excepta quadragesima, in qua sola conceditur restrictius vivere. Pentecoste cenae mutantur in prandia, quo et traditioni ecclesiasticae satisfiat et ventrem cibo non onerent duplicato. Tales Philo, Platonici sermonis imitator, tales Iose-so? What grace he has and what powers of silence! How soberly he walks!' If they see that any one is weak, they comfort him: if he is fervent in love for God, they encourage his zeal. At night, besides the common prayers, each man keeps vigil in his own chamber; and so the deans go round to each cell, and putting their ears to the doors carefully ascertain what the inmates are doing. If they catch a monk in slothfulness, they do not upbraid him: but, hiding what they know, they visit him more frequently, and by beginning themselves to pray exhort rather than drive him to his devotions. Every day has its allotted task: the work done is handed to a dean and by him brought to the bursar, who once a month with fear and trembling gives an account to the Community Father. The bursar also tastes the dishes when they are cooked, and as no one is allowed to say: 'I am without a tunic or a cloak or a rush mattress,' he so arranges their entire store that none need ask and none go without. If any one is taken ill, he is moved to a larger room, and is there so sedulously tended by the older monks, that he misses neither the luxuries of cities nor a mother's loving care. Every Lord's day they give their whole time to prayer and reading: which indeed are their usual occupations on ordinary days when work is over. Every day they learn by heart a passage of Scripture. Fasting is regular throughout the year, but in Lent alone an increase of strictness is permitted. After Whitsuntide a midday meal takes the place of the evening repast, and thus the tradition of the Church is satisfied and they avoid overloading their stomachs with a double quantity of food. The Essenes also follow these rules, as we learn from phus, Graecus Livius, in secunda Iudaicae captivitatis historia Essenos refert.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LETTER XXII

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

36. Verum quia nunc de virginibus scribens paene superflue de monachis disputavi, ad tertium genus veniam, quos anchoretas vocant et qui de coenobiis exeuntes excepto pane et sale amplius ad deserta nil perferunt. Huius vitae auctor Paulus, inlustrator Antonius et, ut ad superiora conscendam, princeps Iohannes baptista fuit. Talem virum Hieremias quoque propheta descripsit dicens: ' Bonum est viro, cum portaverit iugum ab adulescentia sua. Sedebit solus et tacebit, quoniam sustulit super se iugum, dabit percipienti se maxillam, saturabitur inproperiis, quia non in sempiternum abiciet dominus.' Horum laborem et conversationem in carne, non carnis, alio tempore, si volueris, explicabo. Nunc ad propositum redeam, quia de avaritia disserens ad monachos verteram. Quorum tibi exempla proponens, non dicam aurum et argentum et ceteras opes, sed ipsam terram caelumque despicias et Christo copulata cantabis: ' Pars mea dominus.'

37. Post haec, quamquam apostolus semper orare nos iubeat et sanctis etiam ipse somnus oratio sit, tamen divisas orandi horas habere debemus, ut si forte aliquo fuerimus opere detenti, ipsum nos ad officium tempus admoneat: horam tertiam, sextam, nonam, diluculum quoque et vesperam nemo qui nesciat. Nec cibus a te sumatur nisi oratione praemissa nec recedatur a mensa, nisi referantur

¹ Cf. Josephus, Jewish War, II. 8.

² Paul the hermit, whose life Jerome wrote.

³ Cf. index.

⁴ Lamentations, iii. 27.

⁵ Psalm lxxiii. 26.

LETTER XXII

Philo, Plato's imitator, and from Josephus,¹ the Greek Livy, in the second book of his Jewish Captivity.

However, as I am writing now about virgins, all these details about monks may seem rather superfluous. I will proceed to the third class, who are called anchorites. They go out from a monastery and live in the desert, taking nothing with them but bread and salt. The founder of the system was Paul,² and Antony³ made it famous: going back, the first example was given by John the Baptist. The prophet Jeremiah also describes such a solitary: 'It is good for a man that he bear the yoke from his youth. He sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him. He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him, he is filled full of reproach. For the Lord will not cast off for ever.'⁴ The struggles of the anchorites and their life, in the flesh but not of the flesh, I will unfold to you on some other occasion, if you wish. Let me now return to my subject, for I was speaking of love of money when I digressed to the monks. With them as examples before you, you will look down not only on gold and silver and worldly possessions, but even on earth itself and the sky. United to Christ, you will sing: 'The Lord is my portion.'⁵

Moreover, although the apostle bids us to pray without ceasing and although to the saints their very sleep is an orison, yet we ought to have fixed hours for prayer, so that if perchance we are occupied with any business the time itself may remind us of our duty. Every one knows that the set times are the third, the sixth, and the ninth hours, at dawn and at evening. No food should be taken except after prayer, and before leaving the table thanks gratiae creatori. Noctibus bis terque surgendum, revolvenda de scripturis, quae memoriter tenemus. Egredientes hospitium armet oratio, regredientibus de platea oratio occurrat ante, quam sessio, nec prius corpusculum requiescat, quam anima pascatur. Ad omnem actum, ad omnem incessum manus pingat crucem. Nulli detrahas nec adversus filium matris tuae ponas scandalum. 'Tu quae es, ut alienum servum iudices? Suo domino stat aut cadit. Stabit autem; potens est enim Deus statuere illum.' Nec, si biduo ieiunaveris, putes te non ieiunante meliorem. Tu ieiunas et irasceris, ille comedit et forte blanditur; tu vexationem mentis et ventris esuriem rixando digeris, ille moderatius alitur et Deo gratias refert. Unde cotidie clamat Esaias: 'Non tale ieiunium elegi, dicit dominus,' et iterum: 'In diebus enim ieiuniorum invenientur voluntates vestrae et omnes, qui sub potestate vestra eunt, stimulis. <Si> in iudiciis et litibus ieiunatis et percutitis pugnis humilem, ut quid mihi ieiunatis?' Quale illud potest esse ieiunium, cuius iram, non dicam nox occupat, sed luna integra derelinquit? Te ipsam considerans noli in alterius ruina, sed in tuo opere gloriari.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

38. Nec illarum tibi exempla proponas, quae carnis curam facientes possessionum redditus et cotidianas domus impensas subputant. Neque enim undecim apostoli Iudae proditione sunt fracti nec

¹ Romans, xiv. 4.

² Isaiah, lviii. 5.

³ Isaiah, lviii. 3.

LETTER XXII

should be rendered to our Creator. We should rise from our bed two or three times in the night, and go over those passages of Scripture which we know by heart. Let prayer arm us when we leave our lodging: when we return from the streets let us pray before we sit down, nor give our miserable body rest until our soul is fed. In everything we do, in every step we take let our hand trace the sign of the Lord's cross. Speak against no one, and slander not thy mother's son. 'Who art thou that judgest the servant of another? To his own lord he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be made to stand, for the Lord hath power to make him stand.'¹ If you have fasted for the space of two or three days, do not think that you are better than those who have not fasted. You fast and are angry; another eats and wears a smiling face. You work off your irritation and hunger by quarrelling with others; your neighbour feeds in moderation and gives thanks to God. Therefore Isaiah proclaims to us every day: 'Is it such a fast, that I have chosen, saith the Lord?'² And again: 'In the day of your fast ye find your own pleasure and oppress all your labourers. If ye fast for strife and contention and to smite with the fist of wickedness, how fast ye unto me?'³ What sort of fast can that be when not only does the night fall upon a man's wrath, but even the full moon leaves it unchanged? Look to yourself and glory not in the fall of others, but only in your own works.

Neither take pattern by those women who have thought for the flesh, and are always reckoning up their income and their daily household expenditure. For the eleven apostles did not weaken by Judas'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Phygelo et Alexandro faciente naufragium ceteri a cursu fidei substiterunt. Nec dicas: 'Illa et illa suis rebus fruitur; honoratur ab omnibus; fratres ad eam conveniunt et sorores: numquid ideo virgo esse desivit?' Primum dubium, an virgo sit talis. 'Non enim, quomodo videt homo, videbit Deus. Homo videt in facie, Deus videt in corde.' Dehinc, etiam si corpore virgo est, an spiritu virgo sit, nescio. Apostolus autem ita virginem definivit: 'Ut sit sancta et corpore et spiritu.' Ad extremum habeat sibi gloriam suam; vincat Pauli sententiam, deliciis fruatur et vivat! Nos meliora exempla sectemur.

Propone tibi beatam Mariam, quae tantae extitit puritatis, ut mater esse domini mereretur. Ad quam cum angelus Gabriel in viri specie descendisset dicens: 'Ave, gratia plena, dominus tecum,' consternata respondere non potuit; nunquam enim a viro fuit salutata. Denique nuntium discit et loquitur et, quae hominem formidarat, cum angelo fabulatur intrepida. Potes et tu esse mater domini. 'Accipe tibi tomum magnum, novum et scribe in eo stilo hominis velociter spolia detrahentis,' et, cum accesseris ad prophetissam et conceperis in utero et pepereris filium, dic: 'A timore tuo, domine, concepimus et doluimus et peperimus; spiritum salvationis tuae fecimus super terram.' Tunc et filius tuus

¹ 2 Timothy, i. 15.

² 1 Timothy, i. 19, 20.

³ 1 Samuel, xvi. 7.

⁴ 1 Corinthians, vii. 34.

⁵ Isaiah, viii.

⁶ Isaiah, viii. 3, 'and I went unto the prophetess and she conceived and bare a son.' Jerome, however, puts his own interpretation on the Hebrew, and 'prophetess' should here be 'prophet.' 'As it stands the quotation is meaningless' (Fremantle).

⁷ Isaiah, xxvi. 18. (Vulgate.)

LETTER XXII

treachery; and though Phygellus¹ and Alexander² made shipwreck the rest did not falter in the race of faith. Nor say: 'So-and-so enjoys her own property; she is honoured by men; the brethren and the sisters assemble at her house. Has she ceased to be a virgin for that?' In the first place, it is doubtful if such an one is a virgin. 'For the Lord will not see as man seeth; for man looketh upon the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart.'³ Furthermore, even if she is a virgin in body, I am not sure that she is a virgin in spirit. The apostle has defined a virgin thus: 'She must be holy both in body and in spirit.'⁴ In fine, let her keep her own glory to the last. Let her override Paul's judgment; let her enjoy her good things and live! Let us follow better examples.

→ Set before your eyes the blessed Mary, whose purity was such that she earned the reward of being the mother of the Lord. When the angel Gabriel came down to her in man's form, and said: 'Hail, thou that art highly favoured; the Lord is with thee,' she was filled with terror and consternation and could not reply; for she had never been greeted by a man before. Soon, however, she learned who the messenger was, and spoke to him: she who had been afraid of a man conversed fearlessly with an angel. You too may be perhaps the Lord's mother. 'Take thee a great new roll and write in it with the pen of a man who is swiftly carrying off the spoils,'⁵ and when you have gone to the prophetess, and conceived in your womb and brought forth a son,⁶ say: 'Lord, we have been with child by thy fear, we have been in pain, we have brought forth thy spirit of thy salvation which we have wrought upon the earth.'⁷

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

tibi respondebit et dicet : ' Ecce mater mea et fratres mei.' Et mirum in modum ille, quem in latitudine pectoris tui paulo ante descriperas, quem in novitate cordis stilo volante signaveras, postquam spolia ex hostibus ceperit, postquam denudaverit principatus et potestates et adfixerit eas cruci, conceptus adolescit et maior effectus sponsam te incipit habere de matre. Grandis labor, sed grande praemium esse, quod martyras, esse, quod apostolos, esse, quod Christus est.

Quae quidem universa tunc prosunt, cum in ecclesia fiunt, cum in una domo pascha celebramus, si arcam ingredimur cum Noe, si pereunte Hierico Raab iustificata nos continet. Ceterum virgines, quales apud diversas hereses et quales apud inpurissimum Manicheum esse dicuntur, scorta sunt aestimanda, non virgines. Si enim corporis earum auctor est diabolus, quomodo possunt honorare plasticam hostis sui? Sed quia sciunt virginale vocabulum gloriosum, sub ovium pellibus lupos tegunt. Christum mentitur antichristus et turpitudinem vitae falso nominis honore convestiunt. Gaude, soror, gaude, filia, gaude, mi virgo: quod aliae simulant, tu vere esse coepisti.

39. Haec omnia, quae digessimus, dura videbuntur ei, qui non amat Christum. Qui autem omnem saeculi pompam pro purgamento habuerit et vana duxerit universa sub sole, ut Christum lucrifaciat, qui conmortuus est domino suo et conresurrexit et crucifixit carnem cum vitiis et concupiscentiis, libere

¹ St. Matthew, xii. 49.

² Founder of the sect of the Manicheans, who believed that matter as such is essentially evil.

LETTER XXII

Then shall your son reply: 'Behold my mother and my brethren.'¹ And He whose name just before you had inscribed upon the tablet of your heart, and had written with a pen upon its new surface, after He has recovered the spoils from the enemies and has stripped principalities and powers, nailing them to His cross, He having been conceived grows to manhood, and as He becomes older regards you not as His mother but as His bride. To be as the martyrs, or as the apostles, or as Christ, is a great struggle, but for that struggle there is a great reward.

All such efforts are only of avail when they are made within the Church; when we celebrate the passover in one house; if we enter the ark with Noah; if, while Jericho is falling, we shelter beneath the roof of the justified harlot Rahab. Such virgins as there are said to be among the different kinds of heretics, or with the followers of the filthy Manes,² must be considered, not virgins, but prostitutes. If the devil is the author of their body, how can they honour a thing fashioned by their foe? It is because they know that the name of virgin brings glory with it that they go about as wolves in sheep's clothing. Antichrist pretends to be Christ: and even so they falsely cloak their shameful lives under an honourable title. Rejoice, my sister; rejoice, my daughter; rejoice, my virgin; you have begun to be in truth that which these others only feign to be.

All the things that I have set out in this letter will seem hard to her who loves not Christ. But one who regards all the pomp of this world as dross, and holds everything under the sun as vain, if only he may win Christ; one who has died with his Lord and risen again and crucified the flesh with its weak-proclamabit: ' Quis nos separabit a caritate Christi? tribulatio? an angustia? an persecutio? an famis? an nuditas? an periculum? an gladius?' Et iterum: ' Certus autem sum, quia neque mors neque vita neque angelus neque principatus neque instantia neque futura neque fortitudo neque excelsum neque profundum neque alia creatura poterit nos separare a caritate Dei, quae est in Christo Iesu domino nostro.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Dei filius pro nostra salute hominis factus est filius, decem mensibus in utero, ut nascatur, expectat, fastidia sustinet, cruentus egeritur, involvitur pannis, blanditiis deridetur et ille, cuius pugillo mundus includitur, praesepis continetur angustiis. Taceo, quod usque ad tricesimum annum ignobilis parentum paupertate contentus est: verberabatur et tacet; crucifigitur et pro crucifigentibus deprecatur. ' Quid,' igitur, ' retribuam domino pro omnibus, quae retribuit mihi? Calicem salutaris accipiam et nomen domini invocabo. Pretiosa in conspectu domini mors sanctorum eius.' Haec est sola digna retributio, cum sanguis sanguine compensatur et redempti cruore Christi pro redemptore libenter obcumbimus. Quis sanctorum sine certamine coronatus est? Abeliustus occiditur; Abraham uxorem periclitatur amittere et, ne in inmensum volumen extendam, quaere et invenies singulos diversa perpressos. Solus in deliciis Salomon fuit, et forsitan ideo corruit. ' Quem enim diligit dominus, corripit; castigat autem omnem

¹ Romans, viii. 35-38.

² Psalm cxvi. 12.

LETTER XXII

nesses and lusts; he will freely cry: 'Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?'¹ And again: 'I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Jesus Christ, our Lord.'

For our salvation the Son of God became the Son of Man. Ten months He awaits birth in the womb, He endures distress, He comes forth covered with blood, He is swathed in napkins, He is comforted with caresses. Though He holds the world in His closed hand, He is contained by the narrow space of a manger. I say nothing of the thirty years He lived in obscurity, content with His parents' poverty. He was scourged and says not a word. He is crucified and prays for His crucifiers. 'What then shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits towards me? I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints.'² The only fitting return we can make Him is to pay for blood with blood; and as we are redeemed by the blood of Christ, to die willingly for our Redeemer. What saint was ever crowned without a contest? Righteous Abel is murdered. Abraham runs the risk of losing his wife. And, not to enlarge my screed beyond all measure, look for yourself and you will find that all the saints have suffered adversity. Solomon alone lived in luxury, and that is perhaps the reason why he fell. 'For whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He filium quem recipit.' Nonne melius est brevi tempore dimicare, ferre vallum, arma, cibaria, lassescere sub lorica et postea gaudere victorem, quam impatientia unius horae servire perpetuo?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

40. Nihil amantibus durum est, nullus difficilis cupienti labor. Respice, quanta Iacob pro Rachel pacta uxore sustineat. 'Et servivit,' inquit scriptura, 'Iacob pro Rachel annis septem. Et erant in conspectu eius quasi pauci dies, quia amabat illam.' Unde et ipse postea memorat: 'In die urebar aestu et gelu nocte.' Amemus et nos Christum, semper eius quaeramus amplexus, et facile videbitur omne difficile. Brevia putabimus universa, quae longa sunt, et iaculo illius vulnerati per horarum momenta dicimus: 'Heu me, quia peregrinatio mea prolongata est.' 'Non sunt,' enim, 'condignae passiones huius mundi ad futuram gloriam, quae revelabitur in nobis'; 'quia tribulatio patientiam operatur, patientia probationem, probatio autem spem, spes vero non confundit.' Quando tibi grave videtur esse, quod sustines, Pauli secundam ad Corinthios lege: 'In laboribus plurimis, in carceribus abundantius, in plagis supra modum, in mortibus frequenter—a Iudaeis quinquies quadragenas una minus accepi, ter virgis caesus sum, semel lapidatus sum, ter naufragium feci—nocte et die in profundo maris fui, in itineribus saepius, periculis fluminum, periculis latronum, periculis ex genere, periculis ex gentibus, periculis in civitate, periculis in deserto, periculis in

¹ Hebrews, xii. 6.

² A Roman soldier carried a stake, which he fixed in the ground at the end of the day's march as part of the rampart round the camp.

³ Genesis, xxix. 20.

LETTER XXII

receiveth.'¹ Is it not better to fight for a short space, to carry a camp-stake,² to put on arms, to faint beneath a breastplate, and then to know the joy of victory, rather than to become slaves for ever because we could not hold out for a single hour?

Love finds nothing hard: no task is difficult if you wish to do it. Consider all that Jacob bore to win Rachel, his promised bride. The Scripture tells us: 'Jacob served seven years for Rachel. And they seemed to him but a few days for the love he had to her.'³ So he himself afterwards says: 'In the day the drought consumed me and the frost by night.'⁴ Let us also love Christ and ever seek His embraces. Then everything difficult will seem easy; all things long we shall think to be short; and smitten with His javelin we shall say as each hour passes: 'Woe is me that I have prolonged my pilgrimage.'⁵ 'For the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us.'⁶ 'Tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed.'⁷ Whenever your lot seems hard, read Paul's second epistle to the Corinthians: 'In labours more abundant; in stripes above measure; in prisons more frequent; in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one; thrice was I beaten with rods; once was I stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in ⁴ Genesis, xxxi. 40.

⁵ Psalm cxix. 5. (Vulgate.)

⁶ Romans, viii. 18.

⁷ Romans, v. 3.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

mare, periculis in falsis fratribus, in laboribus, in miseriis, in vigiliis multis, in fame et siti, in ieiuniis plurimis, in frigore et nuditate.' Quis nostrum saltem minimam portionem de catalogo harum sibi potest vindicare virtutum? Utique ille postea confidenter aiebat: 'Cursum consummavi, fidem servavi. Superest mihi corona iustitiae, quam retribuet mihi dominus.'

Si cibus insulsior fuerit, contristamur et putamus nos Deo praestare beneficium, cum aquatius bibimus: calix frangitur, mensa subvertitur, verbera sonant et aqua tepidior sanguine vindicatur. 'Regnum caelorum vim patitur et violenti diripiunt illud.' Nisi vim feceris, caelorum regna non capies. Nisi pulnaveris inopportune, panem non accipies sacramenti. An non tibi videtur esse violenti, cum caro cupit esse, quod Deus est, et illuc, unde angeli corruerunt, angelos iudicatura conscendere?

41. Egredere, quaeso, paulisper e corpore et praesentis laboris ante oculos tuos pinge mercedem, quam 'nec oculus vidit nec auris audivit nec in cor hominis ascendit.' Qualis erit illa dies, cum tibi Maria, mater domini, choris occurret comitata virginis, cum post Rubrum Mare et submersum cum suo exercitu Pharaonem tympanum tenens praecinet

¹ 2 Corinthians, xi. 23.

³ St. Matthew, xi. 12.

⁵ 1 Corinthians, ii. 9.

² 2 Timothy, iv. 7.

⁴ 1 Corinthians, vi. 3.

LETTER XXII

perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren, in weariness, and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.'¹ Who of us at least can claim for himself the smallest part of this catalogue of virtues? Certainly he could afterwards boldly say: 'I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day.'²

And yet we frown if our food seems to lack savour, and fancy that we are doing God a favour when we drink water with our wine. If that water is a trifle too warm, the servant must pay for it with his blood: we smash the cup, knock the table over, and the whip whistles in the air. 'The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force.'³ Unless you use violence you will never seize the kingdom of heaven. Unless you knock importunately you will never receive the sacramental bread. Does it not seem to you to be truly violence when the flesh desires to be as God and to ascend to the place whence angels fell that it may judge angels?⁴

Come out, I pray you, awhile from your prison-house, and picture before your eyes the reward of your present labours, a reward 'which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man.'⁵ What will be the splendour of that day, when Mary, the mother of the Lord, shall come to meet you, attended by her bands of virgins: when, the Red Sea past and Pharaoh with his hosts drowned beneath its waves, one, with timbrel in her hand, shall chant to her responsive

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

responsuris: 'Cantemus domino; gloriose enim magnificatus est. Equum et ascensorem proiecit in mare.' Tunc Thecla in tuos laeta volabit amplexus. Tunc et ipse sponsus occurret et dicet: 'Surge, veni, proxima mea, speciosa mea, columba mea, quia ecce hiemps transiit, pluvia abiit sibi.' Tunc angeli mirabuntur et dicent: 'Quae est ista prospiciens quasi diluculum, speciosa ut luna, electa ut sol?' Videbunt te filiae et laudabunt te reginae et concubinae te praedicabunt. Tunc et alius castitatis chorus occurret: Sarra cum nuptis veniet, filia Phanuelis Anna cum viduis. Erunt ut in diversis gregibus, carnis et spiritus, matres tuae. Laetabitur illa, quod genuit; exultabit ista, quod docuit. Tunc vere super asinam dominus ascendet et caelestem ingredietur Hierusalem. Tunc parvuli, de quibus in Esaia salvator effatur: 'Ecce ego et pueri, quos mihi dedit dominus,' palmas victoriae sublevantes consono ore cantabunt: 'Osanna in excelsis; benedictus, qui venit in nomine domini, osanna in excelsis.' Tunc centum quadraginta quattuor milia in conspectu throni et seniorum tenebunt citharas et cantabunt canticum novum et nemo poterit scire canticum illud, nisi numerus definitus: 'Hi sunt, qui se cum mulieribus non coinquinaverunt—virgines enim permanserunt; hi sunt, qui secuntur agnum, quocumque vadit.' Quotienscumque te vana saeculi delectarit ambitio, quo-

¹ Exodus, xv. 21.

² A virgin of Iconium said to have been converted by Paul.

³ Song of Solomon, ii. 10.

⁴ Song of Solomon, vi. 9 (slightly altered), 10.

⁵ Cf. St. Luke, ii. 36.

⁶ I.e. Paula and Marcella. Cf. Appendix, p. 487.

⁷ Isaiah, viii. 18.

⁸ St. Matthew, xxi. 9.

⁹ Revelation, xiv. 4.

LETTER XXII

choir: 'Let us sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider he hath thrown into the sea.'¹ Then shall Thecla² fly rejoicing to your arms. Then shall your Spouse Himself come to meet you and say: 'Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away, for lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone.'³ Then shall the angels gaze in wonder and cry: 'Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun?'⁴ The daughters shall see you and bless you; yea, the queens shall proclaim and the concubines shall praise you.

And then another chaste band will be there to greet you. Sarah will come with the wedded; Anna,⁵ the daughter of Phanuel, with the widows. In the one company you will see your natural, and in the other your spiritual mother.⁶ The one will rejoice in having borne you, the other will exult in having taught you. Then truly will the Lord ride upon His ass and enter the heavenly Jerusalem. Then the little ones—of whom in Isaiah the Saviour says: 'Behold I and the children whom the Lord hath given me'⁷—shall lift up palms of victory and with one accord shall sing: 'Hosanna in the highest, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, hosanna in the highest.'⁸ Then shall the hundred and forty and four thousand hold their harps before the throne and before the elders and sing the new song. And no man shall be able to sing that song save the appointed company: 'These are they which were not defiled with women—for they are virgins; these are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth.'⁹ As often as this world's vain display delights you; as often as you see in tiens in mundo aliquid videris gloriosum, ad paradisum mente transgredere; esse incipe, quod futura es, et audies ab sponso tuo: 'Pone me sicut signaculum in corde tuo, sicut signaculum in brachio tuo,' et opere pariter ac mente munita clamabis: 'Aqua multa non poterit extinguere caritatem et flumina non cooperient eam.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

XXXVIII

AD MARCELLAM

1. ABRAHAM temptatur in filio et fidelior invenitur; Ioseph in Aegypto venditur, ut patrem pascat et fratres; Ezechias vicina morte terretur, ut fusus in lacrimis quindecim annorum spatio proteletur ad vitam; Petrus apostolus domini passione concutitur, ut amare flens audiat: 'Pasce oves meas'; Paulus, lupus rapax et Benjamin adolescentior, in extasi caecatur, ut videat, et repentino tenebrarum horrore circumdatus dominum vocat, quem dudum ut hominem persequabatur.

2. Ita et nunc, mi Marcella, Blesillam nostram vidimus ardore febrium per triginta ferme dies iugiter

¹ Song of Solomon, viii. 6. ² Song of Solomon, viii. 7.

³ For Marcella and Blesilla, cf. Introduction, p. viii, and Appendix I.

⁴ Paul belonged to the tribe of Benjamin and Benjamin is described as a ravening wolf: cf. Genesis, xlix. 27. Paul, a Benjamite, acted like a wolf in persecuting the Church: cf. p. 279.

LETTER XXII AND LETTER XXXVIII life some empty glory, transport yourself in thought to Paradise and begin to be now what you will be hereafter. Then will you hear your Spouse say: 'Set me as a seal in thine heart and as a seal upon thine arm.'¹ And then, fortified alike in mind and body, you will cry: 'Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it.'²

LETTER XXXVIII

TO MARCELLA³

A good woman

Written A.D. 384

ABRAHAM is tempted in the matter of his son, and is found to be of greater faith. Joseph is sold in Egypt, and is thereby able to maintain his father and brothers. Hezekiah is terrified by the near approach of death, but he bursts into tears and his life is extended by the space of fifteen years. If the faith of the apostle Peter is shaken by Our Lord's passion, it is that amid his bitter tears he may hear the words: 'Feed my sheep.' Paul, that ravening wolf, that little Benjamin,⁴ is blinded in a trance, but as the result he gains clear vision, and from the sudden horror of darkness around him calls upon Him as Lord whom in the past he persecuted as man.

So now, my dear Marcella, has it been with our beloved Blesilla. For nearly thirty days we have seen her tossing continually in a burning fever, that aestuasse, ut sciret reiciendas delicias corporis, quod paulo post vermibus exarandum sit. Venit et ad hanc dominus Iesus tetigitque manum eius et surgens ministrat ei. Redolebat aliquid negligentiae et divitiarum, fasciis conligata in saeculi iacebat sepulchro, sed confremuit Iesus et conturbatus in spiritu clamavit dicens: 'Blesilla, exi foras.' Quae vocata surrexit et egressa cum domino vescitur. Iudaei minentur et tumeant, quaerant occidere suscitatum, soli apostoli gloriantur; scit se vitam suam ei debere, cui credidit; scit se eius amplexare pedes, cuius paulo ante iudicium pertimescebat. Corpus paene iacebat exanime et anhelos artus mors vicina quatiebat. Ubi tunc erant auxilia propinquorum, ubi verba omni inaniora fumo? Nihil tibi debet, o ingrata cognatio, quae mundo periit et Christo revixit. Qui Christianus est, gaudeat; qui irascitur, non esse se indicat Christianum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Vidua, quae soluta est vinculo maritali, nihil necesse habet nisi perseverare. At scandalizat quempiam vestis fuscior: scandalizet Iohannes, quo inter natos mulierum maior nullus fuit, qui angelus dictus ipsum quoque dominum baptizavit, qui camelorum vestitus tegumine zona pellicia cingebatur.

LETTER XXXVIII

thereby she might learn to cast away all those pamperings of that body into which worms will soon burrow their way. To her also the Lord Jesus came, and He touched her hand, and behold she rises and ministers unto Him. Once there was some suspicion of indifference in her conduct: she was bound fast in the close wrappings of riches, and lay inactive in this world tomb. But Jesus was troubled in spirit, and raised His voice and cried aloud, saying: 'Blesilla, come forth.' At His bidding she arose and came out, and now she feasts with the Lord. The Jews may swell with threats, and seek to slay her who has been roused to life, while the apostles alone give glory: Blesilla knows that she owes her life to Him to whom she entrusted it: she knows that she now embraces the feet of Him before whose judgment just lately she trembled. Life had almost forsaken her prostrate body, and the near approach of death shook her panting frame. Of what avail at that hour was the help that relatives could give, or their words of comfort, emptier than smoke? She owes nothing to you, thankless kinsmen: she is dead to the world and lives again to Christ. Let those who are Christians rejoice: those who feel resentment show thereby that they are not Christians.

A widow who is freed from the marital bond has but one duty laid upon her, and that is to continue as a widow. It may be that some people are offended by her sombre garb: they would be offended also by John the Baptist, and yet among those born of women there has not been a greater than he. He was called God's messenger and baptized the Lord Himself, but he was clothed in camel's-hair raiment and girded with a girdle of skins. It may be that

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Cibi displicent viliores; nihil vilius est locustis. Illae Christianos oculos potius scandalizent, quae purpurisso et quibusdam fucis ora oculosque depingunt, quarum facies gypseae et nimio candore deformes idola mentiuntur, quibus si forte improvidens lacrimarum stilla eruperit, sulco defluit, quas nec numerus annorum potest docere, quod vetulae sunt, quae capillis alienis verticem instruunt et praeteritam iuventutem in rugis anilibus poliunt, quae denique ante nepotum gregem trementes virgunculae conponuntur. Erubescat mulier Christiana, si naturae cogit decorem, si carnis curam facit ad concupiscentiam, in qua qui sunt, secundum apostolum Christo placere non possunt.

4. Vidua nostra ante monilibus ornabatur et die tota, quid sibi deesset, quaerebat ad speculum; nunc loquitur confidenter: 'Nos autem omnes revelata facie gloriam domini speculantes in eandem imaginem transformamur a gloria in gloriam, quasi a domini spiritu.' Tunc crines ancillulae disponebant et mitellis crispantibus vertex artabatur innoxius; nunc neglectum caput scit sibi tantum sufficere, quod velatur. Illo tempore plumarum quoque dura mollities videbatur et in extractis toris iacere vix poterat; nunc ad orandum festina consurgit et modulata voce ceteris 'alleluia' praecipiens prior incipit some are displeased by a widow's simple food: nothing can be more simple than locusts. Those women rather should offend a Christian's eyes, who paint their cheeks with rouge and their eyes with belladonna; whose faces are covered with powder and so disfigured by excessive whiteness that they look like idols; who find a wet furrow on their skin if perchance a careless tear escape them; whom no amount of years can convince that they are old; who heap their heads with borrowed tresses; who polish up past youthfulness in spite of the wrinkles of age; who, in fine, behave like trembling schoolgirls before a company of their own grandsons. A Christian woman should blush to win by force what should be natural beauty, or to rouse men's desires by bestowing care upon the flesh. As the apostle says: 'Those that are in the flesh cannot be pleasing to Christ.'¹

¹ Romans, viii. 8.

² 2 Corinthians, iii. 18.

LETTER XXXVIII

In the past our dear widow used to deck herself with necklaces, and spent whole days before her glass looking for anything wrong in her appearance. Now she boldly says: 'We all with unveiled face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the spirit of the Lord.'² In those days lady's maids used to arrange her hair, and her poor head, which had done no harm, was imprisoned in a head-dress crammed with curls. Now it is left alone, and knows that it is sufficiently cared for when it is covered by a veil. At that time the softest down seemed hard to her limbs, and she could scarcely rest upon a pile of cushions. Now she rises in haste from her bed to pray, and with tuneful voice forestalls her comrades' 'Alleluia,' herself ever the first to praise her laudare dominum suum. Flectuntur genua super nudam humum et crebris lacrimis facies psimithio ante sordidata purgatur. Post orationem psalmi concrepant et lassa cervix, poplites vacillantes in somnumque vergentes oculi nimio mentis ardore vix impetrant, ut quiescant. Pulla est tunica: minus, cum humi iacuerit, sordidatur. Soccus vilior: auratorum pretium calceorum egentibus largietur. Cingulum non auro gemmisque distinctum est, sed laneum et tota simplicitate purissimum et quod possit adstringere magis vestimenta quam scindere. Si huic proposito invidet scorpius et sermone blando de indebita rursum arbore comedere persuadet, inlidatur ei pro solea anathema et in suo morienti pulvere dicatur: 'Vade retro, Satanus,' quod interpretatur 'adverse'; adversarius quippe Christi est antichristus, cui praecepta displicent Christi.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Oro te, quid tale umquam, quale apostoli, fecimus, ut merito scandalizentur; patrem senem cum navicula et rete dimittunt; publicanus a teloneo surgit et sequitur salvatorem; volens discipulus reverti domum et suis ante renuntiare magistri voce prohibetur; sepultura non datur patri et pietatis genus est inpium esse pro domino. Nos, quia serica veste non utimur, monachi iudicamur, quia ebrii non sumus nec cachinno ora dissolvimus, continentes vocamur et tristes. Si tunica non canduerit, statim illud e trivio: 'Inpostor et Graecus est.' Cavi-

LETTER XXXVIII

Lord. She kneels upon the ground, and with frequent tears cleanses the face that was once defiled with white lead. After prayer comes the singing of psalms; her neck grows weary, her knees totter, her eyes drop off to sleep; but her ardent spirit will hardly give them leave to rest. Her dress is of dark stuff; therefore it is scarcely soiled by lying on the ground. Her slippers are of a cheap sort; the price of gilded boots will be given as alms to the needy. Her girdle is not adorned with jewels or gold; it is made of wool, perfectly simple and clean, and it is intended to keep her dress close rather than to cut her figure into two halves. If the scorpion, jealous of her resolute purpose, with soft words persuades her to eat again of the forbidden tree, let a curse crush him instead of a boot, and let her say, as he lies dying in the dust that is his due: 'Get thee behind me, Satan.' The word Satan means 'adversary,' since Christ's adversary is the Antichrist, who finds Christ's precepts displeasing.

Pray, have we ever done anything such as the apostles did that men should have reason to be offended with us? The apostles left their boat and their net and their aged father. The publican got up from the receipt of custom and followed the Saviour. When a disciple wished to go back home and give a message first to his people, the Master's voice forbade him. A father even was refused burial; for it is a form of duty to be undutiful for the Lord's sake. We on the other hand are called monks merely because we do not dress in silk. We are dubbed 'sour puritans,' because we do not get drunk or burst into loud guffaws. If our tunic is not spotlessly white, the cry goes up from the street: 'Greek charlatan.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

lentur vafriora licet et pingui aqualiculo-farsos circumferant homines: Blesilla nostra ridebit nec dignabitur loquacium ranarum audire convicia, cum dominus eius dictus sit Beelzebub.

XL

AD MARCELLAM DE ONASO

I. MEDICI, quos vocant chirurgicos, crudeles putantur et miseri sunt. An non est miseria alienis dolere vulneribus et mortuas carnes clementi secare ferro? Non horrere curantem, quod horret ipse, qui patitur, et inimicum putari? Ita se natura habet, ut amara sit veritas, blanda vitia aestimentur. Esaias in exemplum captivitatis futurae nudus non erubescit incedere; Heremias de media Hierusalem ad Eufraten, fluvium Mesopotamiae, mittitur, ut inter inimicas gentes, ubi est Assyrius et castra sunt Chaldaeorum, ponat περίζωμα corrumpendum: Hiezechiel stercore primum humano, dein bubulo panem de omni semente conspersum edere iubetur et uxoris interitum siccis oculis videt; Amos de Samaria pellitur: cur quaeso? Nempe ideo, quia chirurgici spiritales secantes vitia peccatorum ad paenitentiam

¹ Matthew, x. 25.

² This letter is superscribed 'To Marcella concerning Onasus,' but most of the fierce invective is addressed personally to Onasus himself, of whom nothing else is known.

³ Isaiah, xx. 2.

⁴ Jeremiah, xiii. 7.

⁵ Ezekiel, iv. 9 ff. and xxiv. 15 ff.

⁶ Amos, vii. 12.

LETTER XXXVIII AND LETTER XL

Let men indulge in even sharper witticisms, if they please, and parade before us their fat-paunched friends. Our dear Blesilla will laugh at them, and will not deign to listen to the abuse of noisy frogs. She knows that her Lord was called by men Beelzebub.¹

LETTER XL

TO MARCELLA

*Onasus the windbag*²

Written A.D. 385

THOSE medical men whom folk call surgeons are thought to be cruel and really are pitiful. Is it not a pitiful business to feel the pain of another's wounds, and to cut dead flesh with the merciful knife? Is it not pitiful to show no horror at treating a malady which seems horrible even to the patient, and to be considered the sufferer's enemy? Man's nature is such that truth tastes bitter and pleasant vices are esteemed. Isaiah in token of the coming captivity does not blush to go abroad naked.³ Jeremiah is sent from mid-Jerusalem to Euphrates, the river of Mesopotamia, among hostile nations, the Assyrians and the camp of the Chaldaeans, and bidden there to hide his girdle and let it be marred.⁴ Ezekiel is ordered to eat bread made of every kind of grain and mingled first with man's and then with cow's dung, and he looks on at his wife's death with dry eyes.⁵ Amos is driven forth from Samaria.⁶ Why was all this, pray? It was because our spiritual surgeons by cutting into the faults of sinners exhorted cohortabantur. Paulus apostolus: 'Inimicus,' inquit, 'vobis factus sum vera dicens.' Et quia salvatoris dura videbantur eloquia, plurimi discipulorum retrorsum abierunt.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Unde non mirum est, si et nos vitiis detrahentes offendimus plurimos. Disposui nasum secare fentem: timeat, qui strumosus est. Volo corniculæ detrudere garrienti: rancidulam se intellegat cornix. Numquid unus in orbe Romano est, qui habeat 'truncas inhonesto vulnere nares'? Numquid solus Onasus Segestanus cava verba et in vesicarum modum tumentia buccis trutinatur inflatis? Dico quosdam scelere, periurio, falsitate ad dignitatem nescio quam pervenisse: quid ad te, qui te intellegis innocentem? Rideo advocatum, qui patrono egeat: quadrante dignam eloquentiam nare subsanno: quid ad te, qui disertus es? Volo in nummarios invehi sacerdotes: tu, qui dives es, quid irascaris? Claudum cupio suis ignibus ardere Vulcanum: numquid hospes eius es aut vicinus, quod a delubris idoli niteris incendium submovere? Placet mihi de larvis, de noctua, de bubone, de Niliacis ridere portentis: quicquid dictum fuerit, in te dictum putas. In quodecumque vitium stili mei mucro contorquetur, te clamitas designari, conserta manu in ius vocas et satiricum scriptorem in prosa stulte arguis. An ideo bellus videris, quia fausto vocaris nomine? Quasi men to repentance. The apostle Paul says: 'I have become your enemy because I tell you the truth.'¹ And because the Saviour's words seemed hard, very many of His disciples went away.

¹ Galatians, iv. 16.

² Virgil, Aeneid, VI. 497, of Deiphobus. Nasus = nose. Onasus = Onesimus = 'the helpful.'

LETTER XL

So it is not surprising if we too offend very many when we try to strip away their vices. I am prepared to cut a foul-smelling nose: those who suffer from a wen may well shake in their shoes. I intend to rebuke a chattering crow: the fellow-bird may well see that he too is offensive. But is there only one man in the whole Roman world who has 'a nose lopped short with shameful wound'?² Is Onasus of Segesta the only person who puffs his cheeks and weighs out words with nothing in them like a bladder full of wind? I say that certain people have reached a certain position by crime, perjury, and false pretences. What is that to you, who know yourself to be innocent? I laugh at the advocate who himself needs a defender; I sneer scornfully at his eloquence which would be dear at a farthing. What is that to you, who are a good speaker? It is my pleasure to attack those priests who think only of money. Why do you, who are a rich man, become angry? I would fain burn limping Vulcan in his own furnace. Are you a friend or a neighbour of his, that you strive to save the idol's shrine from the flames? I like to laugh at ghosts, night-birds, hooting owls, and all the portents of Egypt: anything I say you think is aimed at yourself. Against whatever vice my pen's sword-point turns, you cry out loudly that you are its mark, you join issue and call me into court, and foolishly try to prove that I am a writer of satire in prose. Do you seem to yourself a fine fellow, because you bear the lucky name of Onasus,

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

non et lucus ideo dicatur, quod minime luceat, et Pareae ab eo, quod nequaquam parcant, et Eumenides Furiae, et vulgo Aethiopes vocentur argentei. Quodsi in descriptione foedorum semper irasceris, iam te cum Persio cantabo formosum :

‘ Te optent generum rex et regina, puellae
Te rapiant : quicquid calcaveris tu, rosa fiat.’

3. Dabo tamen consilium, quibus absconditis possis pulehrior apparere : nasus non videatur in facie, sermo non sonet ad loquendum, atque ita et formosus videri potes et disertus.

XLIII

AD MARCELLAM

1. AMBROSIUS, quo chartas, sumptus, notarios ministrante tam innumerabiles libros vere Adamantius et noster Χαλκέντερος explicavit, in quadam epistula, ¹ Persius, Satires, II. 37, altered.

² Not the great Bishop of Milan who lived a century after Origen, but a friend of Origen.

³ ‘Chalkenteros,’ ‘the man with entrails of brass,’ an epithet usually applied to the Alexandrian scholar Didymus, because of his unwearied industry, is here transferred to

LETTER XL AND LETTER XLIII

' the Helpful ' ? Have you never heard the saying : Lucus a non lucendo ? Are not the Fates called the Sparers, because they spare no man ? Are not the Furies called Angels of Mercy ? Do not common people often use the name ' silver boys ' for negroes ? Still, if my pictures of ugliness make you angry, to-day I will call you beautiful and sing with Persius :¹

' May kings and queens their daughters to you lead
And for your favours as a bridegroom plead.
May girls their eager hands upon you lay
And where you walk red roses deck the way.'

I will give you, however, one piece of advice. There are some things you must hide, if you are to appear handsome. Let your nose not be seen upon your face and let your tongue never be heard in conversation. Then you may possibly be thought both good-looking and eloquent.

LETTER XLIII

To MARCELLA

The country life

Written A.D. 385

AMBROSE,² who supplied Origen with parchment, money, and copyists, and thus enabled our man of brass³ and adamant to bring out his innumerable Origen, who was sometimes called ' Adamantius,' probably for the same reason.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

quam ad eundem de Athenis scripserat, refert numquam se cibos Origene praesente sine lectione sumpsisse, nunquam venisse somnium, nisi e fratribus aliquis sacris litteris personaret, hoc diebus egisse vel noctibus, ut et lectio orationem susciperet et oratio lectionem.

2. Quid nos, ventris animalia, tale unquam fecimus? Quos si secunda hora legentes invenerit, oscitamus, manu faciem defricantes continemus stomachum et quasi post multum laborem mundialibus rursum negotiis occupamur. Praetermitto prandia, quibus onerata mens premitur. Pudet dicere de frequentia salutandi, qua aut ipsi cotidie ad alios pergimus aut ad nos venientes ceteros expectamus. Deinceps itur in verba, sermo teritur, lacerantur absentes, vita aliena describitur et mordentes invicem consumimur ab invicem. Talis nos cibus et occupat et dimittit. Cum vero amici recesserint, ratiocinia subputamus. Nunc ira personam nobis leonis inponit, nunc cura superflua in annos multos duratura praecogitat, nec recordamur evangelii dicens: 'Stulte, hac nocte repetunt animum tuam a te; quae autem praeparasti, cuius erunt?' Vestes non ad usum tantum, sed ad delicias conquiruntur. Ubicumque compendium est, velocior pes, citus sermo, auris adtentior; si damnum, et saepe in re familiari accidere solet, fuerit nuntiatum, vultus maerore deprimitur. Laetamur ad nummum, obolo books, in a letter written to his friend from Athens, declares that he never took a meal in Origen's company without something being read, and that he never fell asleep save to the sound of some brother's voice reciting the Scriptures aloud. Day and night it was their habit to make reading follow upon prayer, and prayer upon reading, without a break.

¹ St. Luke, xii. 20.

LETTER XLIII

Do we, poor creatures of the belly, ever behave like this? If we spend more than an hour in reading, you will find us yawning and trying to restrain our boredom by rubbing our eyes; then, as though we had been hard at work, we plunge once more into worldly affairs. I say nothing of the heavy meals which crush such mental faculties as we possess. I am ashamed to speak of our numerous calls, going ourselves every day to other people's houses, or waiting for others to come to us. The guests arrive and talk begins: a brisk conversation is engaged: we tear to pieces those who are not there: other people's lives are described in detail: we bite and are ourselves bitten in turn. With this fare the company is kept busy, and so at last it disperses. When our friends have left us, we reckon up our accounts, now frowning over them like angry lions, now with useless care planning schemes for the distant future. We remember not the words of the Gospel: 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?'¹ We buy clothes, not solely for use, but for display. When we see a chance of making money, we quicken our steps, we talk fast, we strain our ears. If we are told that we have lost, as often must happen in business, our face is clouded with sorrow. A penny makes us contristamur. Unde, cum in uno homine animorum tam diversa sit facies, propheta dominum deprecatur dicens: 'Domine, in civitate tua imaginem eorum dissipa.' Cum enim ad imaginem et similitudinem Dei conditi sumus, ex vitio nostro et personas nobis plurimas superinducimus, et quomodo in theatralibus scaenis unus atque idem histrio nunc Herculem robustus ostentat, nunc mollis in Venerem frangitur, nunc tremulus in Cybelen, ita et nos, qui, si mundi non essemus, odiremur a mundo, tot habemus personarum similitudines, quot peccata.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Quapropter, quia vitae multum iam spatium transivimus fluctuando et navis nostra nunc procellarum concussa turbine, nunc scopulorum inlisionibus perforata est, quam primum licet, quasi quemdam portum secreta ruris intremus. Ibi cibarius panis et holus nostris manibus inrigatum, lac, deliciae rusticanae, viles quidem, sed innocentes cibos praebeant. Ita viventes non ab oratione somnus, non saturitas a lectione revocabit. Si aestas est, secretum arboris umbra praebebit; si autumnus, ipsa aeris temperies et strata subter folia locum quietis ostendit. Vere ager floribus depingitur et inter querulas aves psalmi dulcius decantabuntur. Si frigus fuerit et brumales nives, ligna non coemam: calidius vigilabo vel dormiam, certe, quod sciam, vilius non algebo. Habeat sibi Roma suos tumultos, harena saeviat, circus insaniat, theatra luxurient, et merry: a halfpenny makes us sad. Therefore, as the phases of one man's mind are so conflicting, the prophet prays to the Lord, saying: 'O Lord, in thy city scatter their image.'¹ For while we were created in God's image and likeness, by reason of our own perversity we hide ourselves behind changing masks, and as on the stage one and the same actor now figures as a brawny Hercules, and now relaxes into the softness of a Venus or the quivering tone of a Cybele, so we who, if we were not of the world, would be hated by the world, have a counterfeit mask for every sin to which we are inclined.

¹ Psalm lxxiii. 20. A.V. has 'when thou awakest,' but R.V. gives 'in the city' in margin = in civitate tua of Vulgate. (Psalm lxxii. 20.)

LETTER XLIII

Therefore, as to-day we have traversed a great part of life's journey through rough seas, and as our barque has been now shaken by tempestuous winds, now holed upon rugged rocks, let us take this first chance and make for the haven of a rural retreat. Let us live there on milk, on the bread we bake for ourselves, and on the greenstuff that we water with our own hands, country delicacies, cheap and harmless. If thus we spend our days, sleep will not call us away from prayer, nor overfeeding from study. In summer the shade of a tree will give us privacy. In autumn the mild air and the leaves beneath our feet point out a place for rest. In spring the fields are gay with flowers, and the birds' plaintive notes will make our psalms sound all the sweeter. When the cold weather comes with winter's snows, I shall not need to buy wood: whether I keep vigil or lie asleep, I shall be warmer there, and certainly as far as I know, I shall escape the cold at a cheaper rate. Let Rome keep her bustle for herself, the fury of the arena, the madness of the circus, the profligacy of the theatre, and—for I must not forget our Christian quia de nostris dicendum est, matronarum cotidie visitetur senatus: nobis adhaerere Deo bonum est, ponere in domino spem nostram, ut, cum paupertatem istam caelorum regna mutaverint, erumpamus in vocem: 'Quid enim mihi restat in caelo et a te quid volui super terram?' Quo scilicet, cum tanta reppererimus in caelo, parva et caduca quaesisse nos doleamus in terra.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

XLIV

AD MARCELLAM

Ut absentiam corporum spiritus confabulatione solemur, faciat unusquisque, quod praevalet. Vos dona transmittitis, nos epistulas remittimus gratiarum, ita tamen, ut, quia velatarum virginum munus est, aliqua in ipsis munusculis esse mysteria demonstremus. Saccus orationis signum atque ieiunii est; sellae, ut foras pedes virgo non moveat; cerei, ut accenso lumine sponsi expectetur adventus; calices mortificationem carnis ostendunt et semper animum ad martyrium praeparatum—'Calix' quippe 'domini inebrians perquam optimus'—quod autem et matronis offertis muscaria parvis animalibus ventilanda, procul ab illis abesse debere luxurias, quae cito cum isto interiturae mundo oleum vitae suavioris

¹ Psalm lxxiii. 25.

² Psalm xxiii. 5. Gallican psalter.

LETTER XLIII AND LETTER XLIV

friends—the daily meetings of the matrons' senate. For us it is good to cleave to God, and to put our hopes in the Lord, so that, when we have exchanged this poor life for the kingdom of heaven, we may cry aloud: 'Whom have I in heaven but thee? There is none upon earth that I desire beside thee.'¹ Assuredly, when we have found such wealth in heaven, we may well grieve to have sought after poor passing pleasures here on earth.

LETTER XLIV

TO MARCELLA

A letter of thanks

Written A.D. 385

LET us comfort ourselves for bodily absence by spiritual conversation, each and every one of us doing what we can do best. You send us gifts, we send you back letters of thanks; with this addition, as it is an offering to virgins who have taken the veil, that we point out to you that there are certain mysteries hidden in those dear presents of yours. Sackcloth is a sign of prayer and fasting; chairs warn us that a virgin does not go abroad; tapers are a reminder to have our lights burning as we await the Bridegroom's coming; cups signify mortification of the flesh and readiness for martyrdom—'How excellent is the Lord's cup that maketh drunk those who partake thereof!'² Furthermore, when you offer matrons fans to keep off flies, you show them that they must drive away all those wanton pleasures, which with this world so quickly perish and corrupt the oil of our exterminant. Hic typus virginum, haec figura sit matronarum. Nobis autem, in perversum licet, munera vestra conveniunt: sedere aptum est otiosis, in sacco iacere paenitentibus, calices habere potantibus, licet et propter nocturnos metus et animo semper malo conscientiae formidante cereos quoque accendisse sit gratum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

XLV

AD ASELLAM

1. Si tibi putem a me gratias referri posse, non sapiam. Potens est Deus super personam meam sanctae animae tuae restituere, quod meretur. Ego enim indignus nec aestimare umquam potui nec optare, ut mihi tantum in Christo largireris adfectum. Et licet me sceleratum quidam putent et omnibus flagitiis obrutum et pro peccatis meis etiam haec parva sint, tamen tu bene facis, quod ex tua mente etiam malos bonos putas. Periculosum quippe est de servo alterius iudicare, et non facilis venia prava dixisse de rectis. Veniet, veniet illa dies, et mecum dolebis ardere non paucos.

2. Ego probosus, ego versipellis et lubricus, ego

¹ This letter was written at Ostia in August A.D. 385, just before Jerome in company with his brother Paulinian and the priest Vincentius left Rome for the East. Paula and Eustochium followed him soon afterwards, and they all three settled at Bethlehem for the rest of their lives. For Asella, cf. Appendix, p. 485.

LETTER XLIV AND LETTER XLV

sweeter life. These are the types and figures that virgins and matrons may find in your gifts. To myself also they have an application; although in my case they go by the rule of contrary. Sitting on chairs is suitable for those who have no work to do, lying on sackcloth for those who repent of the past, holding cups for those who drink deep. It may be, however, that I shall be glad to light your tapers, both to banish the terrors of the night and also to appease the fears of a guilty conscience.

LETTER XLV

To ASELLA¹

Innocent friendships

WERE I to think that I could ever repay you for your kindness, I should indeed be lacking in wisdom. God alone is able to give the reward due to your pure spirit. For I am so unworthy of your great love that I have never been able to estimate its extent, or even to hope that you would bestow it upon me in Christ's name. And even though some people regard me as a villain loaded with iniquity, and even though such words are inadequate to my sins, yet you do well who in your own mind think that there is goodness even in bad men. Indeed it is dangerous to pass sentence on another's servant, and to speak evil of the upright is a thing not lightly to be excused. Soon, soon the day of judgment will be coming; and you and I then will see with grief that many are burning in the fire.

I a scandal, I a slippery turncoat, I a liar using mendax et Satanae arte decipiens! Quid est astutius, haec vel credidisse vel finxisse de insontibus, an etiam de noxiis credere noluisse? Oseulabantur mihi quidam manus et ore vipereo detrahebant; dolebant labiis, corde gaudebant: videbat dominus et subsannabat eos, et miserum servum suum futuro eum eis iudicio reservabat. Alius incessum meum ealumniabatur et risum, ille vultui detrahebat, haec in simplicitate aliud suspiceetur. Paene certe triennio cum eis vixi; multa me virginum crebro turba circumdedit; divinos libros, ut potui, nonnullis saepe disserui; lectio adsiduitatem, adsiduitas familiaritatem, familiaritas fiduciam fecerat. Dicant, quid unquam in me aliter senserint, quam Christianum decebat? Pecuniam cuius accepi? Munera vel parva vel magna non sprevi? In manu mea aes alicuius insonuit? Obliquus sermo, oculus petulans fuit? Nihil mihi aliud obicitur nisi sexus meus, et hoc numquam obicitur, nisi cum Hierosolyma Paula proficiscitur. Esto: erediderunt mentienti; eum non credunt neganti? Idem est homo ipse, qui fuerat: fatetur insontem, qui dudum noxium loquebatur; et certe veritatem magis exprimunt tormenta quam risus, nisi quod facilius creditur, quod aut fictum libenter auditur aut non fictum, ut fingatur, impellitur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Cf. Appendix, p. 492.

LETTER XLV

Satan's art to deceive! Which shows the greater subtlety, I wonder, to believe these charges (perhaps even to invent them about an innocent man), or to say: 'I do not wish to believe them even though he is guilty?' There were some who kissed my hands and maligned me with snakish tongue: their lips lamented, their hearts rejoiced. The Lord saw them and held them in derision, reserving them and His poor servant for common judgment in the future. One man cavilled at my manner of walking and laughing; another found in my expression something to dislike; a third lady would suspect something else in my simplicity. With such people I have been living for almost three years: frequently I was surrounded by a throng of virgins: to some of them I often discoursed on the Scriptures to the best of my ability: study brought about familiarity, familiarity friendship, friendship confidence. Let them say if they have ever noticed in my conduct anything unbecoming a Christian. Have I taken anyone's money? Have I not disdained all gifts great or small? Has the chink of anyone's coin ever been heard in my hand? Has my conversation ever been ambiguous, or my eye wanton? Nothing is laid to my charge except my sex, and that only when Paula is likely to set out for Jerusalem. Well, then; they believed him when he lied; why do they not believe him when he retracts? He is the very same man as before: he confesses I am innocent, though in the past he said I was guilty; and surely torture is more effective than laughter in forcing out the truth, except indeed that people are more ready to believe a tale which, though false, they hear with pleasure, and urge others to invent it if they have not done so already.¹

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Antequam domum sanctae Paulae nossem, totius in me urbis studia consonabant. Omnium paene iudicio dignus summo sacerdotio decernebar; beatæ memoriæ Damasi os meus sermo erat; dicebar sanetus, dicebar humilis et disertus. Numquid domum alicuius lascivioris ingressus sum? Numquid me vestes sericæ, nitentes gemmæ, picta facies, auri rapuit ambitio? Nulla fuit Romæ alia matronarum, quæ meam posset domare mentem, nisi lugens atque ieiunans, squalens sordibus, fletibus paene caecata, quam continuis noctibus domini misericordiam deprecantem sol sæpe deprehendit, cuius canticum psalmi sunt, sermo evangelium, deliciæ continentia, vita ieiunium. Nulla me alia potuit delectare, nisi illa, quam manducantem numquam vidi; postquam eam pro suæ merito sanctitatis venerari, colere, suspicere coepi, omnes me ilico deseruere virtutes.

4. O invidia primum mordax tui! O Satanae calliditas semper sancta persequens. Nullæ aliæ Romanæ urbi fabulam præbuerunt, nisi Paula et Melanium, quæ contemptis facultatibus pignoribusque desertis crucem domini quasi quoddam pietatis levavere vexillum. Baias peterent, unguenta eligerent, divitias et viduitatem haberent, materias luxuriæ et libertatis, domnae vocarentur et sanctæ: nunc in sacco et cinere formosæ volunt videri et in gehennæ ignis cum ieiuniis et pedore descendere.

¹ Cf. Appendix, pp. 493, 494.

LETTER XLV

Before I became acquainted with the households of the saintly Paula, all Rome was enthusiastic about me. Almost everyone concurred in judging me worthy of the highest office in the Church. My words were always on the lips of Damasus of blessed memory. Men called me saintly; men called me humble and eloquent. Did I ever enter the house of any woman who was inclined to wantonness? Was I ever attracted by silk dresses, flashing jewels, painted faces, display of gold? No other matron in Rome could dominate my mind but one who mourned and fasted, who was squalid with dirt, almost blinded by weeping. All night long she would beg the Lord for mercy, and often the sun found her still praying. The psalms were her music, the Gospels her conversation; continence was her luxury, her life a fast. No other could give me pleasure but one whom I never saw munching food. But when, recognizing the holiness of her life, I began to revere, respect, and venerate her, all my good qualities at once forsook me.

O tooth of envy, that dost ever first attack thyself! O cunning of Satan, that dost always persecute holy things! The only women to give Rome an opportunity for scandal were Paula and Melaniam,¹ who, scorning their wealth and deserting their children, lifted up the Lord's cross and took it as the standard of their faith. Had they frequented fashionable watering-places and used their own particular scent, had they employed their wealth and widow's freedom as opportunities for extravagance and self-indulgence, they would have been called 'Madam,' and 'saint.' As it is they wish to appear beautiful in sackcloth and ashes, and to go down to the fires of hell with fastings

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Videlicet non licet eis adplaudente populo perire cum turbis. Si gentiles hanc vitam carperent, si Iudaei, haberem solacium non placendi eis, quibus displicet Christus; nunc vero—pro nefas!—nomine Christianae praetermissa domum suarum cura et proprii oculi trabe neglecta in alieno festucam quaerunt. Lacerant sanctum propositum et remedium poenae suae arbitrantur, si nemo sit sanctus, si omnibus detrahatur, si turba sit pereuntium, multitudo peccantium.

5. Tibi placet lavare cotidie, alius has munditias sordes putat; tu attagenam ructuas et de comeso acipensere gloriaris, ego faba ventrem inpleo; te delectant cachinnantium greges, Paulam Melanimumque plangentium; tu aliena desideras, illae contemnunt sua; te delibuta melle vina delectant, illae potant aquam frigidam suaviorem; tu te perdere aestimas, quidquid in praesenti non hauseris, comederis, devoraris, et illae futura desiderant et credunt vera esse, quae scripta sunt. Esto: inepte et aniliter, quibus resurrectio persuasit corporum; quid ad te? Nobis e contrario tua vita displicet. Bono tuo crassus sis, me macies delectat et pallor; tu tales miseros arbitraris, nos te miseriorem putamus: invicem nobis videmur insani.

LETTER XLV

and filth. Oh, plainly they are not allowed to perish amid the mob's applause along with the multitude! If it were Gentiles or Jews who attacked this mode of life, I should have the consolation of not pleasing those to whom Christ Himself is distasteful. But, as it is, shame upon them, women, nominally Christian, neglecting their own households and disregarding the beam in their own eye look for a mote in their neighbour's. They tear religion to shreds, and think they have found a palliative for their own fate, if they can show that no one is a saint and that everyone has weaknesses, that great is the multitude of the sinners, and mighty the host of those that perish.

It is your pleasure to take a bath every day; another man thinks such refinement rubbish. You belch after a meal of wild duck and boast of the sturgeon you devour; I fill my belly with beans. You take delight in troops of jesters; Paula and Melaniam prefer those who weep. You want other people's goods; they despise their own. You like wine flavoured with honey; they have a sweeter drink, cold water. You consider that you are losing all that you have not at once drained dry, gobbled up, and devoured; they believe that the Scriptures are true and fix their desires on what is to come. Well, they are foolish old women to be persuaded of the resurrection of the body! But what is that to you? We for our part are not satisfied with your mode of life. Fatten yourself to your heart's content: I prefer a lean body and a pale face. You think people like us miserable: we regard you as more miserable still. Our opinion of you is like your opinion of us, and each in turn thinks the other insane.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Haec, mi domina Asella, cum iam navem conscenderem, raptim flens dolensque conscripsi, et gratias ago Deo meo, quod dignus sum, quem mundus oderit. Ora autem, ut de Babylone Hierosolyma regrediar nec mihi dominetur Nabuchodonosor, sed Iesus, filius Iosedech; veniat Hesdras, qui interpretatur 'adiutor,' et reducat me in patriam meam. Stultus ego, qui volebam canticum domini in terra aliena et deserto monte Sion Aegypti auxilium flagitabam. Non recordabar evangelii, quod, qui Hierusalem egreditur, statim incidit in latrones, spoliatur, vulneratur, occiditur. Sed licet sacerdos decipiat atque levites, Samaritanus ille misericors est, cui cum diceretur: 'Samarites es et daemonium habes,' daemonem rennuens Samariten non se negavit, quia, quem nos 'custodem,' Hebraei 'samariten' vocant. Maleficum me quidam gariunt: titulum fidei, servus agnosco; magum vocabant et Iudaei dominum meum, seductor et apostolus dictus est. 'Temptatio' me 'non adprehendit nisi humana.' Quotam partem angustiarum perpressus sum, qui cruci milito? Infamiam falsi criminis inportarunt, sed scio per bonam et malam famam perveniri ad regna caelorum.

7. Saluta Paulam et Eustochium—velit nolit mundus, in Christo meae sunt—saluta matrem Albinam sororesque Marcellas, Marcellinam quoque et sanctam Felicitatem, et dic eis: '“ Ante tribunal

¹ Cf. Haggai, i. 1, etc. It means that however ill the Jews had treated him, he would prefer the rule of Jerusalem to that of Babylon.

² Psalm exxxvii. 4.

³ St. Luke, x. 30 ff. Cf. St. John, viii. 48.

LETTER XLV

I write this in haste, dear lady Asella, as I go on board ship, grieving and in tears; and I thank my God that I am held worthy of the world's hate. Pray for me that from Babylon I may return to Jerusalem, and that Joshua, son of Josedech, may have dominion over me rather than Nebuchadnezzar,¹ and that Ezra, whose name means 'helper,' may come and bring me back to my own country. Foolish was I, who wished to sing the Lord's song in a strange land,² and left Mount Sion to seek the help of Egypt. I forgot the Gospel story,³ how that he who goes out from Jerusalem immediately falls among robbers, is stripped, wounded, and left for dead. But though priest and Levite pay no heed, there is the good Samaritan, who, when he was told, 'Thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil,' denied having a devil, but did not deny that he was a Samaritan, that name in Hebrew being equivalent to our 'guardian.' There are some men who style me a sorcerer: I, who am but a servant, recognize the word as a title of faith. The Jews called my master a magician, and the great apostle was spoken of as a deceiver. 'There hath no temptation taken me but such as is common to man.'⁴ How few troubles have I endured, I who am a soldier of the cross? Men have laid upon me the disgrace of a false charge, but I know that the road to the kingdom of heaven leads alike through good report and through evil.

Greet Paula and Eustochium for me—whether the world wills it or no, they are mine in Christ—also your mother Albina and your sisters the two Marcellas, together with Marcellina and the saintly Felicitas. Tell them this: 'We shall stand together

⁴ 1 Corinthians, x. 13.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Christi stabimus"; ibi parebit, qua mente quis vixerit.' Memento mei, exemplum pudicitiae et virginitatis insigne, fluctusque maris tuis precibus mitiga.

LII

AD NEPOTIANUM PRESBYTERUM

1. PETIS, Nepotiane carissime, litteris transmarinis et crebro petis, ut tibi brevi volumine digeram praecepta vivendi et, qua ratione is, qui saeculi militia derelicta vel monachus coeperit esse vel clericus, rectum Christi tramitem teneat, ne ad diversa vitiorum diverticula rapiatur. Dum essem adulescens, immo paene puer, et primos impetus lascivientis aetatis heremi duritia refrenarem, scripsi ad avunculum tuum, sanctum Heliodorum, exhortatoriam epistulam plenam lacrimis querimoniisque et quae deserti sodalis monstraret affectum. Sed in illo opere pro aetate tunc lusimus et calentibus adhuc rhetorum studiis atque doctrinis quaedam scolastico flore depinximus. Nunc iam cano capite ^{et} fronte, ad instar boum pendentibus a mento palearibus :

‘Frigidus obsistit circum praecordia sanguis’;

¹ Romans, xiv. 10.

² This letter, addressed to Nepotian and written in A.D. 394, is really a treatise on the duties of the clergy. Nepotian was the nephew of Heliodorus, a life-long friend of Jerome (cf. Letter XIV), who had become Bishop of Altinum. Both before Christ's judgment seat",¹ and there the thoughts of each man's life shall be revealed.' Remember me, my glorious pattern of chastity and virginity, and by your prayers appease the sea waves.

LETTER XLV AND LETTER LII

LETTER LII²

TO NEPOTIAN

A clergyman's duties

You ask me, my dearest Nepotian, in your letters from across the sea, and you ask me often, to set out for you in a brief digest some rules of life, showing how one who has renounced service in the world's army to become a monk or a clergyman may keep to the straight path of Christ and not be led astray into the haunts of vice. When I was a young man, scarcely more than a boy, and was trying to curb the first tides of youthful wantonness by the hardships of the desert, I wrote a letter of exhortation to your reverend uncle Heliodorus, to show him the feelings of the friend he had deserted by the tears and remonstrances with which it was filled. In that production I indulged my youthful fancy, and being still fired with enthusiasm for the teaching of the rhetoricians, I decked out some parts of it with the flowery language of the schools. To-day, however, my hair is grey, my forehead furrowed and dewlaps, like those of an ox, hang from my chin. As the poet says:

'The cold blood round my heart now hinders me';³

Nepotian and Heliodorus had been soldiers before joining the Church.

³ Virgil, Georgics, II. 484.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

unde et in alio loco idem poeta canit :

‘ Omnia fert actas, animum quoque ’;

et post modicum :

‘ Nunc oblita mihi tot carmina, vox quoque Moerim
Iam fugit.’

2. Quod ne de gentili tantum litteratura proferre videamur, divinorum voluminum sacramenta cognosce. David annos natus septuaginta, bellicosus quondam vir, senectute frigente non poterat calefieri. Queritur itaque puella de universis finibus Israhel Abisag Somanitis, quae cum rege dormiret et senile corpus calefaceret. Nonne tibi videtur, si occidentem sequaris litteram, vel figmentum esse de mimo vel Atellanarum ludicra? Frigidus senex obvolvitur vestimentis et nisi complexu adolescentulae non tepescit. Vivebat adhuc Bersabee, supererat Abigea et reliquae uxores eius et concubinae, quas scriptura commemorat: omnes quasi frigidae repudiantur, in unius tantum grandaevus calescit amplexibus. Abraham multo David senior fuit et tamen vivente Sarra aliam non quaesivit uxorem; Isaac duplices David annos habuit et cum Rebecca iam vetula numquam refrixit; taceo de prioribus ante diluvium viris, qui post annos nongentos non dico senilibus, sed paene iam cariosis artibus nequaquam puellares quaesiere complexus; certe Moyses, dux Israhelitici populi, centum viginti annos habebat et Sephoram non mutavit.

¹ Virgil, Bucolics, IX. 51.

² Virgil, Bucolics, IX. 53.

³ The Atellan plays were broad farces popular on the Roman stage.

LETTER LII

and in another passage :

‘ Age carries all things, e’en the mind, away ’ ; ¹ and a little later :

‘ Those songs are all forgotten, and his voice
Has left poor Moeris.’ ²

But that I may not seem to quote only from heathen literature, listen to the sacred teaching of God’s Book. David once had been a man of war, but in his seventieth year old age had chilled him and he could never get warm. Accordingly they looked for a girl in all the land of Israel and brought in Abishag the Shunamite to sleep with the king and warm his aged limbs. If you were to follow the letter that killeth, does not this seem to you an incident invented for a farce or a broad jest from an Atellan play? ³ The old man’s cold body is wrapped in blankets, but nothing save a young girl’s embrace can warm him. Bathsheba was still alive and Abigail was also at his service, together with all his other wives and concubines of whom Scripture tells us. But they are all rejected as lacking heat, and it is in the arms of one girl only that the ancient grows warm again. Abraham was far older than David, but while Sarah was still living he did not seek another wife. Isaac had twice David’s years, and yet never felt cold with Rebecca, even when she was an old woman. I say nothing of the men before the flood, who after nine hundred years must have found their limbs not merely aged but almost rotten with time and still never sought a young girl’s embraces. Certainly Moses, the leader of the people of Israel, lived to be a hundred and twenty without changing his Sephora.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Quae est igitur ista Somanitis uxor et virgo tam fervens, ut frigidum calciferet, tam sancta, ut calentem ad libidinem non provocaret? Exponat sapientissimus Salomon patris sui delicias et pacificus bellatoris viri narret amplexus: ' Posside sapientiam, posside intelligentiam. Ne obliviscaris, et ne declinaveris a verbis oris mei, et ne deliqueris eam, et adprehendet te; ama illam et servabit te. Principium sapientiae: posside sapientiam et in omni possessione tua posside intelligentiam; circumda illam et exaltabit te; honora illam et amplexabitur te, ut det capiti tuo coronam gratiarum, corona quoque deliciarum protegat te.'

Omnes paene virtutes corporis mutantur in senibus et increscente sola sapientia decrescunt ceterae: ieiunia, chameuniae, huc illucque discursus, peregrinorum susceptio, defensio pauperum, standi in oratione perseverantia, visitatio languentium, labor manuum, unde praebeantur elemosynae, et, ne sermonem longius traham, cuncta, quae per corpus exercentur, fracto corpore minora fiunt. Nec hoc dico, quod in iuvenibus et adhuc solidioris aetatis, his dumtaxat, qui labore et ardentissimo studio, vitae quoque sanctimonia et orationis ad Deum frequentia scientiam secuti sunt, frigeat sapientia, quae in plerisque senibus aetate marcescit, sed quod adulescentia multa corporis bella sustineat et inter incentiva vitiorum et carnis titillationes quasi ignis in lignis viridioribus suffocetur et suum non possit explicare fulgorem. Senectus vero—rursus admoneo—eorum, qui adulescentiam suam honestis artibus

¹ Jerome takes the story of the Shunamite (1 Kings, i) as an allegory.

² Proverbs, iv. 5.

LETTER LII

Who then is this Shunamite, this wife and virgin, so fervid as to give heat to the cold, so holy as not to excite to lust the man she had warmed?¹ Let Solomon, wisest of men, tell us of his father's darling, and let the man of peace recount the embraces of the man of war. 'Get wisdom, get understanding: forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not and she shall preserve thee: love her and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing, therefore get wisdom, and with all thy getting get understanding. Exalt her and she shall promote thee. She shall bring thee to honour when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.'²

In the case of old men, almost all bodily excellences are changed, and while wisdom alone increases they decrease. Fasting, sleeping on the ground, moving to and fro, hospitality to strangers, the defence of the poor, perseverance in standing at prayer, visiting the sick, manual labour to supply money for almsgiving, in fact, not to be tedious, all actions that depend on the body's agency become less as the body decays. I do not say that young men or even those of riper vigour—provided that by labour and ardent study, by a holy life and frequent prayer to God they have attained knowledge—lack the warmth of wisdom which in many old men is withered by age; but I do say that youth has to endure many conflicts with the body, and amid incentives to vice and titillations of the flesh, it is stifled, as a fire is when it is fed with green wood and cannot display its proper brightness. Old age, however—I repeat my warning—if men have trained their youth in honourable instruxerunt et in lege dominⁱ meditati sunt die ac nocte, aetate fit doctior, usu tritior, processu temporis sapientior et veterum studiorum dulcissimos fructos metit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Unde et sapiens ille Graeciae, cum expletis centum et septem annis se mori cerneret, dixisse fertur dolere, quod tunc egrederetur e vita, quando sapere coepisset; Plato octogesimo et uno anno scribens est mortuus; Isocrates nonaginta et novem annos in docendi scribendique labore complevit; taceo ceteros philosophos, Pythagoram, Democritum, Xenocratem, Zenonem, Cleanthem, qui iam aetate longaeva in sapientiae studiis floruerunt: ad poetas venio, Homerum, Hesiodum, Simonidem, Stesichorum, qui grandes natu cygneum nescio quid et solito dulcius vicina morte cecinerunt. Sophocles, cum propter nimiam senectutem et rei familiaris negligentiam a filiis accusaretur amentiae, Oedipi fabulam, quam nuper scripserat, recitavit iudicibus et tantum sapientiae in aetate iam fracta specimen dedit, ut severitatem tribunalium in theatri favorem verteret. Nec mirum, cum etiam Cato, Romani generis disertissimus, censorius iam et senex, Graecas litteras nec erubuerit nec desperaverit discere. Certe Homerus refert, quod de lingua Nestoris iam vetuli et paene decrepiti dulcior melle oratio fluxerit.

Sed et ipsius 'Abisag' nominis sacramentum sapientiam senum indicat ampliorem. Interpretatur

¹ Theophrastus. Cf. Cicero, Tusc. Disp. III. 69.

² Hom. Il. i. 248: ἡδυεπής . . . τοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ γλώσσης μέλιτος γλυκίων ῥέεν αὐδή.

LETTER LII

accomplishments and day and night have meditated on the Lord's law, becomes more learned by time, more subtle by experience, more wise by lapse of years and reaps the sweet fruit of its ancient studies.

Therefore it was that the Greek sage,¹ when he had reached his hundred and seventh year and saw himself near to death, is said to have expressed his grief at passing away from life just at the moment when he was beginning to have wisdom. Plato died in his eighty-first year with the pen in his hand; Isocrates filled ninety-nine years with the labour of teaching and writing. I say nothing of the other philosophers, Pythagoras, Democritus, Xenocrates, Zeno, Cleanthes, whose long life flourished ever in studies of wisdom. I come to the poets, Homer, Hesiod, Simonides, Stesichorus, who in their old age, when death drew near, sang a swan's song sweeter even than their wont. Sophocles in extreme old age neglected his affairs and was accused by his sons of mental incapacity. But when he read to the court his recently composed play, Oedipus, and in spite of bodily weakness gave so signal a proof of wisdom, he turned the strict judgment of a tribunal into the enthusiastic applause of a theatre. Nor need we wonder, seeing that Cato, the most eloquent of the Romans, after he had been censor and was now an old man, did not blush to learn Greek nor despair of acquiring knowledge of that language. Homer certainly tells us that when Nestor was very old and almost decrepit, speech that was sweeter than honey flowed from his tongue.²

Even the name Abishag in its mystical interpretation points to the greater wisdom that old men possess. It can be explained as meaning 'my enim 'pater meus superfluus' vel 'patris mei rugitus.' Verbum 'superfluum' ambiguum est et in praesenti loco virtutem sonat, quod amplior sit in senibus et redundans ac larga sapientia, in alio autem loco 'superfluus' quasi 'non necessarius' ponitur. 'Sag' autem, id est 'rugitus,' proprie nuncupatur, cum maris fluctus resonant et, ut ita dicam, de pelago veniens fremitus auditur. Ex quo ostenditur abundantissimum et ultra humanam vocem divini sermonis in senibus tonitruum commorari. Porro 'Somanitis' in lingua nostra 'cocinea' dicitur, ut significet calere sapientiam et divina lectione fervere; quod, licet dominici sanguinis indicet sacramentum, tamen et fervorem ostendit sapientiae. Unde et obstetrix illa in Genesi coccinum ligat in manu Phares, qui ab eo, quod parietem dividerat duos ante populos separantem, 'divisoris,' id est 'Phares,' sortitus est nomen. Et Raab meretrix in typo ecclesiae resticulam mysteria sanguinis continentem, ut Hiericho pereunte salvaretur, adpendit. Et in alio loco de viris sanctis scriptura commemorat: 'Hi sunt, Cinaei qui venerunt de calore domus Rechab.' Et dominus noster in evangelio: 'Ignem,' inquit, 'veni mittere in terram et quam volo, ut ardeat!' Qui in discipulorum corde succensus cogebat eos dicere: 'Nonne cor nostrum erat ardens in nobis, dum loqueretur in via et aperiret nobis scripturas?'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Quorsum haec tam longo repetita principio? Ne a me quaeras pueriles declamationes, sententiarum flosculos, verborum lenocinia et per fines

¹ Cf. Genesis, xxxviii. 27.

² 1 Chronicles, ii. 55—in Vulgate.

LETTER LII

father's superfluity' or 'my father's roaring.' The word 'superfluity' is ambiguous, and in the present case means 'excellence,' inasmuch as in old men wisdom is more copious, redundant, and plentiful. In other cases, however, superfluous means unnecessary. As for 'shag,' that is, 'roaring,' the word is properly used of the sound of sea waves, when, so to speak, we hear the ocean murmuring. Thereby we see that the thunder of God's speech lingers in the ears of old men and is more excellent than human voice. Furthermore, 'Shunamite' in our language means scarlet, signifying the warmth of wisdom when it is fired by reading in God's Book: it contains a mystical reference to Our Lord's blood, but it also indicates the fervour of wisdom. So the midwife¹ in Genesis ties a scarlet thread to Phares' hand, Phares 'the divider,' because he divided the wall which till then kept the two peoples apart. The harlot Rahab also, who typifies the Church, fastened a scarlet cord to her window in mystical reference to His bloodshedding, so that she might be saved from Jericho's downfall. In another passage again the Scripture says of holy men: 'These are the Kenites who came from the warmth of the house of Rechab.'² Finally, Our Lord says in the Gospel: 'I am come to cast fire upon the earth, and fain am I to see it kindled.'³ That fire, when kindled in the disciples' hearts, forced them to say: 'Did not our heart burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?'⁴

Why all these far-fetched references, you may ask. I want you not to expect from me any boyish declamation or flowery sentiment. Here there will

¹ with the holy spirit
² St. Luke, xii. 49 (slightly altered). ³ St. Luke, xxiv. 32.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

capitum singulorum acuta quaedam breviterque conclusa, quae plausus et clamores excitent audientum. Amplexetur me modo sapientia et Abisag nostra, quae numquam senescit, in meo requiescat sinu. Inpolluta est virginitatisque perpetuae et in similitudinem Mariae, cum cotidie generet semperque parturiat, incorrupta est. Hinc reor dixisse et apostolum 'spiritu ferventes' et in evangelio dominum praedicasse, quod in fine mundi, quando iuxta prophetam Zachariam stultus pastor esse coeperit, sapientia decrescente 'refrigescet caritas multorum.' Audi igitur, ut beatus Cyprianus ait, 'non diserta, sed fortia.' Audi fratrem collegio, patrem senio, qui te ab incunabulis fidei usque ad perfectam ducat aetatem et per singulos gradus vivendi praecepta constituens in te ceteros erudiat. Scio quidem ab avunculo tuo, beato Heliodoro, qui nunc pontifex Christi est, te et didicisse, quae sancta sunt, et cotidie discere normamque vitae eius exemplum habere virtutum; sed et nostra, qualiacumque sunt, suscipe et libellum hunc libello illius copulato, ut, cum ille te monachum erudierit, hic clericum doceat esse perfectum.

5. Igitur clericus, qui Christi servit ecclesiae, interpretetur primum vocabulum suum et nominis definitione praelata nitatur esse, quod dicitur. Si enim κληρος Graece 'sors' Latine appellatur, propterea vocantur clerici, vel quia de sorte sunt domini vel quia dominus ipse sors, id est pars, clericorum est. Qui autem vel ipse pars domini est vel dominum partem habet, talem se exhibere be no meretricious writing, no terse pointed epigrams at the end of each paragraph, put in to excite my audience to loud applause. Let wisdom alone embrace me; let my Abishag who never grows old nestle in my arms. She is undefiled and ever virgin: like Mary every day she brings forth and is always in labour, but still she is stainless. Hence, methinks, the apostle said: 'Be fervent in spirit';¹ hence also Our Lord in the Gospel declared that at the end of the world—when, according to the prophet Zechariah,² the shepherd shall begin to grow foolish—with the decay of wisdom, 'the love of many shall wax cold.'³ Listen then, as the blessed Cyprian says, to words that are weighty rather than eloquent: listen to one who is your brother in orders and your father in years, one who can guide you from faith's cradle to perfect manhood, and by setting forth precepts of life step by step may instruct others in instructing you. I know that from your uncle, the reverend Heliodorus who is now one of Christ's bishops, you have already learned and are still daily learning all that is holy and that you have the rule of his life as an example of virtue set before you. Take then this letter of mine for what it is worth and join my precepts to his, so that the one may train you in a monk's duties, the other may teach you to be a perfect clergyman.

¹ Romans, xii. 11. ² Zech. xi. 16. ³ St. Matthew, xxiv. 12.

⁴ Or else because they administer the κληρος, the Church estates. Cf. Fathers of the Church, p. 12.

LETTER LII

A clergyman then, who is a servant in Christ's Church, should first know the meaning of his name; and when he has that accurately defined, he should then strive to be what he is called. For since the Greek κληρος means 'lot' or 'portion,' the clergy are so named, either because they are the Lord's portion, or else because the Lord is theirs.⁴ Now he who himself is the Lord's portion, or has the Lord for debet, ut et possideat dominum et ipse possideatur a domino. Qui dominum possidet et cum propheta dicit: 'Pars mea dominus,' nihil extra dominum habere potest, quod, si quippiam aliud habuerit praeter dominum, pars eius non erit dominus. Verbi gratia, si aurum, si argentum, si possessiones, si variam suppellectilem, cum his partibus dominus pars eius fieri non dignatur. Si autem ego pars domini sum et ~~funiculus~~^{habitus} hereditatis eius, nec accipio partem inter ceteras tribus, sed quasi levita et sacerdos vivo de decimis et altari serviens altaris oblatione sustentor, habens victum et vestitum his contentus ero et nudam crucem nudus sequar. Obsecro itaque te, 'et repetens iterum iterumque monebo,' ne officium clericatus genus antiquae militiae putes, id est, ne lucra saeculi in Christi quaeras militia, ne plus habeas, quam quando clericus esse coepisti, et dicatur tibi: 'Cleri eorum non proderunt eis.' Mensulam tuam pauperes et peregrini et cum illis Christus conviva noverit; negotiatorem clericum et ex inope divitem et ex ignobili gloriosum quasi quandem pestem fugc. 'Corrumpunt mores bonos confabulationes pessimae.' Tu aurum contemnis, alius diligit; tu calcas opes, ille sectatur; tibi cordi est silentium, mansuetudo, secretum, illi verbositas, adtrita frons, fora placent et plateae ac medicorum tabernae: in tanta morum discordia quae potest esse concordia?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Psalm lxxiii. 26.

² Virgil, Aeneid, III. 436.

³ Jeremiah, xii. 13:—οἱ κληροὶ αὐτῶν οὐκ ὠφελήσουσιν αὐτούς. The LXX which Jerome quotes differs from the Vulgate and A.V. There is a play on the two meanings of κληροί—portions and clergy.

⁴ I Corinthians, xv. 33.

LETTER LII

his portion, must so bear himself as to possess the Lord and be possessed by Him. He who possesses the Lord and says with the prophet:¹ 'The Lord is my portion,' can have nothing outside the Lord; for if he has anything except the Lord, the Lord will not be his portion. For example, if he has gold and silver, land and inlaid furniture, with portions such as these the Lord will not deign to be his portion. If I am the Lord's portion and in the line of His inheritance, I receive no portion among the other tribes, but like the Priest and the Levite I live on tithes, and serving the altar am supported by the altar offerings. Having food and raiment I shall be satisfied with them, and naked shall follow the naked cross. So I beseech you and 'again and yet again my words repeat,'² do not think that clerical orders are but a variety of your old military service; that is, do not look for worldly gain when you are fighting in Christ's army, lest, having more than when you first became a clergyman, you hear it said of you: 'Their portions (κλήροι) shall not profit them.'³ Let poor men and strangers be acquainted with your modest table, and with them Christ shall be your guest. Avoid, as you would the plague, a clergyman who is also a man of business, one who has risen from poverty to wealth, from obscurity to a high position. 'Evil communications corrupt good manners.'⁴ You despise gold; the other loves it. You trample money underfoot; he pursues it. You delight in silence, peacefulness, solitude; he prefers talking and effrontery, the markets and the streets and the apothecaries' shops. When your ways are so diverse, what unity of heart can there be between you?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Hospitiolum tuum aut raro aut numquam mulierum pedes terant. Omnes puellas et virgines Christi aut aequaliter ignora aut aequaliter dilige. Ne sub eodem tecto manseris; ne in praeterita castitate confidas. Nec David sanctior nec Salomone potes esse sapientior; memento semper, quod paradisi colonum de possessione sua mulier eiecerit. Aegrotanti tibi sanctus quilibet frater adsistat et germana vel mater aut probatae quaelibet apud omnes fidei. Quod si huiusce modi non fuerint consanguinitatis castimoniaeque personae, multas anus nutrit ecclesia, quae et officium praebeant et beneficium accipiant ministrando, ut infirmitas quoque tua fructum habeat elemosynae. Scio quosdam convaluisse corpore et animo aegrotare coepisse. Periculose tibi ministrat, cuius vultum frequenter adtendis. Si propter officium clericatus aut vidua tibi visitatur aut virgo, numquam domum solus introeas talesque habeto socios, quorum contubernio non infameris. Si lector, si acolythus, si psalter te sequitur, non ornentur vestibus, sed moribus, nec calamistro crispent comas, sed pudicitiam habitu polliceantur. Solus cum sola secreto et absque arbitro non sedeas. Si familiaris est aliquid loquendum, habet nutricem, maiorem domus virginem, viduam, maritatam; non est tam inhumana, ut nullum praeter te habeat, cui se audeat credere. Caveto omnes suspiciones et, quid-

LETTER LII

A woman's foot should seldom or never cross the threshold of your humble lodging. To all maidens and to all Christ's virgins show the same disregard or the same affection. Do not remain under the same roof with them; do not trust your chastity in the past. You cannot be a man more saintly than David, or more wise than Solomon. Remember always that a woman drove the tiller of Paradise from the garden that had been given him. If you are ill let one of the brethren attend you, or else your sister or your mother or some woman of universally approved faith. If there are no persons marked out by ties of kinship, or reputation for chastity, the Church maintains many elderly women who by their services can both help you and benefit themselves, so that even your sickness may bear fruit in almsgiving. I know of some whose bodily recovery coincided with spiritual sickness. There is danger for you in the ministrations of one whose face you are continually watching. If in the course of your clerical duties you have to visit a widow or a virgin, never enter the house alone, and let your associates be men whose fellowship brings no disgrace. If a reader or acolyte or psalm-singer comes with you, let their character, not their dress, be their adornment; let them not wave their hair with curling tongs but let their outward looks be a guarantee of their chastity. Never sit alone and without witnesses with a woman in a quiet place. If there is anything intimate she wants to say, she has a nurse or some elderly virgin at home, some widow or married woman. She cannot be so cut off from human society as to have no one but yourself to whom she can trust her secret. Beware of men's suspicious quid probabiliter fingi potest, ne fingatur, ante devita. Crebra munuscula et orariola et fasciolas, et vestes ori adplicatas, et degustatos cibos blandasque et dulces litterulas sanctus amor non habet. 'Mel meum, lumen meum meumque desiderium' et ceteras ineptias amatorum, omnes delicias et lepores et risu dignas urbanitates in comoediis erubescimus, in saeculi hominibus detestamur: quanto magis in clericis et in clericis monachis, quorum et sacerdotium proposito et propositum ornatur sacerdotio! Nec hoc dico, quod aut in te aut in sanctis viris ista formidem, sed quod in omni proposito, in omni gradu et sexu et boni et mali repperiantur malorumque condemnatio laus bonorum sit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Pudet dicere: sacerdotes idolorum, mimi et aurigae et scorta hereditates capiunt; solis clericis et monachis hoc lege prohibetur et prohibetur non a persecutoribus, sed a principibus Christianis. Nec de lege conqueror, sed doleo, cur meruerimus hanc legem. Cauterium bonum est, sed quo mihi vulnus, ut indigeam cauterio? Provida severaque legis cautio, et tamen nec sic refrenatur avaritia. Per fidei commissa legibus inludimus, et quasi maiora sint imperatorum seita quam Christi, leges timemus, evangelia contemnimus. Sit heres, sed mater filiorum, id est gregis sui, ecclesia, quae illos genuit, nutrit et pavit. Quid nos inserimus inter matrem thoughts, and if a tale can be invented with some probability avoid giving the scandalmonger his opportunity. Frequent gifts of handkerchiefs and ties, pressing a woman's dress to your lips, tasting her food beforehand, writing her fond and flattering billets-doux, of all this a holy love knows nothing. 'My honey, my light, my darling'—lover's nonsense like this, and all such wanton playfulness and ridiculous courtesy, makes us blush when we hear it on the stage, and seems detestable even on the lips of worldlings. How much more loathsome is it then in the case of monks and clergymen who adorn the priesthood with their vows and their vows with the priesthood! I say this not because I fear such errors in you or in any holy man, but because in every order, in every rank and sex, both good and bad people are to be found, and to condemn the bad is to praise the good.

¹ By Valentinian, A.D. 368.

LETTER LII

I am ashamed to say it, but priests who serve idols, actors, charioteers, and harlots can all inherit property: clergymen and monks alone are by law debarred, a law passed not by persecutors but by Christian emperors.¹ I do not complain of the enactment, but it grieves me to think that we deserved it. A cautery is a good thing, but how is it I have a wound that needs a cautery? The law's precaution is stern and prudent; yet even so greed is not checked. By a fiction of trusteeship we elude its provisions, and, as though imperial enactments were of more importance than Christ's commands, we fear the laws and despise the Gospels. If there must be an heir, let the Church inherit from the children who are her flock, the Church who bore reared and fed them. Why do we thrust ourselves et liberos? Gloria episcopi est pauperum opibus providere, ignominia omnium sacerdotum est propriis studere divitiis. Natus in paupere domo et in tugurio rusticano, qui vix milio et cibario pane rugientem saturare ventrem poteram, nunc similam et mella fastidio, novi et genera et nomina piscium, in quo litore conca lecta sit calleo, saporibus avium discerno provincias et ciborum me raritas ac novissime damna ipsa delectant.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Audio praeterca in senes et anus absque liberis quorundam turpe servitium. Ipsi apponunt mattulam, obsident lectum, et purulentias stomachi et phlegmata pulmonis manu propria suscipiunt. Pavent ad introitum medici trementibusque labiis, an commodius habeant, sciscitantur et, si paululum senex vegetior fuerit, periclitantur ac simulata laetitia mens intrinsecus avara torquetur. Timent enim, ne perdant ministerium, et vivacem senem Mathusalae annis comparant. O quanta apud dominum merces, si in praesenti pretium non speraret! Quantis sudoribus hereditas cassa expetitur! Minori labore margaritum Christi emi poterat.

7. Divinas scripturas saepius lege, immo numquam de manibus tuis sacra lectio deponatur. Disce, quod doceas; obtine eum, qui secundum doctrinam est, in between mother and children? It is the glory of a bishop to provide means for the poor, but it is a disgrace for any priest to think of wealth for himself. Though I was born in a humble home beneath the roof of a country cottage and once could scarcely get enough millet and coarse bread to satisfy the howlings of my stomach, yet now I turn up my nose at wheaten flour and honey cakes, I know the various kinds of fish and their different names, I can tell for certain on what coast an oyster has been picked,¹ I can distinguish by the taste from what province a bird comes, and it is the rarity of a dish and, in the last stage, the money that is wasted on it that gives me pleasure.

¹ Cf. Juv. iv. 140.

² The orbi and orbae constantly referred to in Latin literature; cf. especially Horace, Sat. II. v. and Juv. vi. 39, xii. 99.

LETTER LII

I have been told that in some cases disgraceful court is paid to old men and women who have no children.² These servile flatterers fetch the basin, sit by the bed, and catch in their own hands ordure and spittle. They tremble at the doctor's appearance, and with quivering lips inquire if his patient is better. If for a little while the old fellow plucks up some strength, they are at their wits' end, and while they pretend to be glad their greedy soul suffers torments within. For they are afraid that they may have wasted their attentions, and they compare an old man with a good hold on life to Methuselah. How great would be their reward with the Lord, if they did not hope for immediate profit. With what labour do they seek an empty inheritance! At less trouble they could have bought for themselves the pearl of Christ.

Read God's Book continually; nay, never let the sacred volume be out of your hand. Learn, so that you may teach. Hold fast to the words of faith, fidelem sermonem, ut possis exhortari in doctrina sana et contradicentes revincere. 'Permane in his, quae didicisti et credita sunt tibi, sciens, a quo didiceris,' 'paratus semper ad satisfactionem omniposcenti te rationem de ea, quae in te est, spe.' Non confundant opera sermonem tuum, ne, cum in ecclesia loqueris, tacitus quilibet respondeat: 'Cur ergo haec ipse non facis?' Delicatus magister est, qui pleno ventre de ieiuniis disputat; accusare avaritiam et latro potest; sacerdotis Christi mens osque concordent.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Esto subiectus pontifici tuo et quasi animae parentem suspice: amare filiorum, timere servorum est: 'Et si pater sum,' inquit, 'ubi est honor meus? et si dominus ego sum, ubi est timor meus?' Plura tibi in eodem viro observanda sunt nomina: monachus, pontifex, avunculus. Sed et episcopi sacerdotes se sciant esse, non dominos: honorent clericos quasi clericos, ut et ipsis a clericis quasi episcopis deferatur. Scitum illud est oratoris Domitii: 'Ego te,' inquit, 'habeam ut principem, cum tu me non habeas ut senatorem?' Quod Aaron et filios eius, hoc episcopum et presbyteros noverimus: unus dominus, unum templum, unum sit etiam ministerium. Recordemur semper, quid apostolus Petrus praecipiat sacerdotibus: 'Pascite eum, qui in vobis est, gregem domini providentes non coacto, sed

¹ Titus, i. 9; ² Timothy, iii. 14. ² 1 Peter, iii. 15.

³ Malachi, i. 6.

⁴ Cf. Cicero, De Oratore, III. 1: cum sibi illum consulem esse negaret, cui senator ipse non esset.

LETTER LII

according to sound doctrine, so that you may be able thereby to exhort and refute the gainsayers. 'Continue thou in the things that thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them';¹ and 'Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope and faith that are in you.'² Your deeds must not belie your words, lest, when you are speaking in church, some one may say to himself: 'Why do you not practise what you preach?' A teacher fond of good living may fill his own stomach and then discourse on the benefits of fasting; even a robber can possibly accuse others of greed; but in a priest of Christ mind and mouth should be in harmony.

Be obedient to your bishop, and respect him as your spiritual father. Sons love, slaves fear. 'If I be a father,' says the Scripture, 'where is mine honour? and if I am a master, where is my fear?'³ In your case one and the same man has many titles to your respect: he is monk, bishop, uncle. But even bishops should realize they are priests, not lords; they should give to clergymen the honour that is their due, so that the clergy may offer them the respect proper to bishops. The orator Domitius spoke to the point when he said: 'Why should I treat you as leader of the Senate, when you do not treat me as a senator?'⁴ We should recognize that a bishop and his presbyters are like Aaron and his sons. There is but one Lord and one Temple; there should be also but one ^{metrou, et suruice} ministry. Let us always remember the charge which the apostle Peter gives to priests: 'Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof not by constraint spontanee secundum Deum, neque turpilucris gratia, sed voluntarie, neque ut dominantes in cleris, sed forma facti gregi et ex animo, ut, cum apparuerit princeps pastorum, percipiatis inmarcescibilem gloriae coronam.' Pessimae consuetudinis est in quibusdam ecclesiis tacere presbyteros et praesentibus episcopis non loqui, quasi aut invideant aut non dignentur audire. 'Et si alii,' inquit Paulus apostolus, 'fuerit revelatum sedenti, prior tacet. Potestis enim per singulos prophetare, ut omnes discant et omnes consolentur. Et spiritus prophetarum prophetis subiectus est: non enim est dissensionis Deus, sed pacis.' Gloria patris est filius sapiens; gaudeat episcopus iudicio suo, cum tales Christo elegerit sacerdotes.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. Dicente te in ecclesia non clamor populi, sed gemitus suscitetur; lacrimae auditorum laudes tuae sint; sermo presbyteri scripturarum lectione conditus sit. Nolo te declamatorem esse et rabulam garrulumque, sed mysterii peritum et sacramentorum Dei tui eruditissimum. Verba volvere et celeritate dicendi apud inperitum vulgus admirationem sui facere indoctorum hominum est. Adtrita frons interpretatur saepe, quod nescit, et, cum aliis suaserit, sibi quoque usurpat scientiam. Praeceptor quondam meus Gregorius Nazianzenus rogatus a me, ut exponeret, quid sibi vellet in Luca sabbatum δευτερόπρωτον, id est 'secundoprimum,' eleganter lusit: 'Docebo

¹ 1 Peter, v. 2.

² 1 Corinthians, xiv. 30.

³ The great Cappadocian preacher, born A.D. 330.

⁴ St. Luke, vi. 1; cf. Leviticus, xxiii. 15.

LETTER LII

but willingly as God would have you; not for filthy lucre but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage but being examples to the flock, and that gladly, that when the chief shepherd shall appear ye may receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.'¹ It is a very bad custom in some churches for presbyters to be silent and to refrain from speech in the presence of bishops, on the ground that these latter would either be jealous of them or think it unbecoming to be listeners. The apostle Paul says: 'If anything be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace. For ye may all prophesy one by one that all may learn and all may be comforted; and the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets. For God is not the author of confusion but of peace.'² A wise son is a glory to his father; and a bishop should rejoice in his own good judgment, when he chooses such to be priests of Christ.

When you are preaching in church try to evoke not applause but lamentation. Let the tears of your audience be your glory. A presbyter's discourse should be seasoned by his reading of Scripture. Be not a declaimer nor a ranter nor a gabbler, but show yourself skilled in God's mysteries and well acquainted with the secret meaning of His words. Only ignorant men like to roll out phrases and to excite the admiration of the unlettered crowd by the quickness of their utterance. Effrontery often tries to explain things of which it knows nothing, and having persuaded others claims knowledge for itself. My former teacher, Gregory of Nazianzus,³ when I asked him to explain the meaning of St. Luke's phrase δευτερόπρωτον,⁴ that is, 'second first' sabbath, wittily te,' inquit, ' super hac re in ecclesia, in qua omni mihi populo acclamante cogaris invitus scire, quod nescis, aut certe, si solus tacueris, solus ab omnibus stultitiae condemnaberis.' Nihil tam facile, quam vilem plebicum et indoctam contionem linguae volubilitate decipere, quae, quidquid non intellegit, plus miratur. Marcus Tullius, ad quem pulcherrimum illud elogium est: ' Demosthenes tibi praeripuit, ne esses primus orator, tu illi, ne solus,' in oratione pro Quinto Gallio quid de favore vulgi et de inperitis contionatoribus loquatur, attende: ' His autem ludis—loquor enim, quae sunt ipse nuper expertus—unus quidam poeta dominatur, homo per-litteratus, cuius sunt illa convivia poetarum ac philosophorum, cum facit Euripiden et Menandrum inter se et alio loco Socraten atque Epicurum disserentes, quorum aetates non annis, sed saeculis scimus fuisse disiunctas. Atque his quantos plausus et clamores movet! Multos enim condiscipulos habet in theatro, qui simul litteras non didicerunt.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Vestes pullas aequae vita ut candidas; ornatus et sordes pari modo fugiendae, quia alterum delicias, alterum gloriam redolet. Non absque amictu lineo incedere, sed pretium vestium linearum non habere laudabile est; alioquin ridiculum et plenum dedecoris referto marsupio, quod sudarium orariumque non habeas, gloriari. Sunt, qui pauperibus parum trievaded my request. 'I will tell you about that in church,' he said, 'and there, when all the people applaud me, you will be compelled against your wish to know what you do not know, or else, if you alone remain silent, you will undoubtedly be put down by every one as a fool.' There is nothing so easy as to deceive a cheap mob or an ignorant congregation by voluble talk; anything such people do not understand they admire all the more. Listen to Cicero, the man to whom that glorious eulogy was addressed: 'Demosthenes snatched from you the glory of being the first of orators; you have prevented him from being the only one.' In his speech for Quintus Gallius,¹ this is what Cicero says about vulgar enthusiasm and ignorant mob orators: 'At these games—I am telling you of something within my own recent experience—one gentleman, a poet, has been cock of the walk. He is a very literary fellow and he has written a book Conversations of Poets and Philosophers. In it he makes Euripides and Menander talk together, and in another passage Socrates and Epicurus, men whose lives we know to be separated not by years but by centuries. And yet what applause and cheers this stuff evokes! He has many fellow pupils in the theatre, schoolfellows who went to the same school and learnt nothing.'

¹ This speech is not extant.

LETTER LII

Avoid sombre garments as much as bright ones. Showiness and slovenliness are alike to be shunned: the one savours of vanity, the other of boastfulness. To walk abroad without a linen vest is not praiseworthy: the good thing is not to have money to buy one. In any case it is absurd and scandalous to boast of having neither napkin nor handkerchief, while all the time your purse is well filled. There buunt, ut amplius accipiant, et sub praetextu elemosynae quaerunt divitias; quae magis venatio appellanda est quam elemosyna. Sic bestiae, sic aves, sic capiuntur et pisces: modica in hamo esca ponitur, ut matronarum in eo sacculi protrahantur. Scit episcopus, cui commissa est ecclesia, quem dispensationi pauperum curaeque praeficiat. Melius est non habere, quod tribuam, quam impudenter petere. Sed et genus adrogantiae est clementiorem te videri velle, quam pontifex Christi est. ‘Non omnia possumus omnes.’ Alius in ecclesia oculus est, alius lingua, alius manus, alius pes, alius auris, venter et cetera. Lege Pauli ad Corinthios: diversa membra unum corpus efficiunt. Nec rusticus et tantum simplex frater ideo se sanctum putet, si nihil noverit, nec peritus et eloquens in lingua aestimet sanctitatem. Multoque melius est e duobus imperfectis rusticitatem sanctam habere quam eloquentiam peccatricem.

10. Multi aedificant parietes et columnas ecclesiae substernunt:¹ marmora nitent, auro splendent lacunaria, gemmis altare distinguitur et ministrorum Christi nulla electio est. Neque vero mihi aliquis opponat dives in Iudaea templum, mensam, lucernas, turibula, patellas, scyphos, mortariola et cetera ex auro fabre facta. Tunc haec probabantur a domino, quando sacerdotes hostias immolabant et sanguis pecudum erat redemptio peccatorum—quamquam haec omnia praecesserint in figura. ‘Scripta sunt are some who give a trifle to the poor that they may themselves receive a larger sum, under the cloak of almsgiving seeking their own personal gain. Such conduct should be called alms-hunting rather than almsgiving. Thus it is that birds, beasts, and fishes are caught. A small piece of bait is put on the hook; and lo! they draw up a fine lady's purse. The bishop, to whose care the church is entrusted, knows whom he should appoint as almoner to the poor. It is better for me not to have anything to give than to be shameless in begging. It is a kind of arrogance also to wish to seem more generous than he who is Christ's bishop. 'We cannot all do all things.'¹ In the Church one man is the eye, another the tongue, another the hand, another the foot, another the ear, the belly, and so on. Read Paul's epistle to the Corinthians, and see how one body is made up of different members. A rough simple brother should not think himself saintly just because he knows nothing; he who is well educated and eloquent must not imagine that holiness consists in a ready tongue. Of the two imperfections a holy clumsiness is much better than a sinful eloquence.

¹ subtrahunt: Hilberg.

¹ Virgil, Bucolics, VIII. 63.

² If the text is right Jerome apparently means that a church should consist of one plain room, with no party walls for separate shrines and no columns.

Many people build churches now with party walls and pillars to support them:² slabs of marble shine brightly in them, the ceilings are gay with gold, the altar is adorned with jewels, and no care is shown in choosing Christ's ministers. Let no one object against me the richness of the Temple in Judaea, its table, lamps, censers, dishes, cups, spoons, and the rest of its golden ware. These things were approved by the Lord in the days when priests sacrificed victims, and when the blood of sheep was the redemption of sins. They were but a figure 'written for autem' propter nos, 'in quos fines saeculorum decurrerunt'—nunc vero, cum paupertatem domus suae pauper dominus dedicarit, cogitemus crucem et divitias lutum putabimus. Quid miramur, quod Christus vocat iniquum mammonam? Quid suspicimus et amamus, quod Petrus se non habere testatur? Alioquin, si tantum litteram sequimur et in auro atque divitiis simplex nos delectat historia, cum auro observemus et cetera: ducant pontifices Christi uxores virgines; quamvis bonae mentis sit, qui cicatricem habuerit et deformis est, privetur sacerdotio; lepra corporis animae vitiis praeferatur; crescamus et multiplicemur et repleamus terram; nec immolemus agnum nec mysticum pascha celebremus, quia haec absque templo fieri lege prohibentur; figamus septimo mense tabernaculum et sollemne ieiunium bucina concrepemus. Quodsi haec omnia spiritualibus spiritalia comparantes scientesque cum Paulo, quod lex spiritualis est, et David verba cantantes: 'Revela oculos meas et considerabo mirabilia de lege tua' sic intellegamus, ut dominus quoque noster intellexit et interpretatus est sabbatum, aut aurum repudiemus cum ceteris superstitionibus Iudaeorum aut, si aurum placet, placeant et Iudaei, quos cum auro aut probare nobis necesse est aut damnare.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Convivia tibi vitanda sunt saecularium, et maxime eorum, qui honoribus tument. Turpe est ante fores sacerdotis domini crucifixi et pauperis et

¹ 1 Corinthians, x. 11.

² St. Luke, xvi. 9.

³ Acts, iii. 6.

⁴ Leviticus, xxi. 17.

⁵ Psalm cxix. 18.

LETTER LII

our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come.'¹ But to-day, when Our Lord by his poverty has consecrated the poverty of his house, we should think rather of his cross and count riches to be but dirt. Why do we admire that which Christ calls the Mammon of unrighteousness?² Why do we respect and love that which Peter proclaims he does not possess?³ Moreover, if we follow only the letter and find pleasure in the bare lists of riches and gold, let us keep to everything else together with the gold: let Christ's priests take virgins as wives; let a man be deprived of his priesthood, however honest he be, if he is scarred or disfigured in any way;⁴ let bodily leprosy be counted worse than spiritual faults; let us increase and multiply and replenish the earth; let us slay no lamb and celebrate no mystic passover, for the law forbids these things where there is no temple; let us pitch a tent in the seventh month and with a trumpet noise abroad the solemn fast. But if all these things are spiritual, and we compare them with things spiritual, and know with Paul that the Law is spiritual, and chant David's words: 'Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law,'⁵ understanding them as Our Lord understood them when He thus explained the Sabbath; then we should reject the gold together with the rest of Jewish superstition, or, if we approve of the gold, we should approve of the Jews as well. The Jews must go with the gold whether we approve or condemn.

Avoid entertaining the worldly at your table, especially those who are swollen with office. You are the priest of a crucified Lord, one who lived in poverty and on the bread of strangers, and it is a qui cibo quoque vesebatur alieno lictores consulum et milites excubare iudicemque provinciae melius apud te prandere quam in palatio. Quodsi obtenderis facere te haec, ut roges pro miseris atque subiectis, iudex saeculi plus defert clerico continenti quam diviti et magis sanctitatem tuam veneratur quam opes; aut si talis est, qui non audiat clericos nisi inter ~~filias~~^{filias}, libenter carebo huiusce modi beneficio et Christum rogabo pro iudice, qui magis subvenire potest; melius est enim confidere in domino quam confidere in homine, melius est sperare in domino quam sperare in principibus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Numquam vinum redoleas, ne audias illud philosophi: 'Hoc non est osculum porrigere, sed propinare.' Vinolentos sacerdotes et apostolus damnat et vetus lex prohibet. Qui altari serviunt, vinum et siceram non bibant. Sicera Hebraeo sermone omnis potio nuncupatur, quae inebriare potest, sive illa fermento conficitur sive pomorum suco aut favi decoquantur in dulcem et barbaram potionem aut palmarum fructus exprimantur in liquorem coctisque frugibus aqua pinguior colatur. Quidquid inebriat et statum mentis evertit, fuge similiter ut vinum. Nec hoc dico, quod Dei a nobis creatura damnetur, siquidem et dominus vini potator appellatur et Timotheo dolenti stomachum modica vini sorbitio relaxata est, sed modum et aetatis et valetudinis et corporum qualitates exigimus in potando. Quodsi absque vino ardeo et ardeo adulescentia et inflammor

¹ Psalm cxviii. 9.

² Cf. Leviticus, x. 9 and St. Luke, i. 15: οἶνον καὶ σίκερα οὐ μὴ πίνῃ.

³ St. Matthew, xi. 19; 1 Timothy, v. 23.

LETTER LII

shameful thing for a consul's attendants and body-guard to keep watch before your door, and for a provincial judge to have a better luncheon with you than he would get in his palace. If you urge that you do this in order that you may plead for the unhappy and the oppressed, a worldly judge pays more regard to a self-denying cleric than to a rich one, he respects your sanctity more than your wealth. Or if he is the sort of man who only listens to clergymen over the wine bowl, I will gladly forgo any benefit from him, and will address my prayer to Christ who is more able to help than any judge. For it is better to trust in the Lord than to put your confidence in men; it is better to fix your hopes in the Lord than to expect anything from princes.¹

Never smell of wine, lest the philosopher's words be said of you: 'This is not a kiss but a wine sip.' Priests who reek of wine are condemned by the apostle and forbidden by the old Law. Those who serve the altar must not drink either wine or shechar, the Law says;² the word shechar in Hebrew means any intoxicating drink, whether it is made from barley, or from fruit juice, or from honey boiled down into a rough sweet liquor, or from pressed dates, or from the thick syrup strained from a decoction of corn. Anything that intoxicates and disturbs the mind's balance you must avoid as you avoid wine. I do not say that we should condemn a thing that God made, since indeed Our Lord was called a wine-bibber, and Timothy was allowed wine in moderation because of his weak stomach;³ but I claim that those who drink wine should have some reason of age or health or some peculiarity of constitution. If even without wine I am all aglow, if I feel the fire of youth and am calore sanguinis et suculento validoque sum corpore, libenter carebo poculo, in quo suspicio veneni est. Pulchre dicitur apud Graecos, sed nescio utrum apud nos aequae resonet: 'Pinguis venter non gignit sensum tenuem.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Tantum tibi ieiuniorum inponc, quantum ferre potes. Sint pura, casta, simplicia, moderata, non superstitiosa ieiunia. Quid prodest oleo non vesci et molestias quasdam difficultatesque ciborum quaerere? Caricae, piper, nuces, palmarum fructus, similia, mel, pistatia, tota hortorum cultura vexatur, ut cibario non vescamur pane. Audio praeterea quosdam contra rerum hominumque naturam aquam non bibere nec vesci pane, sed sorbitiunculas delicatas et contrita holera betarumque sucum non calice sorbere, sed conca. Pro pudor, non erubescimus istiusmodi ineptiis nec taedet superstitionis! Insuper etiam famam abstinentiae in deliciis quaerimus. Fortissimum ieiunium est aqua et panis; sed quia gloriam non habet et omnes pane et aqua vivimus, quasi publicum et commune ieiunium non putatur.

13. Cave, ne hominum rumusculos aucuperis, ne offensam Dei populorum laude commutes. 'Si adhuc,' inquit apostolus, 'hominibus placerem, Christi servus non essem'; desivit placere hominibus et servus factus est Christi. Per bonam et malam famam a dextris et a sinistris Christi miles graditur, nec laude extollitur, nec vituperatione frangitur, non divitiis tumet, non contrahitur paupertate, et laeta contemnit et tristia. Per diem sol non uret eum inflamed by hot blood, if I am of a strong and lusty habit of body, then I will readily forgo the wine cup, in which I may well suspect that poison lurks. The Greeks have a pretty proverb¹ which perhaps in our language loses some of its force: 'A fat paunch never breeds fine thoughts.'

¹ παχεία γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τίκτει νόον.

² Galatians, i. 10.

LETTER LII

Impose upon yourself such fasting as you are able to bear. Let your fasts be pure, chaste, simple, moderate, and free from superstition. What good is it to abstain from oil and then to seek after food that is troublesome to prepare and difficult to get, dried figs, pepper, nuts, dates, wheaten flour, honey, pistachios? All the resources of the garden are laid under contribution to avoid eating ordinary bread. I have heard that some people outrage nature, and neither drink water nor eat bread, but imbibe fancy decoctions of pounded herbs and beet juice, using a shell to drink from, in place of a cup. Shame on us! We do not blush at such silliness and we feel no disgust at such superstition. Moreover, by such fancifulness we seek a reputation for abstinence. The strictest fast is bread and water: but as that brings no glory with it and bread and water are our usual food, it is reckoned not a fast but an ordinary and common matter.

Beware of angling for compliments, lest you lose God's favour in exchange for the people's praise. 'If I yet pleased men,' says the apostle, 'I should not be the servant of Christ.'² He ceased to please men and became Christ's servant. Through good and bad report on right hand and on left Christ's soldier marches; he is not elated by praise nor crushed by abuse; he is not puffed up by riches nor depressed by poverty; he despises joy and sorrow alike. The neque luna per noctem. Nolo te orare in angulis platearum, ne rectum iter precum tuarum frangat aura popularis; nolo te dilatare fimbrias et ostentui habere φυλακτήρια et conscientia repugnante pharisaica ambitione circumdari. Melius est haec in corde portare quam in corpore, Deum habere fautorem, non aspectus hominum. Vis scire, quales dominus quaerat ornatus? Habeto prudentiam, iustitiam, temperantiam, fortitudinem. His plagis caeli includere, haec te quadriga velut aurigam Christi ad metam concitum ferat. Nihil hoc monili pretiosius, nihil hac gemmarum varietate distinctius. Ex omni parte decoraris, cingeris atque protegeris; et ornamento tibi sunt et tutamini: gemmae vertuntur in scuta.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

14. Cave quoque, ne aut linguam aut aures habeas prurientes, id est, ne aut ipse aliis detrahas aut alios audias detrahentes. 'Sedens,' inquit, 'adversus fratrem tuum loquebaris et adversus filium matris tuae ponebas scandalum; haec fecisti et tacui. Existimasti iniquitatem, quod ero tibi similis; arguam te et statuam contra faciem tuam.' Subauditur: 'Sermones tuos et cuncta, quae de aliis es locutus, ut tua sententia iudiceris in his ipse deprehensus, quae in aliis arguebas.' Neque vero illa iusta est excusatio: 'Referentibus aliis iniuriam facere non possum.' Nemo invito auditori libenter refert. Sagitta in lapide numquam figitur, interdum

¹ Psalm cxxi. 6.

² Matt. vi. 5 and xxiii. 5.

³ Psalm l. 20.

LETTER LII

sun will not burn him by day nor the moon by night.¹ Do not pray at the corners of a square, lest the breeze of popular favour interrupt the straight course of your prayers. Do not broaden your fringes and wear phylacteries for show, or wrap yourself in despite of conscience in Pharisaic ostentation.² It is better to carry all this in the heart, rather than on the body, to have God's approval rather than to please the eyes of men. Would you know what kind of ornaments the Lord requires? Have prudence, justice, temperance, fortitude. Let these be your four cardinal points, let them be your four-in-hand to carry you, Christ's charioteer, at full speed to your goal. No necklace can be more precious than these, no jewels can make a brighter galaxy. On every side they form a decoration, a girdle, a defence; they are both an ornament and a protection; their jewels are turned into shields.

Beware also of an itching tongue and ears: in other words, do not detract from others or listen to detractors. 'Thou sittest,' says the Scripture, 'and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son. These things hast thou done and I kept silence; thou thoughtest wickedly that I was such an one as thyself, but I will reprove thee, and set the matter before thine eyes.'³ The meaning of the passage is this—'Watch over your talk and over every word you say about others; by your own sentence you will be judged, and you will yourself be caught committing the faults you blamed in other men.' It is not a proper excuse to say: 'If other people report something to me I cannot be rude to them.' No one likes to bring reports to an unwilling listener. An arrow never resiliens percutit dirigentem. Discat detractor, dum te viderit non libenter audire, non facile detrahere. 'Cum detractoribus,' ait Salomon, 'ne miscearis, quoniam repente veniet perditio eorum, et ruinam utriusque quis novit?' Tam videlicet eius, qui detrahit, quam illius, qui aurem accommodat detrahenti.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

15. Officii tui est visitare languentes, nosse domos, matronas ac liberos earum et nobilium virorum non ignorare secreta. Officii ergo tui sit non solum oculos castos servare, sed et linguam. Numquam de formis mulierum disputes, nec alia domus, quid agatur in alia, per te noverit. Hippocrates adiurat discipulos, antequam doceat, et in verba sua iurare compellit; extorquetque sacramento silentium; sermonem, incessum, habitum moresque describit: quanto magis nos, quibus animarum medicina commissa est, omnium Christianorum domos debemus amare quasi proprias. Consolatores potius nos in maeroribus suis quam convivas in prosperis noverint. Facile contemnitur clericus, qui saepe vocatus ad prandium non recusat.

16. Numquam petentes raro accipiamus rogati. Nescio quo enim modo etiam ipse, qui deprecatur, ut tribuat, cum acceperis, viliorem te iudicat et mirum in modum, si rogantem contempseris, plus

¹ Proverbs, xxiv. 21. Vulgate.

² See Hippocrates (L.C.L. i. 291 ff.): 'To hold my teacher in this art equal to my own parents . . . I will keep pure and holy both my life and my art. . . . Whatsoever I shall see lodges in a stone, but it sometimes recoils and wounds the shooter. Let detractors, seeing your reluctance to listen, learn not to be so ready to detract. Solomon says: 'Meddle not with them that are given to detraction: for their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth the destruction of them both?'¹—the destruction, that is, both of the detractor and of the person who lends ear to him.

LETTER LII

It is part of your duty to visit the sick, to be acquainted with people's households, with matrons, and with their children, and to be entrusted with the secrets of the great. Let it therefore be your duty to keep your tongue chaste as well as your eyes. Never discuss a woman's looks, nor let one house know what is going on in another. Hippocrates,² before he will instruct his pupils, makes them take an oath and compels them to swear obedience to him. That oath exacts from them silence, and prescribes for them their language, gait, dress, and manners. How much greater an obligation is laid on us who have been entrusted with the healing of souls! We ought to love every Christian household as though it were our own. Let them know us as comforters in their sorrows rather than as guests in their days of prosperity. A clergyman soon becomes an object of contempt, if, however often he is invited to dinner, he does not refuse.

We should never ask for gifts, and seldom accept them even when begged to do so. Somehow or other the very man who entreats leave to offer you a present holds you the cheaper for accepting it; if you refuse, it is strange how much more admiration and hear in the course of my profession . . . I will never divulge' (p. 299).

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

miratur. Praedicator continentiae, nuptias ne conciliet. Qui apostolum legit: 'Superest, ut et qui habent uxores, sic sint, quasi non habentes,' cur virginem cogit, ut nubat? Qui de monogamia sacerdos est, quare viduam hortatur, ut δίγαμος sit? Procuratores et dispensatores domorum alienarum atque villarum quomodo esse possunt, qui proprias iubentur contemnere facultates? Amico quippiam rapere furtum est, ecclesiam fraudare sacrilegium est. Accepisse pauperibus erogandum et esurientibus plurimis vel cautum esse vel timidum aut—quod apertissimi sceleris est—aliquid inde subtrahere omnium praedonum crudelitatem superat. Ego fame torqueor et tu iudicas, quantum ventri meo satis sit? Aut divide statim, quod acceperis, aut, si timidus dispensator es, dimitte largitorem, ut sua ipse distribuatur. Nolo sub occasione mea sacculus tuus plenus sit. Nemo me melius mea servare potest. Optimus dispensator est, qui sibi nihil reservat.

17. Coegisti me, Nepotiane carissime, lapidato iam virginitatis libello, quem sanctae Eustochiae Romae scripseram, post annos decem rursus Bethleem ora reserare et confodiendum me linguis omnium prodere. Aut enim nihil scribendum fuit, ne hominum iudicium subiremus, quod tu facere prohibuisti, aut scribentes nosse cunctorum adversum nos maledicorum tela torquenda. Quos obsecro, quiescant et desinant maledicere; non enim ut adversarii, sed ut amici

¹ I Corinthians, vii. 29.

² A 'bigamist' in the early Church was one who remarried.

³ Cf. Letter XXII.

LETTER LII

for you he feels. The preacher of continence must not try to arrange marriages. The apostle says: 'It remaineth that they who have wives be as though they had none.'¹ Why then should a man who reads those words force a virgin into marriage? A priest is a monogamist: why should he urge a widow to be a bigamist?² How can clergymen be agents and stewards of other men's households in town or country, when they are bidden to disregard even their own interests? To rob a friend is theft, but to defraud the Church is sacrilege. When you have received money to be spent on the poor, to be cautious and timid with it while crowds are hungry, or—what is most manifest villainy—to take any of it for yourself, is to surpass the cruelty of the worst robber. While I am racked with hunger, are you to judge how much will satisfy my cravings? Either distribute immediately what you have received, or, if you are a timid almoner, dismiss the donor to hand out his own gifts. I do not wish your purse to be full by taking advantage of me. No one can look after what is mine better than I can. The best almoner is he who keeps back nothing for himself.

The treatise on virginity which I wrote at Rome to the saintly Eustochium³ was greeted with showers of stones, and you, my dearest Nepotian, have compelled me now ten years later to open my mouth again at Bethlehem, and to expose myself to the stabs of every tongue. If I were to escape criticism either I had to refrain from writing altogether—which you rendered impossible—or if I wrote I knew that all the shafts of calumny would be hurled against me. I beg my opponents now to hold their peace and cease from abuse. I have written not as an adversary scripsimus, nec invec̄ti sumus in eos, qui peccant, sed, ne peccent, monuimus. Neque in illos tantum, sed et in nos ipsos severi iudicēs fuimus volentesque festucam de oculo alterius tollere nostram prius trabem eiecimus. Nullum laesi, nullus saltem descriptione signatus est, neminem specialiter meus sermo pulsavit: generalis de vitiis disputatio est. Qui mihi irasci voluerit, prius ipse de se, quod talis sit, confitetur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LIV

AD FURIAM DE VIDUITATE SERVANDA

1. OBSECRAS litteris et suppliciter deprecaris, ut tibi scribam, immo rescribam,¹ quomodo vivere debeas et viduitatis coronam inlaeso pudicitiae nomine conservare. Gaudet animus, exultant viscera, gestit affectus hoc te cupere esse post virum, quod sanctae memoriae mater tua Titiana multo fuit tempore sub marito. Exauditae sunt preces et orationes eius. Inpetravit in unica filia, quod vivens ipsa possederat. Habes praeterea generis tui grande privilegium, quod exinde a Camillo vel nulla vel rara vestrae familiae scribitur secundos nosse concubitus, ut non tam laudanda sis, si vidua perseveres, quam

¹ rescribam, immo scribam: Hilberg.

¹ Furia was one of the many rich and noble ladies who gathered round Jerome while he was living in Rome. After her first husband's death she had thought of a second marriage, but abandoned the idea and devoted herself to the care of her young children and aged father. In this letter, written A.D. 394, Jerome lays down rules for her conduct in widowhood, and commends her to the care of the presbyter Exuperius, who afterwards became Bishop of Toulouse. Cf. p. 436, note 3.

LETTER LII AND LETTER L.

but as a friend. I have not inveighed against sin. I have only counselled men not to sin. I have judged myself as strictly as I judge them, and have cast out the beam from my own eye before I tried to remove a mote from my neighbour's. I have hurt no one; at least no one has been marked out for special mention, and my discourse has not attacked individuals but has been a general criticism of weaknesses. If any one insists on being angry with me, he confesses thereby that in his case the cap fits.

LETTER LIV

TO FURIA¹ ON THE DUTY OF REMAINING A WIDOW

Written A.D. 394

IN your letter you beg and beseech me to write—or rather to write by return—and tell you how you ought to live, keeping the crown of widowhood in unsullied chastity. My heart rejoices, my bowels exult, my every fibre thrills to know that you desire to be after marriage what your mother Titiana of saintly memory was for many a year in marriage. Her prayers and entreaties have been heard. In her only daughter she has been granted that which she herself possessed in her lifetime. Moreover, it is the peculiar glory of your family that from the days of Camillus² few or none of your women are recorded as having known a second husband's bed. Therefore you will not be so much deserving of praise if you persist in widowhood, as you would be worthy of execranda, si id Christiana non serves, quod per tanta saecula gentiles feminae custodierunt.

² Furius Camillus, fl. 400 B.C.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Taceo de Paula et Eustochio, stirpis vestrae floribus, ne per occasionem exhortationis tuae illas laudare vidcar, Blesillamque praetereo, quae maritum suum, tuum secuta germanum, in brevi vitae spatio tempora virtutum multa complevit. Atque utinam praeconia feminarum imitarentur viri et rugosa senectus redderet, quod sponte offert adulescentia! Sciens et videns in flammam mitto manum: adducuntur supercilia, extendetur brachium 'iratusque Chremes tumido desaeviet ore.' Consurgunt proceres et adversum epistolam meam turba patricia detonabit me magum, me seductorem clamitans in terras ultimas asportandum. Addant, si volunt, et Samariten, ut domini mei titulum recognoscam. Certe filiam a parente non divido nec dico illud de evangelio: 'Sine mortui sepeliant mortuos suos.' Vivit enim, qui credit in Christo, et, qui in illum credit, debet utique, 'quomodo ille ambulavit, et ipse ambulare.'

3. Facessat invidia, quam nomine Christiano malidicorum semper genuinus infigit, ut, dum probra metuunt, ad virtutes non provocent. Exceptis epistulis ignoramus alterutrum, solaque causa pietatis est, ubi carnis nulla notitia est. 'Honora patrem tuum,' sed, si te a vero patre non separat. Tam diu

¹ Cf. table on p. 482.

² Horace, Ars Poetica, 94; the Chremes of Terence, Heauton Timoroumenos, Act 5, is angry with his son because of a degrading love affair.

³ St. John, viii. 48.

⁴ St. Matthew, viii. 22.

⁵ 1 John, ii. 6.

⁶ Exodus, xx. 12.

LETTER LIV

execration if you, a Christian, failed to keep a custom which heathen women observed for so many generations.

I say nothing of Paula and Eustochium, those fair flowers of your stock, lest I should use the opportunity of exhorting you to praise them. I pass over Blesilla also, who following your brother her husband to the grave fulfilled in her life's brief span many years of virtue.¹ I only wish that men would follow the example that women have publicly given them, and that wrinkled age would render that which youth offers of its own free will. I am thrusting my hand into the fire knowingly and with my eyes open. Brows will be knitted, fists shaken against me and 'with swelling voice will angry Chremes rage.'² Our great men rise from their chairs, and in answer to this letter of mine the patrician mob will thunder out: 'Magician, seducer; transport him to the ends of the earth.' If they like, they may call me 'Samaritan' as well; for then I shall recognize a name that was given to my Lord.³ Assuredly I do not separate the daughter from her mother nor do I use the words of the Gospel: 'Let the dead bury their dead.'⁴ For he is alive who believes in Christ, and he who believes in Him ought in any case 'himself also so to walk even as He walked.'⁵

A truce to the envious attack which the tooth of calumny is always making upon the name of Christian, hoping to dissuade men from virtue by fear of abuse. Except by letter we know nothing of one another, and where there is no knowledge in the flesh the only motive for friendship is one of piety. 'Honour thy father,'⁶ but only if he does not separate you from your true Father. Acknowledge the tie of blood, scito sanguinis copulam, quam diu ille suum noverit creatorem: alioquin David tibi protinus canet: 'Audi, filia, et vide et inclina aurem tuam et obliviscere populum tuum et domum patris tui; et concupiscet res decorem tuum, quia ipse est dominus Deus tuus.' Grande praemium parentis obliti: 'Concupiscet rex decorem tuum.' Quia audisti, quia vidisti, quia inclinasti aurem tuam et populi tui domusque patris oblita es, idcirco 'concupiscet rex decorem tuum' et dicet tibi: 'Tota pulchra es, proxima mea, et macula non est in te.' Quid pulchrius anima, quae Dei filia nuncupatur et nullos extrinsecus quaerit ornatus? Credit in Christum et hac ambitione ditata perguit ad sponsum, eundem habens dominum, quem et virum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Quid angustiarum habeant nuptiae, didicisti in ipsis nuptiis et quasi coturnicum carnibus usque ad nausiam saturata es. Amarissimam choleram tuae sensere fauces, egressisti acescentes et morbidos cibos, relevasti aestuantem stomachum: quid vis rursus ingerere, quod tibi noxium fuit? 'Canis revertens ad vomitum suum et sus ad volutabrum luti.' Bruta quoque animalia et vagae aves in easdem pedicas retiaque non incidunt. An vereris, ne proles Furiana deficiat et ex te parens tuus non habeat pusionem, qui reptet in pectore et cervices eius stercore linat? Quippini? Omnes habent filios, quae habuere matrimonia, et, quibus nati sunt liberi, suo generi responderunt! Exhibuit Ciceronis filius patrem in eloquentia? Cornelia vestra, pudici-

¹ Psalm xlv. 10.

² Song of Solomon, iv. 7.

³ Numbers, xi. 31 ff.

⁴ 2 Peter, ii. 22.

⁵ Fremantle thinks this refers to the connection between Furia and Paula's family, who traced their descent from the Gracchi, cf section 13, p. 253, where Eustochium is referred to as Furia's sister.

LETTER LIV

but only so long as he recognizes his Creator. Otherwise David at once will sing to you: 'Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people and thy father's house. So shall the king greatly desire thy beauty for he is thy Lord.'¹ Great is the reward for forgetting a parent: 'the king shall desire thy beauty.' Because you have heard, considered, inclined your ear, and forgotten your people and your father's house, 'the king will desire your beauty' and will say to you: 'Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee.'² What can be fairer than a soul which is called daughter of God and seeks no outward adorning? She believes in Christ and enriched by this ambition she goes to her Spouse, having her Lord for Bridegroom.

The trials of marriage you have learned in the married state: you have been surfeited to nausea as though with the flesh of quails.³ Your mouth has tasted the bitterest of gall, you have voided the sour unwholesome food, you have relieved a heaving stomach. Why would you put into it again something which has already proved harmful to you? 'The dog is turned to his own vomit again and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.'⁴ Even brute beasts and roving birds do not fall into the same snares or nets twice. Are you afraid that the line of Camillus will cease to exist and that your father will not have a brat of yours to crawl upon his breast and soil his neck with nastiness? Well, do all those who marry have children, and when children are born do they always answer to their family's fame? Did Cicero's son show his father's eloquence? Had your own Cornelia,⁵ pattern tiae simul et fecunditatis exemplar, Gracchos suos se genuisse laetata est? Ridiculum sperare pro certo, quod multos et non habere videas et, cum habuerint, perdidisse. Cui dimittis tantas divitias? Christo, qui mori non potest. Quem habebis heredem? Ipsum, quem et dominum. Contristabitur pater, sed laetabitur Christus; lugebit familia, sed angeli gratulabuntur. Faciat pater, quod vult, de substantia sua: non es eius, cui nata es, sed cui renata, et qui te grandi pretio redemit, sanguine suo.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Cave nutrices et gerulas et istius modi vinosa animalia, quae de corio tuo saturare ventrem suum cupiunt. Non suadent, quod tibi, sed, quod sibi prosit, et saepe illud obganniunt:

‘ Solane perpetua maerens carpere iuventa
Nec dulces natos Veneris nec praemia noris? ’

Ubi pudicitia et sanctitas, ibi frugalitas est; ubi frugalitas, ibi damna servorum. Quidquid non tulerint, sibi ablatum putant, nec considerant, de quanto, sed quantum accipiant; ubicumque viderint Christianum, statim illud e trivio: ὁ Γραικός, ὁ ἐπιθέτης. Hi rumores turpissimos serunt et, quod ab ipsis egressum est, ab aliis audisse se simulant, idem auctores et exaggeratores. Exin fama de mendacio, quae, cum ad matrones pervenerit et earum linguas alike of chastity and fruitfulness, cause to rejoice in being mother of the Gracchi? It is absurd to expect as certain the children, which you see many fail to obtain, and many lose after they have got them. To whom are you going to leave your great wealth? To Christ who cannot die. Whom shall you make your heir? The same who is already your Lord. Your father will look sad, but Christ will rejoice: your family will grieve, but the angels will give you their congratulations. Your father may do what he likes with his own estates: you are not his to whom you have been born, but His to whom you have been born again, and who has ransomed you at a great price, even with His own blood.

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, IV. 32.

LETTER LIV

Beware of foster-mothers and nurses and other drunken creatures of their kind, who desire to fill their bellies at the expense of your skin. They advise you for their own benefit, not yours, continually dinning the poet's lines into your ears:

' And will you ever waste your youth in grief,
Nor children know and the sweet gifts of love? ' 1

Where there is holiness and chastity, there also is frugality. And where there is frugality, there is the servants' loss. What they do not get they think is taken from them, and they consider only their wages, not your income. Whenever they see a Christian they at once raise the street-cry—' The Greek! The impostor!' They spread abroad the foulest scandals, pretending they have heard from others what really emanates from themselves and exaggerating the stories which they originate. Their lies give rise to talk which soon reaches our matrons' ears, and fanned by their tongues spreads

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

fuerit ventilata, provincias penetrat. Videas plerasque rabido ore saevire et tincta facie, viperinis orbibus, dentibus punicatis carpere Christianos. Hic aliqua, ‘ Cui circa humeros hyacinthina laena est,

Rancidulum quiddam balba de nare locuta
Perstrepit ac tenero supplantat verba palato.’

Omnis consonat chorus et latrant universa subsellia. Iunguntur nostri ordinis, qui et roduntur et rodunt adversum nos loquaces, pro se muti; quasi et ipsi aliud sint quam monachi, et non, quidquid in monachos dicitur, redundet in clericos, qui patres sunt monachorum. Detrimentum pecoris pastoris ignominia est, sicut e regione illius monachi vita laudatur, qui venerationi habet sacerdotes Christi et non detrahit gradui, per quem factus est Christianus.

6. Haec locutus sum, in Christo filia, non dubitans de proposito tuo—numquam enim exhortatorias litteras postulares, si ambigeres de bono monogamiae—sed ut nequitiam servulorum, qui te venalem portant, et insidias adfinium ac pium parentis errorem intellegeres, cui, ut amorem in te tribuam, amoris scientiam non concedo dicens aliquid cum apostolo: ‘ Confiteor, zelum Dei habent, sed non secundum through every province. You may see many such ladies with painted faces, their eyes like those of vipers and their teeth rubbed with pumice stone, who when they are girding at Christians actually foam at the mouth with mad rage. One of them,

¹ Persius, I. 32.

LETTER LIV

‘ A violet mantle round her shoulders thrown,
Drawls out some mawkish stuff, speaks through her nose,
And minces half her words with tripping tongue.’¹

At that the rest of the band chime in, and the whole company falls a-snarling. They are backed up by men of my own order, who being themselves a mark for scandal spread scandal about others; they are fluent enough in attacking me, but in their own defence they are dumb. As though, forsooth, they were not monks themselves, and as though all that is said against monks does not reflect on the clergy who are their spiritual fathers! To hurt the flock is to shame the shepherd. On the other hand, we must praise the life of a monk who holds Christ's priests in veneration, and does not carp at the order by whose offices he became a Christian.

I have said all this, my daughter in Christ, not because I doubt your steadfastness in your vows, for you would never have requested a letter of advice if you had been uncertain that monogamy was a good thing, but that you may understand the rascality of servants who hold you as something to be sold, the snares laid for you by relatives, and your father's mistaken kindness. I allow that your father loves you, but I do not admit that his love is according to knowledge, and I say with the apostle: ‘I confess that they have a zeal of God, but not scientiam.' Imitare potius—crebro enim id repetam—sanctam matrem tuam, cuius ego quotiens recordor, venit in mentem ardor eius in Christum, pallor ex ieiuniis, elemosyna in pauperes, obsequium in servos Dei, humilitas et cordis et vestium atque in cunctis sermo moderatus. Pater tuus, quem ego honoris causa nomino—non quia consularis et patricius, sed quia Christianus est—inpleat nomen suum et laetetur filiam Christo se genuisse, non saeculo; quin potius doleat, quod et virginitatem frustra amiseris et fructus perdideris nuptiarum. Ubi est maritus, quem tibi dedit? Etiamsi amabilis, etiamsi bonus fuisset, mors finisset omnia et copulam carnis solvisset interitus. Arripe, quaeso, occasionem et fac de necessitate virtutem. Non quaeruntur in Christianis initia, sed finis: Paulus male coepit; sed bene finivit; Iudae laudantur exordia, sed finis proditione damnatur. Lege Ezechiel: 'Iustitia iusti non liberabit eum, in quacumque die peccaverit, et impietas inpii non nocebit ei, in quacumque die conversus fuerit ab impietate sua.' Ista est scala Iacob, per quam angeli conscendunt et descendunt, cuius dominus innititur lapsis ¹ porrigens manum et fessos ascendentium gressus sui contemplatione sustentans. Sed, sicut non vult mortem peccatoris,

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ lassis: Hilberg.

¹ Romans, x. 2.

² Ezechiel, xxxiii. 12.

LETTER LIV

according to knowledge!' ¹ Take rather for model—I cannot repeat it too often—your saintly mother; whose ardent love for Christ comes into my mind whenever I remember her, and with it the pallor caused by fasting, the alms she gave to the poor, the respect she showed to God's servants, the humility of her heart and dress, and the constant restraint she put upon her tongue. As for your father—I speak of him with all respect, not because he is a patrician and of consular rank, but because he is a Christian—let him fulfil his Christian obligations and rejoice that he has begotten a daughter for Christ and not for the world. Nay, rather let him grieve that you have lost your virginity in vain, and have failed to reap any of the fruits of marriage. Where now is the husband whom he gave you? Even if he had been lovable and good, death would have ended everything and this decease would have broken the fleshly bond. Seize the opportunity, I beg, and make a virtue of necessity. In the case of Christians, we look not to their beginnings but to their end. Paul began badly but ended well. Judas is praised in his early days; his end is condemned by reason of his treachery. Read Ezekiel: 'The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression; as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness.'² Ours is that Jacob's ladder, on which the angels go up and down, while the Lord leans over holding out His hand to those who slip and sustaining by the vision of Himself the weary steps of those who ascend. But even as He wishes not the death of a sinner, but only that he should turn again and tantum ut revertatur et vivat, ita tepidos odit et cito ei nausiam faciunt. Cui plus dimittitur, plus diligit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. Meretrix illa in evangelio baptizata lacrimis suis et crine, qui multos ante deceperat, pedes domini tergente servata est. Non habuit crispantes mitras nec stridentes calceolos nec orbes stibio fuliginatos, quanto foedior, tanto pulchrior. { Quid facit in facie Christianae purpurissus et cerussa? Quorum alterum ruborem genarum labiorumque mentitur, alterum candorem oris et colli: ignes iuvenum, fomenta libidinum, impudicae mentis indicia. Quomodo flere potest pro peccatis suis, quae lacrimis cutem nudat et sulcos ducit in facie? Ornatus iste non domini est, velamen istud antichristi est. } Qua fiducia erigit ad caelum vultus, quos conditor non agnoscat? Frustra obtenditur adulescentia et aetas puellaris adseritur: vidua, quae marito placere desivit et iuxta apostolum vere vidua est, nihil habet necessarium nisi perseverantiam. Meminit pristinae voluptatis, scit, quid amiserit, quo delectata sit: ardentes diaboli sagittae ieiuniorum et vigiliarum frigore restinguendae sunt. Aut loquendum nobis est, ut vestiti sumus, aut vestiendum, ut loquimur. Quid aliud pollicemur et aliud ostendimus? Lingua personat castitatem et totum corpus praefert impudicitiam.

8. Hoc quantum ad habitum pertinet et ornatum. Ceterum vidua, ' quae in deliciis est '—non est meum, sed apostoli—' vivens mortua est.' Quid sibi vult live, so He hates the lukewarm and they inspire loathing. To whom more is forgiven, the same loveth more.

¹ 1 Timothy, v. 5.

² 1 Timothy, v. 6.

LETTER LIV

The harlot in the Gospel found salvation, baptized in her own tears and wiping the Lord's feet with the hair which had before lured many a lover. She wore no waving head-dress, no creaking shoes, nor did she darken her eyes with antimony: the more squalid she was, the more lovely she seemed. What have rouge and white lead to do on a Christian woman's face? The one simulates the natural red of cheeks and lips, the other the whiteness of the face and neck. They are fires to inflame young men, stimulants of lustful desire, plain evidence of an unchaste mind. How can a woman weep for her sins when tears lay her skin bare and make furrows on her face? Such adorning is not of the Lord, it is the mask of Antichrist. With what confidence can a woman lift to heaven features which her Creator cannot recognize? It is in vain to make youth an excuse for all this, or to put in the plea of girlish folly. A widow who has no husband to please, and in the apostle's words is a widow in deed, needs nothing but perseverance.¹ She still remembers the pleasures of the past, she knows the delights that she has lost, and she must quench the fire of the devil's shafts with the cold streams of fast and vigil. Either we must speak as we dress, or dress as we speak. Why do we profess one thing and display another? The tongue talks of chastity, but the whole body reveals incontinence.

So much for dress and adornment. But a widow 'that liveth in pleasure'—the words are not mine, but the apostle's—'is dead while she liveth.'² What hoc, quod ait: 'vivens mortua est'? Vivere quidem videtur ignorantibus et non esse peccato mortua, sed Christo, quem secreta non fallunt, mortua est. 'Anima,' enim, 'quae peccaverit, ipsa morietur.' 'Quorundam hominum peccata manifesta sunt praecedentia ad iudicium, quosdam autem et subsequuntur. Similiter et facta bona manifesta sunt, et quae aliter se habent, abscondi non possunt.' Quod dicit, istius modi est: quidam tam libere et palam peccant, ut, postquam eos videris, statim intellegas peccatores; alios autem, qui callide occultant vitia sua, ex sequenti conversatione cognoscimus. Similiter et bona apud alios in propatulo sunt, in aliis longo usu discimus. Quid ergo necesse est nos iactare pudicitiam, quae sine comitibus et adpendiculis suis, continentia et parcitate, fidem sui facere non potest? Apostolus macerat corpus suum et animae subicit imperio, ne, quod aliis praecipit, ipse non servet: et adulescentula fervente cibis corpore de castitate secura est?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Neque vero haec dicens condemno cibos, 'quos Deus creavit ad utendum cum gratiarum actione,' sed iuvenibus et puellis incentiva esse adsero voluptatum. Non Aetnaei ignes, non Vulcania tellus, non Vesevus et Olympus tantis ardoribus aestuant, ut iuveniles medullae vino plenae, dapibus inflammatae. Avaritia calcatur a plerisque et cum marsuppio deponitur; maledicam linguam indictum emendat silentium; cultus corporis et habitus

¹ Ezekiel, xviii. 20.

² 1 Timothy, v. 24.

³ 1 Timothy, iv. 4.

LETTER LIV

does it mean, 'is dead while she liveth'? Why, to those who know not the truth she seems to be alive and not to be dead in sin, but to Christ from whom no secrets are hid she is a dead woman. 'For the soul that sinneth, it shall die.'¹ 'Some men's sins are manifest, going before unto judgment, and some men also they follow after. Likewise also good works are manifest, and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.'² The words mean this—some men sin with such lack of restraint and concealment that you know them at first sight to be sinners. But there are others who cunningly conceal their vices, and we only learn of them by subsequent intercourse. In the same way the good deeds of some men are openly displayed, in the case of others we only become acquainted with them after long intimacy. Why then must we make a boast of chastity, which cannot be regarded as genuine unless it is supported by its two handmaids and assistants, continence and frugality? The apostle macerates his body and subjects it to the soul's control, lest he himself should fail to keep the precept he has given to others. How then can a young girl be confident of her chastity if her body is all on fire with rich food?

In saying this I do not condemn food 'which God created to be enjoyed with thanksgiving,'³ but I assert that for young men and girls some food is an incentive to sensuality. Neither Etna's fire, nor Vulcan's isle, nor Vesuvius and Olympus, seethe with such burning heat as does the youthful marrow when it is flushed with wine and inflamed by feasting. Many men trample avarice underfoot and lay it down as easily as their purses. An enforced silence serves as corrective to a slanderous tongue. One vestium unius horae spatio commutatur; omnia alia peccata extrinsecus sunt, et, quod a foris est, facile abicitur: sola libido insita a Deo ob liberorum creationem, si fines suos egressa fuerit, redundat in vitium et quadam lege naturae in coitum gestit erumpere. Grandis ergo virtutis est et sollicitae diligentiae superare, quod natus sis in carne, non carnaliter vivere, tecum pugnare cottidie et inclusum hostem Argi, ut fabulae ferunt, centum oculis observare. Hoc est, quod apostolus verbis aliis loquebatur: ‘Omne peccatum, quod fecerit homo, extra corpus est; qui autem fornicatur, in corpus suum peccat.’ Aiunt medici et qui de humanorum corporum scripsere naturis praecipueque Galenus in libris, quorum titulus est περὶ ὑγιαίνων, puerorum et iuvenum ac perfectae aetatis virorum mulierumque corpora insito calore fervere et noxios esse his aetatibus cibos, qui calorem augeant, sanitatique conducere frigida quaeque in esu et potu sumere, sicut e contrario senibus, qui pituita laborent et frigore, calidos cibos et vetera vina prodesse. Unde et salvator: ‘Adtendite,’ inquit, ‘vobis, ne forte adgraventur corda vestra in crapula et ebrietate et curis huius vitae.’ Et apostolus: ‘Vino, in quo est luxuria.’ Nec mirum hoc figulum sensisse de vasculo, quod ipse fabricatus est, cum etiam comicus

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Corinthians, vi. 18.

² St. Luke, xxi. 34.

³ Ephesians, v. 18.

LETTER LIV

single hour can change a man's fashion of dress and outward appearance. All other sins are outside ourselves, and what is external can easily be cast away. Carnal desire alone, implanted in men by God for the procreation of children, if it oversteps its due limits, becomes a sin, and by a law of nature burns to force its way to carnal intercourse. It is a task for pre-eminent virtue and the most watchful care, seeing that you were born in the flesh, not to live the life of the flesh. You must fight against yourself every day and keep guard against the enemy within you with the hundred eyes of the fabled Argus. This is what the apostle said in other words: 'Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.'¹ Physicians and those who have written on the nature of the human frame, especially Galen in his treatise On Health, say that the bodies of young men and of full-grown men and women glow with an innate warmth, and that for persons of these ages all food is harmful which tends to increase that heat, while it is conducive to health for them to eat and drink anything that is cold. On the other hand they say that for old people who suffer from humours and from chilliness, warm food and old wine are beneficial. Hence the Saviour says: 'Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life.'² So too the apostle: 'Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess.'³ No wonder that the potter felt thus about the frail vessel which He had made,⁴ seeing

⁴ Romans, ix. 21. 'Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

cuius finis est humanos mores nosse atque describere, dixit: 'Sine Cerere et Libero friget Venus.'

10. Primum igitur, si tamen stomachi firmitas patitur, donec puellares annos transeas, aquam in potum sume, quae natura frigidissima est, aut, si hoc inbecillitas prohibet, audi cum Timotheo: 'Vino modico utere propter stomachum et frequentes tuas infirmitates.' Deinde in ipsis cibus calida quaeque devita; non solum de carnibus loquor, super quibus vas electionis profert sententiam: 'Bonum est vinum non bibere et carnem non manducare,' sed etiam in ipsis leguminibus infantia quaeque et gravia declinanda sunt—nihilque ita scias conducere Christianis adolescentibus ut esum holerum, unde et in alio loco: 'Qui infirmus est,' ait, 'holera manducet'—ardorque corporum frigidioribus epulis temperandus est. Si autem tres pueri et Daniel leguminibus vescebantur, pueri erant, necdum ad sartiginem venerant in qua rex Babylonius senes iudices frixit. Nobis non corporum cultus, qui in illis—excepto privilegio gratiae Dei—ex huiusce modi cibus enituerat, sed animae vigor quaeritur, quae carnis infirmitate fit fortior. Inde est, quod nonnulli vitam pudicam adpetentium in medio itinere corruunt, dum solam abstinentiam carniū putant et leguminibus onerant stomachum, quae moderate parceque sumpta innoxia sunt. Et ut, quod sentio, loquar,

¹ Terence, Eunuchus, 732.

² 1 Timothy, v. 23.

³ Romans, xiv. 21.

⁴ Romans, xiv. 2.

⁵ Daniel, i. 8.

⁶ There is a tradition that the elders who tempted Susannah were thus burned.

LETTER LIV

that even the comic dramatist, whose aim is to know and to describe the ways of men, says:—

‘Venus grows cold if Ceres be not there
And Bacchus with her.’¹

In the first place then, if your stomach is strong enough, until you pass out of girlhood drink only water, by nature the coolest of all beverages. If your health renders this impossible, listen to the advice given to Timothy: ‘Use a little wine for thy stomach’s sake and thine often infirmities.’² Secondly, in the way of food avoid all heating dishes. I do not speak of meat only—although on it the chosen vessel delivers this judgment: ‘It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine’³—but with vegetables also anything that creates wind or lies heavy on the stomach should be rejected. You should know that nothing is so good for young Christians as a diet of herbs. So in another place Paul says: ‘Let him who is weak eat herbs.’⁴ By cold food the heat of the body should be tempered. Though Daniel and the three children lived on vegetables,⁵ they were only children and had not reached that frying pan in which the king of Babylon cooked the elders who were judges.⁶ We do not seek for the physical strength which by a special privilege of God’s grace they gained from this diet; we aim rather at vigour of soul, which becomes stronger as the flesh grows weaker. This is the reason why some of those who aspire to a life of chastity fall midway on the road. They think that they need merely abstain from meat, and they load their stomach with vegetables which are only harmless when taken sparingly and in moderation. To give you my real opinion, I nihil sic inflammat corpora et titillat membra genitalia nisi indigestus cibus ructusque convulsus. Malo apud te, filia, verecundia parumper quam causa periclitari. Quidquid seminarium voluptatum est, venenum puto. Parcus cibus et semper venter esuriens triduanis ieiuniis praeferatur, et multo melius est cottidie parum quam raro satis sumere. Pluvia illa optima est, quae sensim descendit in terras; subitus et nimius imber praeceps arva subvertit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Quando comedis, cogita, quod statim tibi orandum, ilico legendum sit. De scripturis sanctis habeto fixum versuum numerum; istud pensum domino tuo redde nec ante quieti membra concedas, quam calathum pectoris tui hoc subtegmine impleveris. Post scripturas sanctas doctorum hominum tractatus lege, eorum dumtaxat, quorum fides nota est. Non necesse habes aurum in luto quaerere: multis margaritis unam redime margaritam. Sta iuxta Hieremiam in viis pluribus, ut ad illam viam, quae ad patrem ducit, pervenias. Amorem monilium atque gemmarum sericarumque vestium transfer ad scientiam scripturarum. Ingredere terram re-promissionis lacte et melle manantem, comedere similam et oleum, vestire cum Ioseph variis indumentis, perforentur aures tuae cum Hierusalem sermone Dei, ut pretiosa ex illis novarum segefum grana dependeant. Habes sanctum Exuperium probatae aetatis et fidei, qui te monitis suis frequenter instituat.

¹ Pensum, properly the weight of wool allotted to a servant to be made into yarn; the day's task.

² Cf. Jeremiah, vi. 16.

³ Cf. Ezekiel, xvi. 12.

⁴ Cf. p. 436, note 3.

LETTER LIV

think that nothing so inflames the body and titillates the organs of generation as undigested food, and convulsive belching. With you, my daughter, I would rather risk offending your modesty than understate my case. Regard as poison anything that has within it the seeds of sensual pleasure. A frugal diet which leaves you always hungry is to be preferred to a three days' fast, and it is much better to go short every day than occasionally to satisfy your appetite to the full. That rain is best which falls slowly to earth: a sudden and excessive shower which comes tumbling down washes away the soil.

When you are eating, remember that immediately afterwards you will have to pray and read. Take a fixed number of verses from the Holy Scripture and show them up as your task ¹ to your Lord; and do not lie down to rest until you have filled your heart's basket with this precious yarn. After the Holy Scriptures, read the treatises that have been written by learned men, provided, of course, that they are persons of known faith. You need not seek for gold amid the mire: with many pearls buy the one pearl of price. As Jeremiah ² says, stand in more ways than one, so that you may come to the way that leads to the Father. Change your love of necklaces and jewels and silk dresses to a desire for scriptural knowledge. Enter the land of promise that flows with milk and honey. Eat wheaten flour and oil, dress like Joseph in coats of many colours, let your ears, like Jerusalem's, ³ be pierced by the word of God, so that the precious grains of new corn may hang from them. You have in the saintly Exuperius ⁴ a man of tried years and faith, who can give you constant support with his advice.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Fac tibi amicos de iniquo mammona, qui te recipiant in aeterna tabernacula. Illis tribue divitias tuas, qui non Phasides aves, sed cibarium panem coemant, qui famem expellant, qui non augeant luxuriam. Intellege super egenum et pauperem. 'Omni petenti te da,' sed 'maxime domesticis fidei': nudum vesti, esurientem ciba, aegrotantem visita; quotienscumque manum extendis, Christum cogita, cave ne mendicante domino tuo alienas divitias augeas.

13. Iuvenum fuge consortia. Comatulos, comptos atque lascivos domus tuae tecta non videant. Cantor pellatur ut noxius; fidicinas et psaltrias et istius modi chorum diaboli quasi mortifera sirenarum carmina proturba ex aedibus tuis. Noli ad publicum subinde procedere et spadonum exercitu praeunte viduarum circumferri libertate. Pessimae consuetudinis est, cum fragilis sexus et inbecilla aetas suo arbitrio abutitur et putat licere, quod libet. 'Omnia' quidem 'licent, sed non omnia expediunt.' Nec procurator calamistratus nec formosus conlactaneus nec candidulus et rubicundus adsecula adhaereant lateri tuo: interdum animus dominarum et ancillarum habitu iudicatur. Sanctarum virginum et viduarum societatem adpete, et si sermocinandi cum viris incumbit necessitas, arbitros ne devites tantaque confabulandi fiducia sit, ut intrante alio nec paveas nec erubescas. Speculum mentis est facies et taciti

¹ St. Luke, vi. 30, and Galatians, vi. 10.

² 1 Corinthians, vi. 12.

LETTER LIV

Make to yourself friends of the mammon of unrighteousness that they may receive you into everlasting habitations. Give your wealth to those who purchase not pheasants but coarse bread, staying their hunger, not stimulating wantonness. Consider the poor and needy. 'Give to everyone that asketh of thee,' but 'especially unto them that are of the household of faith';¹ clothe the naked, feed the hungry, visit the sick; every time you hold out your hand, think of Christ; beware lest, when your Lord asks alms, you increase other people's riches.

Avoid the society of young men. Let your house never see beneath its roof wanton long-haired dandies. Repel a singer like the plague. Drive from your dwelling all women who live by playing and singing, the devil's choir whose songs are as deadly as those of the sirens. Do not claim a widow's liberty and appear in the streets with a host of eunuchs walking before your chair. It is a very bad habit for weak young persons of the frailer sex to abuse their freedom from restraint, and to think that they are allowed to do anything they please. 'All things are lawful but all things are not expedient.'² Let no curled steward or handsome foster-brother or fair ruddy footman stand continually by your side. Sometimes the character of the mistress is inferred from the dress of her maids. Seek the company of holy virgins and widows, and if you are obliged to talk with men, do not refuse to have other people present. Let your conversation be so sure of itself that the entry of a third person will neither make you start nor blush. The face is the mirror of the mind, and eyes without oculi cordis fatentur arcana. Vidimus nuper ignominiosum per totum orientem volitasse: et aetas et cultus et habitus et incessus, indiscreta societas, exquisitae epulae, regius apparatus Neronis et Sardapalli nuptias loquebantur. Aliorum vulnus nostra sit cautio; 'Pestilente flagellato stultus sapientior erit.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Sanctus amor inpatientiam non habet; falsus rumor cito opprimitur et vita posterior iudicat de priori. Fieri quidem non potest, ut absque morsu hominum vitae huius curricula quis pertranseat, malorumque solacium est bonos carpere, dum peccantium multitudine putant culpam minui peccatorum; sed tamen cito ignis stipulae conquiescit et exundans flamma deficientibus nutrimentis paulatim emoritur. Si anno praeterito fama mentita est aut, si certe verum dixit, cessavit¹ vitium, cessabit et rumor. Haec dico, non quo de te sinistrum quid metuam, sed quo pietatis affectu etiam, quae tuta sunt, pertimescam. O si videres sororem tuam et illud sacri oris eloquium coram audire contingeret, cerneres in parvo corpusculo ingentes animos, audires totam veteris et novi testamenti supellectilem ex illius corde fervere! Ieiunia pro ludo habet, orationem pro deliciis. Tenet tympanum in exemplum Mariae et Pharaone submerso virginum choro praecinit: 'Cantemus domino: gloriose enim magnificatus est, equum et ascensorem deiecit in mare.'

¹ cesset: Hilberg.

¹ Proverbs, xix. 25. Vulgate.

² Cf. p. 232, note 5.

³ Exodus, xv. 21.

LETTER LIV

speaking confess the secrets of the heart. I have lately seen a scandalous object flitting this way and that through the East. Her age, her style, her dress, her mien, the indiscriminate company she kept, and the regal pomp of her elaborate dinners, all proclaimed her a fitting bride for Nero or Sardanapallus. Let us take warning from another's wound: 'When he that causeth trouble is scourged the fool will be wiser.'¹

A holy love is never impatient: a false rumour is quickly stifled, and the after life passes judgment on that which has gone before. It is not possible, indeed, that any one should reach the end of life's race without suffering from the tooth of calumny: it is a consolation for the wicked to gird at the good, and they think that a multitude of sinners lessens the guilt of sin. But, nevertheless, a fire of straw soon dies down, and a spreading flame gradually expires if it has nothing to feed on. If last year's rumour was a lie, or if, though it was true, the sin has now ceased, then the scandal will cease also. I say this, not that I fear anything wrong in your case, but because my fatherly love for you is so great that even safety makes me afraid. Oh, if you could see your sister,² and be allowed to listen to the eloquence of her holy lips, and behold the mighty spirit that dwells within her small body! Oh, if you could hear the whole contents of the Old and New Testament come bubbling from her heart! Fasting is her sport, prayer her favourite pastime. Like Miriam after the drowning of Pharaoh, she takes up her timbrel and leads the virgin choir: 'Let us sing to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider He hath thrown into the sea.'³ She

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Has docet psaltrias Christo, has fidicianas erudit salvatori. Sic dies, sic nox ducitur et oleo ad lampadas praeparato sponsi expectatur adventus. Imitare ergo et tu consanguineam tuam: habeat Roma, quod angustior urbe Romana possidet Bethleem.

14. Habes opes, facile tibi est indigentibus victus subsidia ministrare. Quod luxuriae parabatur, virtus insumat; nulla nuptias contemptura timeat egestatem. Redime virgines, quas in cubiculum salvatoris inducas, suscipe viduas, quas inter virginum lilia et martyrum rosas quasi quasdam violas misceas; pro corona spinea, in qua mundi Christus delicta portavit, talia sarta compone. Laetetur et adiuvet vir nobilissimus, pater tuus; discat a filia, quod didicerat ab uxore. Iam incanuit caput, tremunt genua, dentes cadunt et frontem obscenam rugis arat, vicina est mors in foribus, designatur rogos prope: velimus nolimus, senes sumus. Paret sibi viaticum, quos longo itinere necessarium est. Secum portet, quod invitus dimissurus est, immo praemittat in caelum, quod, ni caruerit, terra sumptura est.

15. Solent adulescentulae viduae, quarum nonnullae 'abierunt retro Satanam, cum luxuriatae fuerint in Christo,' subantes dicere: 'Patrimoniolum meum cottidie perit, maiorum hereditas dissipatur, servus contumeliose locutus est, imperium ancilla teaches her companions to be music-girls for Christ, and trains them as lute-players for the Saviour. Thus she passes her days and nights, and with oil ready in her lamp awaits the coming of the Bridegroom. Take pattern then by your kinswoman. Let Rome have what Bethlehem, a smaller place than Rome, already possesses.

¹ At this time many Romans were being taken captive by invading barbarians and held to ransom.

² 1 Timothy, v. 15, 11.

LETTER LIV

You have money, and can easily supply food to those who want it. Let virtue take what was meant for extravagance: no woman who means to scorn marriage need fear poverty. Ransom¹ virgins and lead them into the Saviour's chamber. Support widows and mingle them like violets with the virgins' lilies and the martyrs' roses. These are the garlands you must make for Christ in place of the crown of thorns in which He bore the sins of the world. Let your noble father rejoice to help you; let him learn from his daughter as he once learned from his wife. His hair is grey, his knees shake, his teeth are falling out, his forehead is disfigured by wrinkles, death stands near at his door, and the pyre is being marked out for him close by. Whether we like it or not, we are old men now. Let him provide for himself the provision he needs for his long journey. Let him take with him that which otherwise he must reluctantly leave behind; nay, let him send before him to heaven what, if he does not take care, will be appropriated by earth.

Young widows, of whom some 'are already turned aside after Satan, when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ,'² in their lustful moments are wont to say: 'My little estate is wasting every day, the property I have inherited is being scattered, my footman has spoken insultingly to me, my maid neglexit. Quis procedet ad publicum? Quis respondebit pro agrorum tributis? Parvulos meos quis erudiet? Vernulas quis educabit?' Et hanc—pro nefas!—causam opponunt matrimonii, quae vel sola debuit nuptias inpedire. Superducit mater filiis non vitricum, sed hostem, non parentem, sed tyrannum. Inflammata libidine obliviscitur uteri sui, et inter parvulos suas miserias nescientes lugens dudum nova nupta componitur. Quid obtendis patrimonium, quid superbiam servulorum? Confitere turpitudinem. Nulla idcirco ducit maritum, ut cum marito non dormiat. Aut si certe libido non stimulat, quae tanta insania est in morem scortorum prostituere castitatem, ut augeantur divitiae, et propter rem vilem atque perituram pudicitia, quae et pretiosa et aeterna est, polluatur? Si habes liberos, nuptias quid requiris? Si non habes, quare expertam non metuis sterilitatem et rem incertam certo praefers pudori? Scribuntur tibi nunc sponsales tabulae, ut post paululum testamentum facere conpellaris. Simulabitur mariti infirmitas et, quod te morituram facere volet, ipse victurus faciet. Aut si evenerit, ut de secundo marito habeas filios, domestica pugna, intestinum proelium. Non licebit tibi amare liberos nec aequis aspicere oculis, quos genuisti. Clam porriges cibos, invidet mortuo, pays no attention to my orders. Who will appear for me in court? Who will be responsible for my land-tax? Who will educate my little children and bring up my house-slaves?' Shame on them! They bring forward as a reason for marriage the very thing which should in itself render marriage impossible. A mother sets over her children not a stepfather but an enemy, not a parent but a tyrant. Inflamed by lustfulness she forgets her own offspring, and in the midst of the little ones who know nothing of their sad fate the lately weeping widow arrays herself afresh as a bride. Why these pretexts of property and arrogant servants? Confess your vileness. No woman marries with the idea of not sleeping with a husband. If you are not spurred on by lust, surely it is the height of madness to prostitute yourself like a harlot merely to increase your wealth, and for a paltry and passing gain to pollute that precious chastity which might endure for ever. If you have children, why do you want to marry? If you have none, why do you not fear the barrenness you have already known? Why do you put an uncertain gain before a certain loss of modesty? A marriage settlement is made in your favour to-day, but soon you will be induced to make your will. Your husband will feign illness, and will do for you what he wants you to do for him: but he means to go on living, and you are destined for an early grave. Or if it should happen that you have sons by your second husband, domestic warfare and intestine feuds will be the result. You will not be allowed to love your own children, or to look kindly on those to whom you gave birth. You will hand them their food secretly; for he will et nisi oderis filios, adhuc eorum amare videberis patrem. Quodsi de priori uxore habens sobolem te domum introduxerit, etiam si clementissima fueris, omnes comoediae et mimographi et communes rhetorum loci in novercam saevissimam declamabunt. Si privignus languerit et condoluerit caput, infama-beris ut venefica. Si non dederis cibos, crudelis, ^{si} dederis, malefica diceris. Oro te, quid habent tantum boni secundae nuptiae, ut haec mala valeant compensare?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LETTER LIV

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

16. Volumus scire, quales esse debeant viduae? Legamus evangelium secundum Lucam: 'Et erat,' inquit, 'Anna prophetissa, filia Phanuel de tribu Aser.' Anna interpretatur 'gratia,' Phanuel in lingua nostra resonat 'vultum Dei,' Aser vel in 'beatitudinem' vel in 'divitias' vertitur. Quia ergo ab adolescentia usque ad octoginta quattuor annos viduitatis onus sustinuerat et non recedebat de templo Dei diebus ac noctibus insistens ieiuniis et obsecrationibus, idcirco meruit gratiam spiritalem et nuncupatur filia vultus Dei et atavis beatitudine divitiisque censetur. Recordemur viduae Sareptenae, quae et suae et filiorum saluti Heliae praetulit famem et ipsa nocte moritura cum filio superstitem hospitem relinquebat malens vitam perdere quam elemosynam et in pugillo farris seminarium sibi messis dominicae preparavit. Farina seritur et olei capsaces nascitur.

¹ St. Luke, ii. 36.

² 1 Kings, xvii. 10 ff.

LETTER LIV

be jealous of your dead husband, and unless you hate your sons he will think you still in love with their father. If he, for his part, has issue by a former wife, when he brings you into his house, then, even though you have a heart of gold, you will be the cruel stepmother, against whom every comedy, every mime-writer, and every dealer in rhetorical commonplaces raises his voice. If your stepson falls sick or has a headache, you will be maligned as a poisoner. If you refuse him food, you will be cruel; if you give it, you will be said to have bewitched him. What benefit, I pray you, can a second marriage confer sufficient to compensate for these disadvantages?

Do we wish to know how widows ought to behave? Let us read the Gospel according to Luke: 'There was one Anna,' he says, 'a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel of the tribe of Aser.'¹ Anna means 'grace,' Phanuel in our language is the 'face of God,' Aser is translated either as 'blessedness' or 'wealth.' As then she had borne the burden of widowhood from her youth up to the age of fourscore and four years, and never left the temple day or night, giving herself to fasting and prayer, therefore she earned spiritual grace and is called daughter of the face of God, and in blessedness and wealth is reckoned with her ancestors. Let us remember the widow of Zarephath,² who considered the satisfaction of Elijah's hunger more important than her own and her children's lives. Though she thought that she and her son that very night would die, she meant her guest to survive, preferring to lose life rather than her name for charity. In her handful of meal she found the seed of the Lord's harvest. She sows her meal

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

In Iudaea frumenti penuria—granum enim tritici ibi mortuum fuerat—et in gentium viduae olei fluentia manabant. Legimus Iudith—si cui tamen placet volumen recipere—viduam confectam ieiuniis et habitu lugubri sorditatam, quae non lugebat mortuum virum, sed squalore corporis sponsi quaerebat adventum. Video armatam gladio manum, cruentam dexteram, recognosco caput Holofernae de mediis hostibus reportatum. Vincit viros femina et castitas truncat libidinem habituque repente mutato ad victrices sordes redit omnibus saeculi cultibus mundiores.

17. Quidam inperite et Debboram inter viduas numerant ducemque Barac arbitrantur Debborae filium, cum aliud scriptura commemoret. Nobis ad hoc nominabitur, quod prophetissa fuerit et in ordine iudicum supputetur. Et quia dicere poterat: 'Quam dulcia gutturi meo eloquia tua, super mel et favum ori meo,' apis nomen accepit scripturarum floribus pasta, Spiritus Sancti odore perfusa et dulces ambrosiae sucos prophetaali ore conponens. Noomin, quae nobiscum sonat παρακεκλημένη, quam interpretari possumus 'consolatam,' marito et liberis peregre mortuis pudicitiam reportavit in patriam et hoc sustentata viatico nurum Moabitidem tenuit, ut illud Esariae vaticinium conplerentur: 'Emitte agnum, domine, dominatorem terrae, de petra and, lo! a cruse of oil appears. In Judaea there was a scarcity of corn, for the grain of wheat had died; but in the house of a heathen widow streams of oil gushed forth. We read in the book of Judith, if we may accept that record, of a widow spent with fasting and unkempt in mourner's dress, who was not so much grieving for her dead husband but in squalor awaiting the advent of the Bridegroom. I see her hand armed with a sword and stained with blood, I recognize the head of Holofernes carried in triumph from the midst of the enemy. A woman conquers men, chastity beheads lust, and then suddenly changing her dress she returns again to her victorious squalor, a squalor finer than all the pomp of this world.

¹ Psalm cxix. 103.

² Ruth, i. 6, 16.

LETTER LIV

Some people ignorantly count Deborah among the widows, and think that Barak, the leader of the army, was her son. The Scripture gives a different account. I will mention her now because she was a prophetess and is reckoned as one of the judges, and also because she could say: 'How sweet are thy words unto my taste! Yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth.'¹ Rightly was she called 'the bee,' for she fed on the flowers of the Scriptures, she was steeped in the fragrance of the Holy Spirit, and with prophetic lips she gathered the sweet juices of the nectar. Naomi, in our language παρακεκλημένη, 'she who is consoled,' when her husband and children died in a foreign land, carried her chastity back to her native country, and supported by that provision for her journey, kept with her the Moabite woman who was her son's wife,² that in her the prophecy of Isaiah might be fulfilled: 'Send out the lamb, O Lord, to rule over the land from deserti.' Venio ad viduam de evangelio, viduam pauperculam, omni Israceitico populo ditiozem, quae accipiens granum sinapis et mittens fermentum in farinae satis tribus Patris et Filii confessionem Spiritus Sancti gratia temperavit et duo minuta misit in gazo-phylacium quidquid habere poterat in substantia sua universasque divitias in utroque fidei suae obtulit testamento. Haec sunt duo seraphin ter glorificantia Trinitatem et in thesauro ecclesiae condita, unde et forcipe utriusque instrumenti ardens carbo comprehensus purgat labia peccatoris.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

18. Quid vetera repetam et virtutes feminarum de libris proferam, cum possis multas tibi ante oculos proponere in urbe, qua vivis, quarum imitari exemplum debeas? Et ne videar adulatione per singulas currere, sufficit tibi sancta Marcella, quae respondens generi suo aliquid nobis de evangelio retulit. Anna septem annis a virginitate sua vixerat cum marito, ista septem mensibus; illa Christi expectabat adventum, ista tenet, quem illa susceperat; illa vagientem canebat; ista praedicat triumphantem; illa loquebatur de eo omnibus, qui expectabant redemptionem Hierusalem, haec cum redemptis gentibus clamat: 'Frater non redimit, redimet homo,' et de alio psalmo: 'Homo natus est in ea et ipse fundavit eam altissimus.' Scio me ante hoc

¹ Isaiah, xvi. 1.

² Isaiah, vi. 2, 3.

³ Psalm xlix. 7.

⁴ Psalm lxxxvii. 5.

LETTER LIV

the rock of the desert.'¹ I come now to the widow in the Gospel, that poor humble widow who was richer than all the people of Israel. She had but a grain of mustard seed, but she put her leaven into three measures of flour, and tempering her confession of the Father and Son with the grace of the Holy Spirit, she cast her two mites into the treasury. All her substance and her entire wealth she offered in the double testament of her faith. These are the two seraphim which glorify the Trinity with triple song, and are stored among the treasures of the Church.² Hence, also, the double pincers wherewith the live coal is gripped to purge the sinner's lips.

But why should I go back to ancient times and quote instances of female virtue from books? Before your own eyes in Rome, where you are living now, you have many women whom you might well choose for your model. I will not take them individually lest I should seem to flatter: you may be content with one, the saintly Marcella, who while she maintains the glory of her family has given us an example of the Gospel life. Anna lived with a husband seven years from her virginity; Marcella lived seven months. Anna looked for the coming of Christ; Marcella holds fast to the Lord whom Anna welcomed. Anna sang of Him, when He was still a puling infant; Marcella proclaims His triumph. Anna spoke of Him to all those who were awaiting the redemption of Jerusalem; Marcella cries aloud with the nations of the redeemed: 'A brother redeemeth not, yet a man shall redeem,'³ and from another psalm: 'A man was born in her and the Highest Himself hath established her.'⁴ About two years ago ferme biennium edidisse libros contra Iovinianum, quibus venientes e contrario quaestiones, ubi apostolus concedit secunda matrimonia, scripturarum auctoritate contrivi. Et non necesse est eadem ex integro scribere, cum possis inde, quae scripta sunt, mutuari. Hoc tantum, ne modum egrediar epistulae, admonitam volo: cogita te cottidie esse morituram, et numquam de secundis nuptiis cogitabis.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LX

AD HELIODORUM EPITAPHIUM NEPOTIANI

1. GRANDES materias ingenia parva non sufferunt et in ipso conatu ultra vires ausa succumbunt; quantoque maius fuerit, quod dicendum est, tanto magis obruitur, qui magnitudinem rerum verbis non potest explicare. Nepotianus meus, tuus, noster, immo Christi, et quia Christi, idcirco plus noster, reliquit senes et desiderii sui iaculo vulneratos intolerabili dolore confecit. Quem heredem putavimus, funus tenemus. Cui iam meum sudabit ingenium? Cui litterulae placere gestient? Ubi est ille ἐργοδιώκτης noster et cygneo canore vox dulcior? Stupet animus, manus tremit, caligant oculi, lingua balbutit. Quidquid dixero, quia ille non audiet, ¹ At one time a monk, later an opponent of Christian asceticism. Pammachius sent a copy of his work to Jerome at Bethlehem and Jerome's answer to it was written in 393.

LETTER LIV AND LETTER LX

I know that I published a treatise against Jovinian,¹ in which I refuted by the authority of the Scriptures the objections based on the apostle's concession of second marriages. It is unnecessary to repeat my arguments afresh, for you can borrow them from that book. That I may not exceed the limits of a letter, I will give you this final piece of advice. Think every day that you must die, and then you will never think of a second marriage.

LETTER LX

To HELIODORUS

A Letter of Consolation for the death of Nepotianus

Written A.D. 396

SMALL minds cannot deal adequately with great subjects; if they venture beyond their strength they fail in the attempt; and the greater the theme, the more completely is he overwhelmed who cannot find words to express its grandeur. Nepotian who was mine and yours and ours—nay rather, who was Christ's and because Christ's therefore the more ours—has left us in our old age overwhelmed with a grief that is past bearing, our hearts all sore with longing for him still. We thought of him as our heir, but now we only have his dead body. For whom now shall my mind exert itself? Whom shall my poor writings strive to please? Where is he, the inspirer of my labours, whose voice was sweeter than a swan's song? My heart is numbed, my hand trembles, my eyes are misty, my tongue stammers. All that I say seems voiceless, for he no

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

mutum videtur. Stilus ipse quasi sentiens et cera subtristior vel rubigine vel situ obducitur. Quotiescumque nitor in verba prorumpere et super tumulum eius epitaphii huius flores spargere, totiens complentur oculi et renovato dolore totus in funere sum. Moris quondam fuit, ut super cadavera defunctorum in contione pro rostris laudes liberi dicerent et instar lugubrium carminum ad fletus et gemitus audientium pectora concitarent: en rerum in nobis ordo mutatus est et in calamitatem nostram perdidit sua iura natura: quod exhibere senibus iuvenis debuit, hoc iuveni exhibemus senes.

2. Quid igitur faciam? Iungam tecum lacrimis? Sed apostolus prohibet Christianorum mortuos dormientes vocans et dominus in evangelio: 'Non est,' inquit, 'mortua puella, sed dormit.' Lazarus quoque, quia dormierat, suscitatus est. Laeter et gaudeam, quod 'raptus sit, ne malitia inmutaret mentem eius,' quia placeret Deo anima illius? Sed invito et repugnanti per genas lacrimae fluunt et inter praecepta virtutum resurrectionisque spem credulam mentem desiderii frangit affectus. O mors, quae fratres dividis et amore sociatos crudelis ac dura dissocias! 'Adduxit urentem ventum dominus de deserto ascendentem, qui siccavit venas tuas et desolavit fontem tuum.' Devorasti quidem Ionam,

¹ Cf. Virgil, Aeneid, V. 79, purpureosque iacit flores (on the tomb of Anchises).

² Thessalonians, iv. 13.

³ St. Mark, v. 39.

⁴ Wisdom, iv. 11.

⁵ Hosea, xiii. 15.

LETTER LX

longer hears. My very pen is rusty as though it felt his loss, my wax tablet looks dull and is covered over with mould. Whenever I try to give vent to speech and to scatter the flowers¹ of this funeral panegyric on his tomb, my eyes fill with tears, my pain begins again to rankle, and I can think of nothing but his death. It was the ancient custom for children over the dead bodies of their parents to recite their praises on the platform of a public meeting, and as though by the singing of dirges to stir their audience to sobs and lamentations. Behold, with us the order of things is changed, and nature has lost her rights in bringing this disaster upon us. What the young man should have done for his elders, we his elders are doing now for him.

What shall I do then? Shall I join my tears to yours? The apostle forbids, for he calls dead Christians 'them which are asleep,'² and the Lord in the Gospels says: 'The damsel is not dead but sleepeth.'³ Lazarus also, inasmuch as he had but fallen asleep, was raised back to life. Shall I rather rejoice and be glad, that 'speedily he was taken away lest that wickedness should alter his understanding,'⁴ for his soul was pleasing to the Lord? Nay, though I struggle and try to fight against them, the tears still run down my cheeks, and in spite of virtue's teaching and our hope of the resurrection a passion of regret is breaking my fond heart. O death that partest brothers and dost unknit the close bonds of love, how cruel art thou and how stern! 'The Lord hath fetched a burning wind that cometh up from the wilderness: which hath dried thy veins and hath made thy fountain desolate.'⁵ Thou didst swallow our Jonah, O death, but even in thy belly He sed et in utero tuo vivus fuit. Portæsti quasi mortuum, ut tempestas mundi conquiesceret et Nineve nostra illius praeconio salvaretur. Ille, ille te vicit, ille iugulavit fugitivus propheta, qui reliquit domum suam, dedit dilectam animam suam in manus quaerentium eam. Qui per Osee quondam tibi rigidus minabatur: 'Ero mors tua, o mors; ero morsus tuus, inferne,' illius morte tu mortua es, illius morte nos vivimus. Devorasti et devorata es, dumque adsumpti corporis sollicitaris inlecebra et avidis faucibus praedam putas, interiora tua adunco dente confossa sunt.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Gratias tibi, Christe salvator, tua agimus creatura, quod tam potentem adversarium nostrum, dum occideris, occidisti. Quis ante miserior homine, qui aeterno mortis terrore prostratus vivendi sensum ad hoc tantum acceperat, ut periret? 'Regnavit,' enim, 'mors ab Adam usque ad Moysen etiam super eos, qui non peccaverunt in similitudinem praevaricationis Adam.' Si Abraham, Isaac et Iacob in inferno, quis in caelorum regno? Si amici tui sub poena offendentis Adam et, qui non peccaverant, alienis peccatis tenebantur obnoxii, quid de his credendum est, qui dixerunt in cordibus suis: 'non est Deus,' qui 'corrupti et abominabiles facti sunt in voluntatibus suis,' qui 'declinaverunt, simul inutiles facti sunt; non est, qui faciat bonum, non est usque ad unum'? Quodsi Lazarus videtur in sinu Abraham locoque refrigerii, quid simile infernus et regna

¹ Hosea, xiii. 14.

² Romans, v. 14.

³ Psalm xiv. 1.

⁴ Psalm xiv. 3.

LETTER LX

lived. Thou didst carry Him as one dead, that the storms of this world might be appeased and our Nineveh saved by His preaching. He, He was thy conqueror, He it was who slew thee, the fugitive prophet who left His home, gave up His inheritance, and surrendered His dear life into the hands of those that sought it. He it was who once by the mouth of Hosea uttered against thee the stern threat: 'O death, I will be thy death; O grave, I will be thy destruction.'¹ By His death thou art dead; by His death we live. Thou hast swallowed and thou art swallowed up, and while thou wert tempted by the lure of the body they had seized and thought it a prey for thy greedy jaws, lo! thy inward parts are pierced with the hook's carved teeth.

We Thy creatures render thanks to Thee, O Saviour Christ, for that whilst Thou wert slain Thou didst slay our so mighty adversary. Before Thy coming was there anything more miserable than man, who cowering in eternal fear of death had but received the sense of life that he might perish? 'Death reigned from Adam to Moses even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression.'² If Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob be in the tomb, who can be in the kingdom of heaven? If thy friends who had not sinned were for the sins of another held liable to the punishment of offending Adam, what must be believed of those who said in their hearts: 'There is no God,'³ men 'corrupt and abominable in their self-will, who are gone out of the way, they are become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one'⁴ Even if Lazarus is seen in Abraham's bosom and in a place of refreshment, what likeness can there be between the lower caelorum? Ante Christum Abraham apud inferos; post Christum latro in paradiso. Et idcirco in resurrectione eius multa dormientium corpora surrexerunt et visa sunt in caelesti Hierusalem. Tuncque completum est illud eloquium: 'Surge, qui dormis, et elevare et inluminabit te Christus.' Iohannes Baptista in heremo personat: 'Paenitentiam agite; adpropinquavit enim regnum caelorum.' A diebus enim Iohannis Baptistae regnum caelorum vim passum est et violenti diripuerunt illud. Flamma illa rumphea, custos paradisi, et praesidentia foribus cherubin Christi restincta et reserata sunt sanguine. Nec mirum hoc nobis in resurrectione promitti, cum omnes, qui in carne non secundum carnem vivimus, municipatum habeamus in caelo et hic adhuc positus dicatur in terra: 'Regnum Dei intra vos est.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Adde quod ante resurrectionem Christi 'notus' tantum erat 'in Iudaea Deus, in Israhel magnum nomen eius,' et ipsi, qui noverant eum, tamen ad inferos trahebantur. Ubi tunc totius orbis homines ab India usque ad Britanniam, a rigida septentrionis plaga usque ad fervores Atlantici oceani, tam innumerabiles populi et tantarum gentium multitudines 'quam variae linguis, habitu tam vestis et armis'? Piscium ritu ac lucustarum et velut muscae et culices conterebantur; absque notitia enim creatoris sui omnis homo pecus est. Nunc vero passionem Christi et resurrectionem eius cunctarum gentium

¹ Ephesians, v. 14.

² St. Matthew, iii. 2.

³ St. Luke, xvii. 21.

⁴ Psalm lxxvi. 1.

⁵ Virgil, Aeneid, VIII. 723.

LETTER LX

regions and the kingdom of heaven? Before Christ Abraham was in the ground beneath; after Christ the robber is in Paradise. And therefore at His resurrection many bodies of those that slept arose and were seen in the heavenly Jerusalem. Then was fulfilled the saying: 'Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.'¹ John the Baptist cries in the desert: 'Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.'² For from the days of John the Baptist the kingdom of heaven suffered violence and the violent took it by force. The flaming sword that guarded Paradise, and the cherubim that kept its doors, were alike quenched and unloosed by the blood of Christ. Nor is it surprising that this is promised us at the resurrection, seeing that all of us, who now in the flesh live not after the manner of the flesh, have our citizenship in heaven, and while we are still here on earth we are told 'the kingdom of heaven is within you.'³

Moreover, before the resurrection of Christ God was only 'known in Judah and his name was great in Israel,'⁴ and even those who knew Him were still dragged down to the nether world. Where at that time were the inhabitants of the whole world from India to Britain, from the ice-bound northern zone to the burning heat of the Atlantic Ocean? Where were its countless peoples, its thronging tribes

'In dress and arms as varied as in speech':⁵

They were but packed together like fishes and locusts, flies and gnats; for without knowledge of his Creator every man is but a brute. But to-day the voices and the writings of all nations proclaim voces et litterae sonant. Taceo de Hebraeis, Graecis et Latinis, quas nationes fidei suae in crucis titulo dominus dedicavit. Immortalem animam et post dissolutionem corporis subsistentem, quod Pythagoras somniavit, Democritus non credidit, in consolationem damnationis suae Socrates disputavit in carcere, Indus, Persa, Gothus, Aegyptius philosophantur. Bessorum feritas et pellitorum turba populorum, qui mortuorum quondam inferiis homines immolabant, stridorem suum in dulce crucis fregerunt melos et totius mundi una vox Christus est.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Quid agimus, anima? Quo nos vertimus? Quid primum adsumimus? Quid tacemus? Exciderunt tibi praecepta rhetorum et occupata luctu, oppressa lacrimis, praepedita singultibus dicendi ordinem non tenes! Ubi illud ab infantia studium litterarum et Anaxagorae ac Telamonis semper laudata sententia: 'Sciebam me genuisse mortalem'? Legimus Crantorem, cuius volumen ad confovendum dolorem suum secutus est Cicero, Platonis, Diogenis, Clitomachi, Carneadis, Posidonii ad sedandos luctus opuscula percurrimus, qui diversis aetatibus diversorum lamenta vel libris vel epistulis minuere sunt conati, ut, etiamsi nostrum areret ingenium, de illorum posset fontibus inrigari: proponunt innumerabiles viros et maxime Periclen et Xenophontem Socraticum, quorum alter amissis the passion and the resurrection of Christ. I say nothing of the Hebrews, the Greeks, and the Latins, peoples whom the Lord dedicated to His faith by the inscription on His cross. That immortality of the soul, and its existence after the dissolution of the body, which Pythagoras dreamed, Democritus would not believe, and Socrates discussed in prison to console himself for his conviction, that is now the common philosophy of Indian and Persian, Egyptian and Goth. The savage Bessians¹ and their host of skin-clad tribes, who used to offer human sacrifice to the dead, have now dissolved their rough discord into the sweet music of the Cross, and the whole world with one voice cries out, 'Christ.'

¹ A Thracian tribe.

LETTER LX

What shall we do, O my soul? Whither shall we turn? What theme shall we choose first? What shall we omit? Have you forgotten the precepts of the rhetoricians, and are you so preoccupied with grief, oppressed with tears, and hindered by sobs that you cannot keep to any ordered narrative? Where now is that love of literature which you have cherished from childhood? Where is the saying of Anaxagoras and Telamon which you always used to praise: 'I knew that I was born a mortal'? I have read Crantor, whose treatise written to comfort his own grief Cicero imitated. I have perused those minor works of Plato, Diogenes, Clitomachus, Carneades, and Posidonius, in which by book or letter they have tried at different times to lessen the sorrow of various persons and to console their grief. Therefore, even if my own wits were dry, I could water them from these fountains. They set before us men without number as examples, and particularly Pericles and Socrates' pupil Xenoduobus filiis coronatus in contione disseruit, alter, cum sacrificans filium in bello audisset occisum, deposuisse coronam dicitur et eandem capiti reposuisse, postquam fortiter in acie dimicantem repperit concidisse. Quid memorem Romanos duces, quorum virtutibus quasi quibusdam stellis Latinae micant historiae? Pulvillus Capitolium dedicans mortuum, ut nuntiabatur, subito filium se iussit absente sepeliri; Lucius Paulus septem diebus inter duorum exequias filiorum triumphans urbem ingressus est. Praetermitto Maximos, Catones, Gallos, Pisones, Brutos, Scaevolas, Metellos, Scauros, Marios, Crassos, Marcellos atque Aufidios, quorum non minor in luctu quam in bellis virtus fuit et quorum orbitates in Consolationis libro Tullius explicavit, ne videar aliena potius quam nostra quaesisse; quamquam et haec in suggillationem nostri breviter dicta sint, si non praestet fides, quod exhibuit infidelitas.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Igitur ad nostra veniamus. Non plangam cum Iacob et David filios in lege morientes, sed cum Christo in evangelio suscipiam resurgentes. Iudaeorum luctus Christianorum gaudium est. 'Ad vesperum demorabitur fletus et ad matutinum laetitia.' 'Nox praecessit, dies autem adpropinquavit.' Unde et Moyses moriens plangitur, Iesus absque funere et lacrimis in monte sepelitur. Quidquid de scripturis super lamentatione dici potest, in phon. The first, after the loss of his two sons, put on a garland and addressed a public meeting. The second was offering sacrifice when news came that his son had been killed in battle; thereupon, we are told, he took off his sacrificial garland, but replaced it when he heard that he had fallen fighting bravely. Why should I speak of those Roman leaders whose virtues glitter like stars in the pages of Latin history? Pulvillus was dedicating the Capitol when he was told that his son had suddenly died. 'Bury him,' he said, 'without me.' Lucius Paulus in the week that intervened between the funerals of his two sons entered Rome in triumphal procession. I pass over the Maximi, the Catos, the Galli, the Pisos, the Bruti, the Scaevolus, the Metelli, the Scauri, the Marii, the Crassi, the Marcelli and the Aufidii, men whose courage was as conspicuous in their sorrows as in their wars. Cicero has dealt with their bereavements in his book On Consolation, and of them I will say no more, lest I should seem to seek examples from strangers rather than from our own community. Not but what even this brief reference might serve as a mortification to us, if faith were not to give us what unbelief afforded them.

¹ Psalm xxx. 5.

² Romans, xiii. 12.

LETTER LX

Let us come then to our people. I will not weep with Jacob and David for sons who died under the Law, but with Christ I will welcome those who rise again under the Gospel dispensation. The Jew's mourning is the Christian's joy. 'Weeping may endure for a night but joy cometh in the morning.'¹ 'The night is far spent, the day is at hand.'² Wherefore even Moses is lamented when he dies; Joshua is buried on a mountain-top without funeral or tears. All that can be drawn from the Scriptures eo libro, quo Paulam Romae consolati sumus, breviter explicavimus. Nunc nobis per aliam semitam ad eundem locum perveniendum est, ne videamur praeterita et obsoleta quondam calcare vestigia.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. Scimus quidem Nepotianum nostrum esse cum Christo et sanctorum mixtum choris, quod nobiscum eminus rimabatur in terris et aestimatione quaerebat, ibi videntem comminus dicere: 'Sicut audivimus, ita et vidimus in civitate domini virtutum, in civitate Dei nostri,' sed desiderium absentiae eius ferre non possumus, non illius, sed nostram vicem dolentes. Quanto ille felicior, tanto nos amplius in dolore, quod tali caremus bono. Flebant et sorores Lazarum, quem resurrecturum noverant, et, ut veros hominis exprimeret affectus, ipse salvator ploravit, quem suscitaturus erat. Apostolus quoque eius, qui dixerat: 'Cupio dissolvi et esse cum Christo' et alibi: 'Mihi vivere Christus est et mori lucrum,' gratias agit, quod Epaphras de mortis sibi vicinia redditus sit, ne haberet tristitiam super tristitiam, non incredulitatis metu, sed desiderio caritatis. Quanto magis tu, et avunculus et episcopus, hoc est in carne et in spiritu pater, aves viscera tua et quasi a te divulsa suspiras! Sed obsecro, ut modum adhibeas in dolore memor illius sententiae: 'Ne quid nimis' obligatoque parumper vulnere audias laudes eius, cuius semper virtute laetatus es, nec doleas,

¹ Psalm xlvi. 8.

² Philippians, i. 23.

³ Philippians, i. 21.

⁴ The Greek proverb μηδὲν ἄγαν.

LETTER LX

on the subject of lamentation I have briefly set out in the letter of consolation which I wrote to Paula at Rome. Now I must traverse another path to arrive at the same goal, for I would not have people see me treading again an old and used-up track.

We know, indeed, that our dear Nepotian is with Christ, and that he has joined the choirs of the saints. We know that what here with us on earth he groped after at a distance and sought by guess-work, there he sees face to face and can say: 'As we have heard so we have seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God.'¹ But we cannot bear our regret at his absence, and we grieve not on his account but for ourselves. The greater his happiness, the deeper our pain in lacking the blessings that he enjoys. The sisters of Lazarus wept for their brother, although they knew that he would rise again, and the Saviour Himself, to show that He possessed true human feelings, mourned for the man He was going to raise. His apostle also who said: 'I desire to depart and be with Christ,'² and in another place: 'To me to live in Christ and to die is gain,'³ thanks God that Epaphras has been given back to him when he was nigh to death, that he might not have sorrow upon sorrow. His words were spoken not in unbelieving fear but in loving regret, and how much more keenly must you who were both uncle and bishop, a father both in the flesh and the spirit, deplore a death that meant the rending asunder of your own body. I beg you, however, to set a limit to your grief and to remember the saying: 'Nothing too much.'⁴ Bind up your wound for a little while, and listen to the praises of him in whose virtue you always delighted. Do not quod talem amiseris, sed gaudeas, quod talem habueris, et sicut hi, qui in brevi tabella terrarum situs pingunt, ita in parvo isto volumine cernas adumbrata, non expressa signa virtutum, suscipiasque a nobis non vires, sed voluntatem.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. Praecepta sunt rhetorum, ut maiores eius, qui laudandus est, et eorum altius gesta repetantur sicque ad ipsum per gradus sermo perveniat, quo videlicet avitis paternisque virtutibus inlustrior fiat et aut non degenerasse a bonis aut mediocres ipse ornasse videatur. Ego carnis bona, quae semper et ipse contempsit, in animae laudibus non requiram nec me iactabo de genere, id est de alienis bonis, cum et Abraham et Isaae, sancti viri, Ismahelem et Esau peccatores genuerint et a regione Iephte in catalogo iustorum apostoli voce numeratus de meretricie sit natus. 'Anima,' inquit, 'quae peccaverit, ipsa morietur'; ergo et, quae non peccaverit, ipsa vivet. Nec virtutes nec vitia parentum liberis imputantur; ab eo tempore censemur, ex quo in Christo renascimur. Paulus, persecutor ecclesiae et mane lupus rapax Benjamin, ad vesperam dedit escam Ananiae ovi submitbens caput. Igitur et Nepotianus noster quasi infantulus vagiens et rudis puer subito nobis de Iordane nascatur.

¹ Ezekiel, xviii. 4.

² Cf. p. 158, note 4.

³ Who baptized Paul, cf. Acts, ix. 10 ff.

LETTER LX

grieve that you have lost such a paragon, but rather rejoice that he once was yours. As men draw a map of the world on one small tablet, so in this little scroll of mine you may see his virtues, not indeed fully delineated but sketched in outline, and will recognize that my will is good even if my strength be lacking.

The rhetoricians' rule is that you should go back to the ancestors of the man you have to praise, and first recount their glorious deeds. Then gradually you will come to your hero, making him the more illustrious by the virtues of his forefathers, and showing either that he has not degenerated from a worthy stock or that he has brought honour to mediocrity. I for my part in praising Nepotian's soul shall not trouble about the fleshly advantages which he himself always despised, nor shall I boast of his family, that is, of other people's merits. Even such holy men as Abraham and Isaac were the fathers of sinners like Ishmael and Esau, while Jephthah, on the other hand, who is reckoned by the apostle in the roll of the righteous, was the son of a harlot. The Scripture says: 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.'¹ Therefore, also, the soul that hath not sinned shall live. Neither the virtues nor the vices of parents are set to the children's account. That reckoning begins with the hour when we are born again in Christ. Paul, the persecutor of the Church, who in the morning was Benjamin,² a ravening wolf, in the evening bowed his head and gave food to the sheep Ananias.³ We then also should think of our dear Nepotian as a crying babe or as an innocent child fresh born to us from the waters of Jordan.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Alius forsitan scriberet, quod ob salutem illius orientem heremumque dimiseris et me, carissimum sodalem tuum, redeundi spe lactaveris, ut primum, si fieri posset, sororem cum parvulo viduam, dein, si consilium illa respueret, saltem nepotem dulcissimum conservares. Hic est enim ille, de quo tibi quondam vaticinatus sum: 'Licet parvulus ex collo pendeat nepos.' Referret, inquam, alius, quod in palatii militia sub chlamyde et candenti lino corpus eius cilicio tritum sit, quod stans ante saeculi potestates lurida iciuniis ora portaverit, quod adhuc sub alterius indumentis alteri militarit et ad hoc habuerit cingulum, ut viduis, pupillis, oppressis, miseris subveniret: mihi non placent dilationes istae imperfectae servitutis Dei et centurionem Cornelium, ut lego iustum, statim audio baptizatum.

10. Verumtamen velut incunabula quaedam nascentis fidei conprobemus, ut, qui sub alienis signis devotus miles fuit, donandus laurea sit, postquam suo regi coeperit militare. Balteo posito habituque mutato, quidquid castrensium peculii fuit, in pauperes erogavit. Legerat enim: 'Qui vult perfectus esse, vendat omnia, quae habet, et det pauperibus et sequatur me,' et iterum: 'Non potestis duobus dominis servire, Deo et mammonae.' Excepta vili tunica et operimento pari, quod tecto tantum corpore frigus excluderet, nihil sibi amplius reservavit. Cultus ipse provinciae morem sequens nec munditiis

¹ Cf. Letter XIV, p. 31.

² St. Matthew, xix. 21.

³ St. Matthew, vi. 24.

LETTER LX

Another might perhaps describe how for his salvation you left the East and the desert, and how you fed me, your dearest comrade, with hopes of your return; desiring in the first place, if it were possible, to save your widowed sister and her little son, or, if she rejected your counsels, at least to preserve your dear little nephew. He is the child of whom I once used the prophetic words, 'though your little nephew cling to your neck.'¹ Another, I repeat, might tell how, while he was a soldier at court, beneath his military cloak and white linen tunic his skin was chafed by sackcloth; how, while he stood before the powers of this world, his lips were pale with fasting; how, while he wore one master's uniform, he served another; and how he only wore a sword-belt that he might succour the widow and the fatherless, the wretched and the oppressed. For my own part I do not like an incomplete or a deferred dedication to God's service, and when I read of the centurion Cornelius that he was a just man I immediately hear of him as being baptized.

Still, we may approve of all this as being the cradlings of a new-born faith. He who has been a loyal soldier under a foreign banner is sure to deserve the laurel when he begins to serve his own king. When Nepotian laid aside his soldier's belt and changed his dress, he gave all his army savings to the poor. For he had read the words: 'If thou wilt be perfect, sell that thou hast, and give to the poor and follow me,'² and again: 'Ye cannot serve two masters, God and Mammon.'³ He kept nothing for himself except a coarse tunic and cloak to protect him from the cold. His dress was of provincial cut, nec sordibus notabilis erat. Cumque arderet cotidie aut ad Aegypti monasteria pergere aut Mesopotamiae invisere choros vel certe insularum Dalmatiae, quae Altino tantum freto distant, solitudines occupare, avunculum pontificem deserere non audebat tota in illo cernens exempla virtutum domique habens, unde disceret. In uno atque eodem et imitabatur monachum et episcopum venerabatur. Non, ut in plerisque accidere solet, adsiduitas familiaritatem, familiaritas contemptum illius fecerat, sed ita eum colebat, quasi parentem, ita admirabatur, quasi cotidie novum cerneret.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Quid multa? Fit clericus et per solitos gradus presbyter ordinatur. Iesu bone, qui gemitus, qui heulatus, quae cibi interdictio, quae fuga oculorum omnium! Tum primum et solum avunculo iratus est. Querebatur se ferre non posse, et iuvenalem actatem incongruam sacerdotio causabatur. Sed quanto plus repugnabat, tanto magis omnium in se studia concitabat et merebatur negando, quod esse nolebat, eoque dignior erat, quod se clamabat indignum. Vidimus Timotheum nostri temporis et canos in Sapia electumque a Moysi presbyterum, quem ipse sciret esse presbyterum. Igitur clericatum non honorem intellegens sed onus primam curam habuit, ut humilitate superaret invidiam, deinde, ut nullam obsceni in se rumoris fabulam daret, ¹ Altinum, in Venetia, on the border of the lagoons, and opposite Torcello island, to which the episcopal see was transferred in A.D. 635.

² Cf. p. 412, note 1.

³ Wisdom, iv. 9. 'But wisdom is the grey hair unto man, and an unspotted life is old age.'

LETTER LX

not noticeable either for elegance or for shabbiness. Every day he burned either to go to the monasteries of Egypt, or to visit the saintly companies of Mesopotamia, or at least to take up his dwelling in the lonely spaces of the Dalmatian islands, separated from Altinum only by a strait.¹ But he could not bring himself to desert his episcopal uncle, in whom he saw a pattern of every virtue and from whose lessons he could profit at home. In one and the same person he had a monk to imitate and a bishop to revere. With him it was not as so often with many; intimacy did not breed familiarity, nor familiarity contempt. He honoured his bishop as though he had been his father; he admired him as though every day he saw in him a new man.

To be brief, Nepotian became a clergyman, and passing through the usual stages was ordained as presbyter.² Good Jesus! how he sobbed and groaned! how he forbade himself food and fled from the eyes of all! For the first and only time he was angry with his uncle, complaining that he could not bear his burden and alleging that his youth unfitted him for the priesthood. But the more he resisted, the more he drew to himself the love of all; his refusal showed him worthy of the rank he did not wish to take; all the more worthy indeed because he proclaimed his unworthiness. We too in our day have had a Timothy before our eyes; we too have seen the grey hairs of which the Book of Wisdom speaks;³ our Moses has chosen a presbyter whom he knew to be a presbyter indeed. Nepotian regarded the clerical office not as an honour but as a burden. He made it his first care to silence envy by humility, his second to give no ground for scandal against him ut, qui mordebantur ad aetatem eius, stuperent ad continentiam. Subvenire pauperibus, visitare languentes, provocare hospitio, lenire blanditiis, 'gaudere cum gaudentibus, flere cum flentibus'; caecorum baculus, esurientium cibus, spes miserorum, solamen lugentium fuit. Ita in singulis virtutibus eminebat, quasi ceteras non haberet. Inter presbyteros et coaequales primus in opere, extremus in ordine. Quidquid boni fecerat, ad avunculum referebat; si quid forte aliter evenerat, quam putarat, illum nescire, se errasse dicebat. In publico episcopum, domi patrem noverat. Gravitate morum hilaritate frontis temperabat. Gaudium risu, non cachinno, intellegeres. Viduas et virgines Christi honorare ut matres, hortari ut sorores cum omni castitate. Iam vero, postquam domum se contulerat et relicto foris clerico duritiae se tradiderat monachorum, creber in orationibus, vigilans in precando lacrimas Deo, non hominibus, offerebat; ieiunia in aurigae modum pro lassitudine et viribus corporis moderabatur. Mensae avunculi intererat et sic adposita quaeque libabat, ut et superstitionem fugeret et continentiam reservaret. Sermo eius et omne convivium de scripturis aliquid proponere, libenter audire, respondere verecunde, recta suscipere, prava non acriter confutare, dispu-

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Rom. xii. 15.

LETTER LX

and by continence to dumbfound those who railed against his youth. He helped the poor, visited the sick, challenged others to acts of hospitality, soothed men's anger with soft words, 'rejoiced with those who rejoiced and wept with those who wept.'¹ He was a staff to the blind, food to the hungry, hope to the wretched, a consolation to the sorrowful. Each single virtue was as conspicuous in him as if he possessed no others. Among his fellow-presbyters and equals in age, he was first in industry, last in rank. Any good that he did he ascribed to his uncle; if the result was different from what he had expected, he would say that his uncle knew nothing of the matter and that it was his own mistake. In public he recognized him as a bishop, at home he treated him as a father. The gravity of his character was tempered by the cheerfulness of his looks. A smile, not a guffaw, was the sign that he felt glad. Widows and Christ's virgins he honoured as mothers, and exhorted as sisters, with all chastity. On his return home he left the clergyman outside, and submitted himself to the hard rule of a monk. Frequent in supplication, wakeful in prayer, he offered his tears not to men but to God. His fasts he regulated, as a charioteer does his pace, by the weariness or the vigour of his body. He would sit at his uncle's table and just taste the dishes set before him, thus both avoiding superstition and yet keeping to his rule of self-restraint. His chief topic of conversation and his favourite form of entertainment was to bring forward some passage from the Scriptures for discussion; then he would listen modestly, answer diffidently, support the right, and mildly refute the wrong, instructing his opponent tantem contra se magis docere quam vincere et ingenuo pudore, qui ornabat aetatem, quid cuius esset, simpliciter confiteri; atque in hunc modum eruditionis gloriam declinando eruditissimus habebatur. 'Illud,' aiebat, 'Tertulliani, istud Cypriani, hoc Lactantii, illud Hilarii est. Sic Minucius Felix, ita Victorinus, in hunc modum est locutus Arnobius.' Me quoque, quia pro sodalitate avunculi diligebat, interdum proferebat in medium. Lectione quoque adsidua et meditatione diuturna pectus suam bibliothecam fecerat Christi.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Quotiens ille transmarinis epistulis deprecatus est, ut aliquid ad se scriberem! Quotiens nocturnum de evangelio petitorum et interpellatricem duri iudicis mihi viduam exhibuit! Cumque ego silentio magis quam litteris denegarem et pudore reticentis pudorem suffunderem postulantis, avunculum mihi opposuit precatorem, qui et liberius pro alio peteret et pro reverentia sacerdotii facilius inpetraret. Feci ergo, quod voluit, et brevi libello amicitias nostras aeternae memoriae consecravi; quo suscepto Croesi opes et Darii divitias se vicisse iactabat. Illum oculis, illum sinu, illum manibus, illum ore retinebat; cumque in strato frequenter evolveret, super pectus soporati dulcis pagina decidebat. Si vero peregri-rather than vanquishing him. With the ingenuous modesty which was one of his youthful charms he would frankly confess the source of each argument he used, and in this way by disclaiming any reputation for learning he gradually came to be considered the most learned of us all. 'This,' he would say, 'is Tertullian's view and this is Cyprian's; this is the opinion of Lactantius and this of Hilary; such is the doctrine of Minucius Felix, so Victorinus teaches, in this fashion Arnobius speaks.' Myself too he sometimes quoted, for he loved me because of my association with his uncle. Indeed, by constant reading and daily meditation he had made his breast a library of Christ.

¹ Letter LII.

LETTER LX

How often did he beg me in his letters from across the sea to write something for him! How often did he remind me of the man in the Gospel who sought help by night, and of the widow who importuned the harsh judge! When he found that I did not write and saw himself checked by my silence, the modesty of his request being matched by the modesty of my refusal, he made another move. He got his uncle to ask on his behalf, knowing that a request for another could be more freely made and that my respect for a bishop would ensure him an easier success. Accordingly I did what he wished, and in a short treatise¹ dedicated our friendships to eternal remembrance, while he on receiving it boasted that he surpassed the wealth of Croesus and the treasures of Darius. He would always hold my book in his hands, devour it with his eyes, fondle it in his breast, and repeat it with his lips. In bed he would frequently undo the roll and fall asleep with the dear page upon his heart. If a stranger or a friend came norum, si amicorum quispiam venerat, laetabatur super se nostro testimonio et, quidquid minus in opusculo erat, distinctione moderata et pronuntiationis varietate pensabat, ut in recitando illo ipse¹ vel placere vel displicere cotidie videretur. Unde his fervor, nisi ex amore Dei? Unde legis Christi indefessa meditatio, nisi ex desiderio eius, qui legem dedit? Alii nummum addant nummo et marsupium suffocantes matronarum opes venentur obsequiis, sint ditiores monachi, quam fuerant saeculares, possideant opes sub Christo paupere, quas sub locuplete diabolo non habuerant, et suspiret eos ecclesia divites, quos tenuit mundus ante mendicos: Nepotianus noster aurum calcans scedulas connectatur, sed, sicut sui in carne contemptor est et paupertate incedit ornator, ita totum ecclesiae investigat ornatum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Ad comparationem quidem superiorum modica sunt, quae dicturi sumus, sed et in parvis idem animus ostenditur. Ut enim creatorem non in caelo tantum miramur et terra, sole et oceano, elephantis, camelis, equis, bubus, pardis, ursis, leonibus, sed et in minutis quoque animalibus, formica, culice, muscis, vermiculis et istius modi genere, quorum magis corpora scimus quam nomina, eandemque in cunctis veneramur sollertiam, ita mens Christo dedita aequae et in maioribus et in minoribus intenta est sciens etiam pro otioso verbo reddendam esse rationem. Erat ergo sollicitus, si niteret altare, si parietes absque in, he rejoiced to show him the evidence of my regard; and anything lacking in my poor work was compensated for by careful modulation and varied emphasis, so that, when it was read aloud, it was he, not I, who seemed to please or to displease. Whence could this fervour come save from love of God? Whence this tireless meditation on the law of Christ save from longing for Him who gave that law? Let others add shilling to shilling, fastening their claws on married ladies' purses and hunting for death-bed legacies; let them be richer as monks than they were as men of the world; let them possess wealth in the service of a poor Christ such as they never had in the service of a rich devil; let the Church sigh over the opulence of men who in the world were beggars. Our dear Nepotian tramples gold underfoot, books are the only things he desires. But while he despises himself in the flesh and walks abroad in splendid poverty, he yet seeks out everything that may adorn his church.

¹ ipso: Hilberg.

LETTER LX

In comparison with what I have already said the following details are trivial; but even in small things the same spirit is revealed. We admire the Creator, not only as the framer of heaven and earth, of sun and ocean, of elephants, camels, horses, oxen, leopards, bears and lions, but also as the maker of tiny creatures, ants, gnats, flies, worms, and the like, things whose shapes we know better than their names. And as in all creation we reverence His skill, so the mind that is given to Christ is equally earnest in small things as in great, knowing that an account must be given even for an idle word. Nepotian therefore took anxious pains to keep the altar bright, to have the walls free from soot and the fuligine, si pavimenta tersa, si ianitor creber in porta, vela semper in ostiis, si sacrarium mundum, si vasa lucentia; et in omnes caerimonias pia sollicitudo disposita non minus, non maius neglegebat officium. Ubi cumque eum in ecclesia quaereres, invenires.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Nobilem virum Quintum Fabium miratur antiquitas, qui etiam Romanae scriptor historiae est, sed magis ex pictura quam litteris nomen invenit; et Beselehel nostrum plenum sapientia et spiritu Dei scriptura testatur, Hiram quoque, filium mulieris Tyriae, quod alter tabernaculi, alter templi supellectilem fabricati sunt. Quomodo enim laetae segetes et uberes agri interdum culmis aristisque luxuriant, ita praeclara ingenia et mens plena virtutibus in variarum artium redundat elegantiam. Unde apud Graecos philosophus ille laudatur, qui omne, quod uteretur, usque ad pallium et anulum manu sua factum gloriatus est. Hoc idem possumus et de isto dicere, qui basilicas ecclesiae et martyrum conciliabula diversis floribus et arborum comis vitiumque pampinis adumbraret, ut, quidquid placebat in ecclesia tam dispositione quam visu, laborem presbyteri et studium testaretur.

13. Macte virtute. Cuius talia principia, qualis finis erit? O miserabilis humana condicio et sine Christo vanum omne, quod vivimus. Quid te sub-

¹ Jerome here confesses C. Fabius Pictor the painter (fl. 300) with his grandson Quintus the historian.

² Exodus, xxxi. 2, 3; 1 Kings, vii. 14.

³ Hippias of Elis.

LETTER LX

pavement duly swept. He saw to it that the door-keeper was constantly at his post, that the curtains were hanging at the entrance, that the sanctuary was neat, and the church-vessels brightly polished. His careful reverence extended to every form of ceremonial, and no duty, small or great, was neglected. Whenever you looked for him in his church, there you found him.

In Quintus Fabius¹ antiquity admired a man of rank, who not only wrote a history of Rome but won even greater fame from his paintings than from his books. Our own Bezaleel also and Hiram,² the son of a Tyrian woman, are spoken of in Scripture as men filled with wisdom and the spirit of God, because one made the furniture of the tabernacle, the other that of the temple. As rich crops and fertile fields are at times one great luxuriance of stalk and ear, so great talents and minds that are filled with virtue overflow into a variety of elegant accomplishments. So among the Greeks the great philosopher³ was praised, who boasted that he had made with his own hands everything which he used, including his cloak and his finger-ring. We can say the same about Nepotian, for he adorned the church-buildings and the halls of the martyrs with different kinds of flowers and with the foliage of trees and clusters of vine leaves. Indeed, everything in his church that pleased by its arrangement or its appearance bore witness to the labour and the zeal of its presbyter.

A blessing on such virtue! After such a beginning what sort of ending should we expect? How miserable is the condition of man, how vain is all our life without Christ! Why do you shrink, O my words, trahis, quid tergiversaris, oratio? Quasi enim mortem illius differe possimus et vitam facere longiorem, sic timemus ad ultimum pervenire. 'Omnis caro faenum et omnis gloria eius quasi flos faeni.' Ubi nunc decora illa facies, ubi totius corporis dignitas, quo veluti pulchro indumento pulchritudo animae vestiebatur? Marcescebat, pro dolor, flante austro liliū et purpura violae in pallorem sensim migrabat. Cumque aestuaret febribus et venarum fontes hauriret calor, lasso anhelitu tristem avunculum consolabatur. Laetus erat vultus et universis circa plorantibus solus ipse ridebat. Proicere pallium, manus extendere, videre, quod alii non videbant, et quasi in occursum se erigens salutare venientes: intellegeres illum non emori, sed migrare, et mutare amicos, non relinquere. Volvuntur per ora lacrimae et obfirmato animo non queo dolorem dissimulare, quem patior. Quis crederet in tali illum tempore nostrae necessitudinis recordari et luctante anima studiorum scire dulcedinem? Adprehensa avunculi manu: 'Hanc,' inquit, 'tunicam, qua utebar in ministerio Christi, mitte dilectissimo mihi, aetate patri, fratri collegio, et, quidquid a te nepoti debebatur affectus, in illum transfer, quem mecum pariter diligebas.' Atque in talia verba defecit avunculum manu, me recordatione contrectans.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

14. Scio, quod nolueris amorem in te civium sic probare, et affectum patriae magis quaesisse in why do you hesitate? I fear to come to the end, as though I could put off his death and make his life longer. 'All flesh is as grass and all the glory of man as the flower of grass.'¹ Where now is that comely face, where is that dignified figure, which clothed his fair soul as with a fair garment? O grief! the lily withered when the south wind blew, and the violet's purple slowly faded into paleness. He burned with fever, and all the moisture in his veins was dried up with heat, but gasping and weary he still tried to comfort his uncle's grief. His face was bright, and while all around him wept, he alone smiled.² Suddenly he flung off his cloak and stretched out his hands, seeing something that was not revealed to others' eyes, and raising himself up as though to meet them he greeted those that were coming to him. You would have thought that he was starting on a journey, not dying, and that he was exchanging friends, not leaving friends behind. The tears roll down my face, and though I steel my courage I cannot hide the pain which I suffer. Who would believe that in such an hour he still remembered our friendship, and that while he was struggling for life he still recalled the delights of study? Grasping his uncle's hand he said: 'Send this tunic which I wore in the service of Christ to my beloved friend, my father in age and my brother in office, and any affection due to your nephew transfer to him, who is as dear to you as he is to me.' With these words he passed away, his uncle's hand in his, and thoughts of me in his heart.

¹ 1 Peter, i. 24.

² Cf. p. 464, note 3.

LETTER LX

I know that you were reluctant to prove your people's love at such a cost, and that you would have preferred to win your country's affection under prosperis. Sed huiusce modi officium in bonis iucundius est, in malis gratius. Tota hunc civitas, tota planxit Italia. Corpus terra susceptum, anima Christo reddita est. Tu nepotem quaerebas, ecclesia sacerdotem. Praecessit te successor tuus. Quod tu eras, ille post te iudicio omnium merebatur. Atque ita ex una domo duplex pontificatus egressa est dignitas: dum in altero gratulatio est, quod tenuerit, in altero maeror, quod raptus sit, ne teneret. Platonis sententia est omnem sapienti vitam meditationem esse mortis. Laudant hoc philosophi et in caelum ferunt, sed multo fortius apostolus: 'Cotidie,' inquit, 'mori per vestram gloriam.' Aliud est conari, aliud agere; aliud vivere moriturum, aliud mori victurum. Ille moriturus ex gloria est; iste moritur semper ad gloriam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST JEROME

Debemus igitur et nos animo praemeditari, quod aliquando futuri sumus et quod—velimus nolimus—abesse longius non potest. Nam si nongentos vitae excederemus annos, ut ante diluvium vivebat humanum genus, et Mathusalae nobis tempora donarentur, tamen nihil esset praeterita longitudo, quae esse desisset. Etenim inter eum, qui decem vixit annos, et illum, qui mille, postquam idem vitae finis advenerit et inrecusabilis mortis necessitas, happier circumstances. But such dutiful attentions as were shown you then, while more pleasant in prosperity, are especially grateful in times of grief. All Altinum, all Italy wept for your nephew. The earth received his body, his soul was given back to Christ. You lost a nephew, the Church a priest. He who should have followed you went before you. What you were, he in all men's judgment deserved to be. One household has had the honour of producing two bishops, the first congratulated on having held office, the second lamented on being taken away before he could hold it. There is a saying of Plato that a wise man's whole life should be a preparation for death.¹ Philosophers praise the sentiment and laud it to the skies, but the apostle speaks with a higher courage when he says: 'By my glory in you I die daily.'² It is one thing to attempt, another to do; one thing to live so as to die, another to die so as to live. The sage passes from glory when death comes, the Christian proceeds to glory when he dies.

¹ Plato, Phaedo, 81A, says of the philosophic life: ἡ οὐ τοῦτ' ἂν εἴη μελετῆ θανάτου;

² I Corinthians, xv. 31: νῆ τὴν ὑμετέραν καύχησιν ἦν ἔχω ἐν

LETTER LX

Therefore we too ought to meditate beforehand, and to consider the fate which must one day come upon us, a fate which, whether we wish it or not, cannot be very far distant. Even if we lived for nine hundred years and more, as men did before the flood, even if the age of Methuselah were granted to us, that length of time once passed would be nothing when it had ceased to be. Between the man who has lived for ten years and the man who has lived for a thousand, there is no difference when once the end of life has come to both alike and death's inexorable necessity. The only point is that ὄμιν. But Jerome takes advantage of the Vulgate version to play on the phrases per gloriam, ex gloria, ad gloriam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

transactum omne tantundem est, nisi quod magis senex onustus peccatorum fasce proficiscitur.

‘Optima quaeque dies miseris mortalibus aevi
Prima fugit, subeunt morbi tristisque senectus
Et labor et durae rapit inclementia mortis.’

Naevius poeta ‘Pati,’ inquit, ‘necesse est multa mortalem mala.’ Unde et Niobam, qui multum fleverit in lapidem et in diversas bestias <conversas alias et Hecubam in canem> commutatam finxit antiquitas, et Hesiodus natales hominum plangens gaudet in funere, prudenterque Ennius :

‘Plebes,’ ait, ‘in hoc regio¹ antistat loco : licet
Lacrimare plebi, regi honeste non licet.’

Ut regi, sic episcopo, immo minus regi quam episcopo. Ille enim nolentibus praeest, hic volentibus ; ille terrore subicit, hic servitute dominatur ; ille corpora custodit ad mortem, hic animas servat ad vitam. In te omnium oculi diriguntur, domus tua et conversatio quasi in specula constituta magistra est publicae disciplinae. Quidquid feceris, id sibi omnes faciendum putant. Cave ne committas, quod aut, qui reprehendere volunt, digne lacerasse videantur aut, qui imitari, cogantur delinquere. Vince quantum potes, immo plus quam potes, mollitiem animi tui et ubertim fluentes lacrimas reprime, ne grandis pietas in nepotem apud incredulas mentes desperatio putetur in Deum. Desiderandus tibi est quasi

¹ The best reading is regi.

¹ Virgil, Georgics, III. 66.

² Ennius, Iphigenia, fr. 7.

LETTER LX

the older a man is, the heavier is the load of sin he takes with him on his journey.

‘ O hapless men ! the brightest years are first
To fly : disease and age come on us soon
And trouble and the ruthlessness of death.’¹

So the poet Naevius says : ‘ Mortals perforce must many ills endure.’ Therefore antiquity feigned that Niobe, because of her long weeping, was turned into stone, and that other women were changed into various kinds of animals, Hecuba, for example, into a dog. Hesiod too bewails men’s birthdays and rejoices at their death, and Ennius wisely says :

‘ The mob in this outvies the kingly state,
For they may weep ; tears to a king are shame.’²

As with a king, so with a bishop : or rather a bishop has less licence than a king. The king rules over the unwilling, the bishop over the willing. The king subdues by inspiring fear, the bishop is master because he is servant. The king guards bodies for future death, the bishop saves souls for eternal life. The eyes of all men are turned upon you, your house is set as it were upon a watch-tower, and your life gives to all a lesson of public discipline. Whatever you do, everyone thinks that he may do also. Take care not to commit any act which those who wish to blame you may seem right in censuring, or which would force those who wish to imitate you to do wrong. Use all your strength, and even more, to overcome the softness of your heart, and check the copious flood of your tears lest your great love for your nephew be taken by unbelievers as showing despair of God. You must regret him not as one absens, non quasi mortuus, ut illum expectare, non amisisse videaris.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

15. Verum quid ago medens dolori, quem iam rcor et tempore et ratione sedatum, ac non potius replico tibi vicinas regum miserias et nostri temporis calamitates, ut non tam plangendus sit, qui hac luce caruerit, quam congratulandum ei, quod de tantis malis evaserit? Constantius, Arrianae fautor hereseos, dum contra inimicum paratur et concitus fertur ad pugnam, in Mopsi viculo moriens magno dolore hosti reliquit imperium. Julianus, perditor animae suae et Christiani iugulator exercitus, Christum sensit in Media, quem primum in Gallia denegarat; dumque Romanos propagare vult fines, perdidit propagatos. Iovianus gustatis tantum regalibus bonis fetore prunarum suffocatus interiit ostendens omnibus, quid sit humana potentia. Valentinianus vastato genitili solo et inultam patriam dereliquens vomitu sanguinis extinctus est. Huius germanus Valens Gothico bello victus in Thracia eundem locum et mortis habuit et sepulchri. Gratianus ab exercitu suo proditus et ab obviis urbibus non receptus ludibrio hosti fuit cruentaeque manus vestigia parietes tui, Lugdune, testantur. Adulescens Valentinianus et paene puer post fugam, post exilia, post recuperatum multo sanguine imperium haut procul ab urbe who is dead, but as one who has gone away. Let men see that you have not lost him, but are waiting to see him again.

¹ The Emperors here mentioned followed one another in quick succession. Constantius died in 361 while marching to Constantinople to resist Julian. Julian was killed fighting the Persians in 363, and was succeeded by Jovian who only reigned a few months. His place was taken in the West by Valentinian (364-375), and in the East by Valens (364-378), while Gratian, who came next, was murdered at Lyons in 383. Procopius, Maximus and Eugenius were usurpers of short duration, overthrown by Theodosius the Great (379-395).

LETTER LX

But what am I doing in thus seeking to heal a pain which I imagine has already been assuaged by time and philosophy? Why do I not rather unfold to you the miseries of kings¹ in our near neighbourhood and the disasters that have come upon our age? He who has escaped from this world's light is not so much to be lamented as he is to be congratulated on having been saved from such great evils. Constantius, the patron of the Arian heresy, was making preparations against his enemy and advancing in haste to give him battle, when he died at the village of Mopsus, and to his great grief left the empire to the foe. Julian, the betrayer of his own soul, the assassin of a Christian army, felt in Media the power of that Christ whom in Gaul he had denied, and while he was trying to extend the territories of Rome he lost the annexations which had already been made. Jovian had but just tasted the sweets of kingship when he was suffocated by a coal fire, revealing to all men the true nature of human power. Valentinian died of a broken blood-vessel, leaving his country unavenged and his native soil devastated. His brother Valens was defeated in the Gothic war, and in Thrace was buried where he fell. Gratian, betrayed by his own army and refused admittance by all the cities which he approached, became the laughing-stock of the enemy: your walls, O Lyons, still bear the mark of that bloody hand. Valentinian was but a youth, hardly more than a boy, when, after flight and exile and the recovery of his throne amid streams of blood, he was murdered not far fraternae mortis conscia necatus est et cadaver exanimis infamatum suspensio. Quid loquar de Procopio, Maximo, Eugenio, qui utique, dum rerum potirentur, terrori gentibus erant? Omnes capti steterunt ante ora victorum et, quod potentissimis quondam miserrimum est, prius ignominia servitutis quam hostili mucrone confossi sunt.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

16. Dicat aliquis: 'Regum talis condicio est, "feriuntque summos fulgura montes."' Ad privatas veniam dignitates nec de his loquar, qui excedunt biennium; atque, ut ceteros praetermittam, sufficit nobis trium nuper consularium diversos exitus scribere. Abundantius egens Pityunte exulat; Rufini caput pilo Constantinopolin gestatum est et abscissa manus dextera ad dedecus insatiabilis avaritiae ostiatim stipes mendicavit; Timasius praecipitatus repente de altissimo dignitatis gradu evasisse se putat, quod Assae¹ vivit inglorius. Non calamitates miserorum, sed fragilem humanae conditionis narro statum—horret animus temporum nostrorum ruinas prosequi—viginti et eo amplius anni sunt, quod inter Constantinopolin et Alpes Iulias cotidie Romanus sanguis effunditur. Scythiam, Thraciam, Macedoniam, Thessaliam, Dardaniam, Daciam, Epiros, Dalmatiam, cunctasque Pannonias Gothus, Sarmata, Quadus, Alanus, Huni, Vandali, Marcomanni vastant, trahunt, rapiunt. Quot ma-

¹ in Oase: Hilberg.

¹ Horace, Odes, II. x. 11.

² Banished c. 396 to Pityus on the Black Sea by Eutropius, whom he had helped to raise to power.

³ Prime Minister of Theodosius I, assassinated by Gainas in the reign of Arcadius.

⁴ A general of Theodosius banished by Eutropius.

LETTER LX

from the city which had witnessed his brother's death, and suffered the shame of having his corpse hung from a gibbet. Why speak of Procopius, Maximus, and Eugenius, who, while they ruled at any rate, were a terror to the nations? They all stood as prisoners in the presence of their conquerors, and—fate most wretched for those who had once been supreme!—felt their hearts stabbed by the shame of slavery before they perished by the enemy's sword.

Some one may say: 'Such is the lot of kings, "the lightnings strike the mountain tops."' ¹ I will come, then, to persons of private rank, and even in their case I will not go back for more than two years. Omitting any others, it is sufficient for me to record the diverse ends of three men recently of consular position. Abundantius ² is now a beggar and lives in exile at Pityus. The head of Rufinus ³ was carried on a pike to Constantinople, and to shame his insatiable greed his severed hand begged for pence from door to door. Timasius ⁴ was hurled down suddenly from a post of the highest dignity, and thinks it an escape that he now lives in obscurity at Assa. I will say no more of the calamities of individuals; I come now to the frail fortunes of human life, and my soul shudders to recount the downfall of our age.

For twenty years and more the blood of Romans has every day been shed between Constantinople and the Julian Alps. Scythia, Thrace, Macedonia, Thessaly, Dardania, Dacia, Epirus, Dalmatia, and all the provinces of Pannonia, have been sacked, pillaged and plundered by Goths and Sarmatians, Quadians and Alans, Huns and Vandals and Martronaë, quot virgines Dei et ingenua nobiliaque corpora his beluis fuere ludibrio! Capti episcopi, interfecti presbyteri et diversorum officia clericorum, subversae ecclesiae, ad altaria Christi stabulati equi, martyrum effossae reliquae: ubique luctus, ubique gemitus 'et plurima mortis imago.' Romanus orbis ruit et tamen cervix nostra erecta non flectitur. Quid putas nunc animi habere Corinthios, Athenienses, Lacedaemonios, Arcadas cunctamque Graeciam, quibus imperant barbari? Et certe paucas urbes nominavi, in quibus olim fuere regna non modica. Inmunis ab his malis videbatur oriens et tantum nuntiis consternatus: ecce tibi anno praeterito ex ultimis Caucasi rupibus inmissi in nos non Arabiae, sed septentrionis lupi tantas brevi provincias percucurrerunt. Quot monasteria capta, quantae fluviorum aquae humano cruore mutatae sunt! Obsessa Antiochia et urbes reliquae, quas Halys, Cydnus, Orontes Eufratesque praeterfluunt. Tracti greges captivorum; Arabia, Phoenix, Palaestina, Aegyptus timore captivae.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

'Non mihi si linguae centum sint oraque centum, Ferreæ vox,
Omnia poenarum percurrere nomina possim.'

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, II. 369.

² A.D. 395.

³ Virgil, Aeneid, VI. 625.

LETTER LX

comanni. How many matrons, how many of God's virgins, ladies of gentle birth and high position, have been made the sport of these beasts! Bishops have been taken prisoners, presbyters and other clergymen of different orders murdered. Churches have been overthrown, horses stabled at Christ's altar, the relics of martyrs dug up.

'Sorrow and grief on every side we see
And death in many a shape.'¹

The Roman world is falling, and yet we hold our heads erect instead of bowing our necks. What, think you, are the feelings of the Corinthians, the Athenians, the Lacedaemonians, the Arcadians, and all the other Greeks over whom barbarians now are ruling? I have only mentioned a few cities certainly, but they were once the seats of no small powers. The East seemed to be immune from these dangers and was only dismayed by the news that reached her. But lo! last year² the wolves—not of Arabia, but from the far north—were let loose upon us from the distant crags of Caucasus, and in a short time overran whole provinces. How many monasteries did they capture, how many rivers were reddened with men's blood! They besieged Antioch and all the other cities on the Halys, Cydnus, Orontes, and Euphrates. They carried off troops of captives. Arabia, Phoenicia, Palestine and Egypt in their terror felt themselves already enslaved.

'Had I a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths,
A voice of brass, I could not tell the names
Of all those punishments.'³

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Neque enim historiam proposui scribere, sed nostras breviter flere miserias. Alioquin ad haec merito explicanda et Thucydides et Sallustius muti sunt.

17. Felix Nepotianus, qui haec non videt; felix, qui ista non audit. Nos miseri, qui aut patimur aut patientes fratres nostros tanta perspiciamus; et tamen vivere volumus eosque, qui his carent, flendos potius quam beandos putamus. Olim offensum sentimus nec placamus Deum. Nostris peccatis barbari fortes sunt, nostris vitiis Romanus superatur exercitus; et quasi non hoc sufficeret cladibus plus paene bella civilia quam hostilis mucro consumpsit. Miseri Israhelitae, ad quorum comparationem Nabuchodonosor servus Dei scribitur; infelices nos, qui tantum displicemus Deo, ut per rabiem barbarorum illius in nos ira desaeviat. Ezechias egit paenitentiam, et centum octoginta quinque milia Assyriorum ab uno angelo una nocte deleta sunt; Iosophat laudes domino concinebat, et dominus pro laudante superabat; Moyses contra Amalech non gladio sed oratione pugnavit. Si erigi volumus, prosternamur. Pro pudor et stolidi usque ad incredulitatem mens! Romanus exercitus, victor orbis et dominus, ab his vincitur, hos pavet, horum terretur aspectu, qui ingredi non valent, qui, si terram tetigerint, se mortuos arbitrantur, et non intellegimus prophetarum voces: 'fugient mille uno persequente' nec ampu-

¹ Jeremiah, xxvii. 6.

³ 2 Chron., xx. 5 ff.

⁵ I.e. the Huns.

² 2 Kings, xix. 35.

⁴ Exodus, xvii, 11.

⁶ Isaiah, xxx. 17.

LETTER LX

But I did not propose to write a history: I only wished briefly to lament our miseries. In any case, if it came to telling this tale adequately, even Thucydides and Sallust would have no voice.

Happy is Nepotian, for he does not see these sights nor hear those cries. We are the unhappy, who either suffer ourselves or see our brothers suffer. And yet we wish to go on living, and think that those who have escaped from these evils are to be lamented rather than counted happy. For a long time now we have felt that God is offended with us, but we do not try to appease Him. It is by reason of our sins that the barbarians are strong, it is our vices that bring defeat to the armies of Rome; and as if this were not enough of carnage, civil war has spilt almost more blood than the enemy's sword. Miserable were the Israelites, in comparison with whom Nebuchadnezzar is called the servant of God:¹ unhappy are we, who have so displeased God that His anger vents its fury on us by the barbarians' mad attacks. Hezekiah repented, and one hundred and eighty-five thousand Assyrians were destroyed by one angel in a night.² Jehoshaphat sang the praises of the Lord, and the Lord gave his worshipper the victory.³ Moses fought against Amalek, not with the sword, but with prayer.⁴ If we wish to be lifted up, let us first prostrate ourselves. Shame on us who are too stupid for belief! The soldiers of Rome, who once subdued and ruled the world, now tremble and shrink in fear from men who cannot walk on foot and think themselves as good as dead if once they are unhorsed.⁵ We do not understand the prophet's words: 'One thousand shall flee at the rebuke of one.'⁶ We do not cut away tamus causas morbi, ut morbus pariter auferatur, statimque cernamus¹ sagittas pilis, tiaras galeis, caballos equis cedere?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

18. Excessimus consolandi modum, et, dum unius mortem flere prohibemus, totius orbis mortuos planximus. Xerxes, ille rex potentissimus, qui subvertit montes, maria constravit, cum de sublimi loco infinitam hominum multitudinem et innumerabilem vidisset exercitum, flesse dicitur, quod post centum annos nullus eorum, quos tunc cernebat, superfuturus esset. O si possemus in talem ascendere speculam, de qua universam terram sub nostris pedibus cerneremus! Iam tibi ostenderem totius mundi ruinas, gentes gentibus et regnis regna conlisa; alios torqueri, alios necari, alios obrui fluctibus, alios ad servitutum trahi; hic nuptias, ibi planctum; illos nasci, istos mori; alios affluere divitiis, alios mendicare; et non Xerxis tantum exercitum, sed totius mundi homines, qui nunc vivunt, in brevi spatio defuturos. Vincitur sermo rei magnitudine et minus est omne quod dicimus.

19. Redeamus igitur ad nos et quasi e caelo descendentes paulisper nostra videamus. Sentisne, obsecro te, quando infans, quando puer, quando iuvenis, quando robustae aetatis, quando senex factus sis? Cotidie morimur, cotidie commutamur et tamen aeternos esse nos credimus. Hoc ipsum, quod dicto, quod scribitur, quod relogo, quod emendo,

¹ cernimus: Hilberg.

¹ That is to say, the enemy weapons would give way to the Roman.

² Herodotus, VII. 45.

LETTER LX

the causes of our malady, and thereby remove the malady itself. Then we should see arrows give way to javelins, caps to helmets, and nags to chargers.¹

I have passed beyond the limits of consolation, and in forbidding you to weep for one man's death I have mourned for the dead of the whole world. That mighty king Xerxes, who overthrew mountains and turned the sea into solid ground, when from his high place he looked upon his infinite multitudes and his countless host of men, is said to have wept at the thought that not one of those whom he saw would in a hundred years be alive.² Oh, if we could ascend into such a watch-tower as would give us a view of the whole world spread beneath our feet! Then I would show you a universe in ruins, peoples warring against peoples, and kingdoms shattered on kingdoms. You would see some men being tortured, some killed, others drowned at sea, others dragged off to slavery; here a wedding, there lamentation; some being born, others dying; some living in affluence, others begging their bread; not merely Xerxes' army, but the inhabitants of the whole world now alive destined soon to pass away. Words fail; for language is inadequate to the greatness of this theme.

Let us return then to ourselves, and coming down from the skies consider for a moment our own position. Are you conscious now, pray, of the time when you were an infant, or of the stages you have passed from boyhood to manhood, from maturity to old age? Every day we die, every day we are changed, and yet we believe ourselves to be eternal. This very act of dictation, writing, revising and de vita mea trahitur. Quot puncta notarii, tot meorum damna sunt temporum. Scribimus atque rescribimus, transeunt maria epistulae et fidente sulcos carina per singulos fluctus aetatis nostrae momenta minuuntur. Solum habemus lucri, quod Christi nobis amore sociamur. 'Caritas patiens est, benigna est; caritas non zelatur, non agit perperam, non inflatur, omnia sustinet, omnia credit, omnia sperat, omnia patitur; caritas numquam excidit.' Haec semper vivit in pectore; ob hanc Nepotianus noster absens praesens est et per tanta terrarum spatia divisos utraque complectitur manu. Habemus mutuae obsidem caritatis. Iungamur spiritu, stringamur affectu et fortitudinem mentis, quam beatus papa Chromatius ostendit in dormitione germani, nos imitemur in filio. Illum nostra pagella decantet, illum cunctae litterae sonent. Quem corpore non valemus, recordatione teneamus et, cum quo loqui non possumus, de eo numquam loqui desinamus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LXXVII

AD OCEANUM DE MORTE FABIOLOE

1. PLURES anni sunt, quod super dormitione Blesillae Paulam, venerabilem feminam, recenti

¹ 1 Corinthians, xiii. 4, 7.

² Bishop of Aquileia, d. c. 407: his brother Eusebius was also a bishop. Cf. Letter VII. The title "Pope," at first applied to the "spiritual father," who was the means of a man's conversion, later became restricted first to bishops and abbots, then to the Bishop of Rome and the patriarchs of Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem and Constantinople, and finally after 1073 was claimed exclusively for the Bishop of Rome.

³ This letter, addressed to Oceanus, and written in A.D. 399, gives an account of the life of Fabiola, one of the rich Roman matrons who took Jerome as their spiritual guide. She correction is something taken from my span. Every stroke of my secretary's pen is so much loss of life for me. We write letters and send replies, our messages cross the seas, and as the ship cleaves a furrow through the waves the moments that we have to live grow less. We have but one profit: we are joined together by the love of Christ. 'Charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Charity never faileth.'¹ It lives ever in the heart, and by it our Nepotian is present though absent, and grasps us each by a hand, severed as we are in distant lands. We have in him a pledge of our mutual love. Let us join in spirit, let us bind ourselves together in affection's chains, and let us who have lost a son take pattern by the courage that the blessed Pope Chromatius² showed when his brother fell asleep. Let our pages chant his praise, let every letter echo his name. We cannot have him in the body, but let us hold him fast in remembrance. We cannot speak with him, but let us never cease to speak of him.

LETTER LX AND LETTER LXXVII

LETTER LXXVII

TO OCEANUS³ ON THE DEATH OF FABIOLA

MANY years have passed since I consoled the venerated Paula, while her wound was still fresh, divorced her first husband and then married again, but did penance for this error and visited the Holy Land, where she was staying with Jerome when the Huns invaded Palestine. She then returned to Rome, and in conjunction with Pammachius, the widowed husband of the rich Paulina, established a hostel for travellers at Ostia just before her death. Cf. App., p. 486.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

adhuc vulnere consolatus sum. Quartae aestatis circulus volvitur, ex quo ad Heliodorum episcopum Nepotiani scribens epitaphium, quidquid habere virium potui, in illo tunc dolore consumpsi. Ante hoc ferme biennium Pammachio meo pro subita peregrinatione Paulinae brevem epistolam dedi erubescens ad disertissimum virum plura loqui et ei sua ingerere, ne non tam consolari amicum viderer, quam stulta iactantia docere perfectum. Nunc mihi, fili Oceane, volenti et ultro adpetenti debitum munus inponis, quod pro novitate virtutum veterem materiam novam faciam. In illis enim vel parentis affectus vel maeror avunculi vel desiderium mariti temperandum fuit et pro diversitate personarum diversa de scripturis adhibenda medicina.

2. In praesentiarum tradis mihi Fabiolam, laudem Christianorum, miraculum gentilium, luctum pauperum, solacium monachorum. Quidquid primum adripuero, sequentium conparatione vilescit. Ieiunium praedicem? Praevertunt elemosynae. Humilitatem laudem? Maior est ardor fidei. Dicam adpetitas sordes et in condemnationem vestium sericarum plebeium cultum et servilia indumenta quaesita? Plus est animum deposuisse quam cultum. Difficilius adrogantia quam auro caremus et gemmis. His enim abiectis interdum gloriosis tumemus sordibus et vendibilem paupertatem populari aurae

¹ Letter XXXIX.

² Letter LX.

³ Letter LXVI.

LETTER LXXVII

for the falling asleep of Blesilla.¹ Four summers have rolled by since I wrote to Bishop Heliodorus a funeral panegyric on Nepotian,² spending all the strength that I possessed in giving expression to my grief. About two years have elapsed since I sent a brief letter to my dear Pammachius on the sudden passing of his Paulina,³ for I blushed to say more to so learned a man or to repeat to him his own thoughts, lest I should seem, not so much to be comforting a friend, as in foolish ostentation to be instructing one already perfect. To-day, my son Oceanus, the task of duty you impose upon me is one that I gladly accept and would even seek unasked; for dealing with new virtues I shall make an old subject fresh. In those other cases I had to assuage a mother's love, an uncle's grief, and a husband's yearning; and as the persons differed I had to apply from the Scriptures a different remedy.

On this occasion you give me as my subject Fabiola, the glory of the Christians, the wonder of the Gentiles, the sorrow of the poor, and the consolation of the monks. Whatever point I take first pales in comparison with what is to come. Shall I tell of her fastings? Her alms are greater still. Shall I praise her humility? It is outstripped by the ardour of her faith. Shall I mention her studied squalor, her plebeian dress, and the slave's garb she choose in condemnation of silken robes? It is a greater thing to change one's disposition than to change one's dress. We part with arrogance less easily than with gold and jewels. Even when these are thrown away, we sometimes pride ourselves on our ostentatious shabbiness and make a bid for popular favour by offering poverty as its price. A offerimus. Celata virtus et in conscientiae fota secreto Deum solum iudicem respicit. Unde novis mihi est efferenda praeconiis et ordine rhetorum praetermisso tota de conversionis ac paenitentiae incunabulis adsumenda. Alius forsitan scholae memor Quintum Maximum, et totam Fabiorum gentem proferret in medium, diceret pugnas, describeret proelia et per tantae nobilitatis gradus Fabiolam venisse iactaret, ut, quod in virga non poterat, in radicibus demonstrareret. Ego, diversorii Bethlemitici et praesepis dominici amator, in quo virgo puerpera Deum fudit infantem, ancillam Christi non de nobilitate veteris historiae, sed de ecclesiae humilitate producam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘ Unus qui nobis cunctando restituit rem,’

3. Et quia statim in principio quasi scopulus quidam et procella mihi obtrectatorum eius opponitur, quod secundum sortita matrimonium prius reliquerit, non laudabo conversam, nisi ream absolvero. Tanta prior maritus vitia habuisse narratur, ut ne scortum quidem et vile mancipium ea sustinere posset. Quae si voluero dicere, perdam virtutem feminae, quae maluit culpam subire discidii quam quandam corporis sui infamare partem et maculas eius detegere. Hoc solum proferam, quod verecundae matronae et Christianae satis est. Praecepit dominus uxorem non debere dimitti excepta causa virtue that is concealed and cherished in the inner consciousness looks to God alone as judge. So the eulogy I bestow upon her must be altogether new: I must neglect all the rules of rhetoric and begin my story at the cradle of her conversion and penitence. Others perhaps might remember their school-days and bring forward Quintus Maximus:

¹ Ennius and Virgil, Aeneid, VI. 846.

LETTER LXXVII

‘The man who by delaying saved the state,’¹ and with him the whole Fabian family. They might tell of their conflicts and describe their battles, and boast that Fabiola had come of so noble a line, showing in the root a glory which they could not find in the branch. I for my part, who am a lover of the inn at Bethlehem, and the Lord’s stable where the Virgin in childbirth brought forth an infant God, I will bring forward a handmaid of Christ who shall rely not on the fame of ancient history but on the humility of the Church.

As at the very outset there is a rock in the path, and I am faced by the storm of censure that was directed against her for having taken a second husband and abandoned her first, I shall not praise her for her conversion until I have cleared her from this charge. We are told that her first husband was a man of such heinous vices that even a prostitute or a common slave could not have put up with them. If I describe them, I shall mar the heroism of the woman, who preferred to bear the blame of separation rather than to expose to shame the man who was one body with her, and thus reveal the stains upon his character. This only I will say, and it is a plea sufficient to excuse a chaste matron and a Christian wife. The Lord ordained that a wife fornicationis et, si dimissa fuerit, manere innuptam. Quidquid viris iubetur, hoc consequenter redundat ad feminas. Neque enim adultera uxor dimittenda est et vir moechus tenendus. Si ' qui meretrici iungitur, unum corpus facit,' ergo et, quae scortatori impuroque sociatur, unum cum eo corpus efficitur. Aliae sunt leges Caesarum, aliae Christi; aliud Papinianus, aliud Paulus noster praecipit. Apud illos in viris pudicitiae frena laxantur et solo stupro atque adulterio condemnato passim per lupanaria et ancillulas libido permittitur, quasi culpam dignitas faciat, non voluptas. Apud nos, quod non licet feminis, aequè non licet viris et eadem servitus pari condicione censetur. Dimisit ergo, ut aiunt, vitiosum; dimisit illius et illius criminis noxium; dimisit—paene dixi, quod clamante vicinia uxor non sola prodidit. Sin autem arguitur, quare repudiato marito non innupta permanserit, facile culpam fatebor, dum tamen referam necessitatem. ' Melius est,' inquit apostolus, ' nubere quam uri.' Adulescentula erat, viduitatem suam servare non poterat. Videbat aliam legem in membris suis repugnantem legi mentis suae et se vinctam atque captivam ad coitum trahi. Melius arbitrata est aperte confiteri inbecillitatem suam et umbram quandam miserabilis subire coniugii quam

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ 1 Corinthians, vi. 16.

² The great Roman jurist, put to death by Caracalla.

³ 1 Corinthians, vii. 9.

LETTER LXXVII

must not be put away except for fornication, and that, if she was put away, she must remain unmarried. A command that is given to men applies logically also to women. It cannot be that an adulterous wife should be put away and an unfaithful husband retained. If 'he which is joined to a harlot is one body,'¹ she who is joined to a filthy whore-monger is one body with him also. The laws of Caesar are different from the laws of Christ: Papinian² commands one thing, our Paul another. Among the Romans men's unchastity goes unchecked; seduction and adultery are condemned, but free permission is given to lust to range the brothels and to have slave girls, as though it were a person's rank and not the sensual pleasure that constituted the offence. With us what is unlawful for women is equally unlawful for men, and as both sexes serve God they are bound by the same conditions. Fabiola, as men say, put away a vicious husband; she put away a man who was guilty of this and that crime; she put him away because—I almost mentioned the scandal which the whole neighbourhood proclaimed but which his wife alone refused to reveal. If she is blamed because after repudiating her husband she did not remain unmarried, I will readily admit her fault, provided that I may put in the plea of necessity. 'It is better,' says the apostle, 'to marry than to burn.'³ She was a young weak woman and she could not remain a widow. She saw another law in her members warring against the law of her mind, and she felt herself dragged like a chained captive into carnal intercourse. She thought it better to confess her weakness openly and to accept the dark stain that such a lamentable sub gloria univirae exercere meretricium. Idem apostolus vult viduas ‘adulescentulas nubere, filios procreare, nullam dare occasionem maledicti gratia.’ Et protinus, cur hoc velit, exponit: ‘Iam enim quaedam abierunt retro Satanas.’ Igitur et Fabia, quia persuaserat sibi et putabat virum iure a se dimissum nec evangelii vigorem noverat, in quo nubendi universa causatio viventibus viris feminis Christianis amputatur, dum multa diaboli vitat vulnera, unum incauta vulnus accepit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Sed quid ego in abolitis et antiquis moror quaerens excusare culpam, cuius paenitentiam ipsa confessa est? Quis hoc crederet, ut post mortem secundi viri in semet reversa, quo tempore solent viduae negligentibus iugo servitutis excusso agere se liberius, adire balneas, volitare per plateas, vultus circumferre meretricios, saccum indueret, errorem publice fateretur, et tota urbe spectante Romana ante diem paschae in basilica quondam Laterani, qui Caesariano truncatus est gladio, staret in ordine paenitentium, episcopo et presbyteris et omni populo conlacrimanti sparsum crinem, ora lurida, squalidas manus, sordida colla submitteret? Quae peccata fletus iste non purget? Quas inveteratas maculas haec lamenta non abluant? Petrus trinam nega-marriage would bring, rather than to claim to be the wife of one husband and under that disguise to ply the harlot's trade. The same apostle expresses his wish that 'young widows should marry, bear children, and give no handle to calumny.' And then at once he gives his reason: 'For some are already turned aside after Satan.'¹ Fabiola therefore had convinced herself, and thought that she was justified in putting away her husband. She did not know the Gospel's strict ordinance, which precludes Christian women from marrying again in their first husband's lifetime, whatever their case may be. Thus she evaded the other assaults of the devil, but this one wound from him she unwittingly received.

¹ 1 Timothy, v. 14, 15.

² A Roman senator who conspired against Nero.

LETTER LXXVII

But why do I linger over the forgotten past, seeking to excuse a fault for which she herself confessed her penitence? Who would believe that after the death of her second husband, at a time when widows, having shaken off the yoke of slavery, are wont to grow careless and indulge in licence, frequenting the public baths, flitting to and fro in the squares, showing their harlot faces everywhere—who, I say, would believe that it was then that she came to herself, put on sackcloth and made public confession of error. On the eve of passover, in the presence of all Rome, she took her stand among the other penitents in the hall of that Lateranus who perished formerly by Caesar's sword.² There before bishop, presbyters, and weeping populace she exposed to view her dishevelled hair, wan face, soiled hands, and dust-stained neck. What sins would not such lamentation purge away? What stains so deep that these tears would not wash them out? By a threefold confession Peter annulled his threetionem trina confessione delevit. Aaron sacrilegium et conflatum ex auro vituli caput fraternae correxere preces. David, sancti et mansuetissimi viri, homicidium pariter et adulterium septem dierum emendavit fames. Iacebat in terra, volutabatur in cinere et oblitus regiae potestatis lumen quaerebat in tenebris illumque tantum respiciens, quem offenderat, lacrimabili voce dicebat: ‘Tibi soli peccavi et malum coram te feci,’ et: ‘Redde mihi laetitiam salutaris tui et spiritu principali confirma me.’ Atque ita factum est, ut, qui me prius docuerat virtutibus suis, quomodo stans non caderem, doceret per paenitentiam, quomodo cadens resurgerem. Quid tam inpium legimus inter reges quam Achab, de quo scriptura dicit: ‘Non fuit alius talis ut Achab, qui venumdatus est, ut faceret malum in conspectu domini.’ Hic, cum pro sanguine Nabuthae correptus fuisset ab Helia et audisset iram domini per prophetam: ‘Occidisti, insuper et possedisti,’ et: ‘Ecce ego inducam super te mala et demetam posteriora tua,’ et reliqua, ‘Scidit vestimenta sua et operuit cilicio carnem suam ieiunavitque in sacco et ambulabat demisso capite. Tunc factus est sermo domini ad Heliam Thesbitem dicens: “Nonne vidisti humilitatem Achab coram me? Quia ergo humilitatus est in timore mei, non inducam malum in diebus eius.”’ O felix paenitentia, quae ad se Dei traxit oculos, quae furentem sententiam domini confesso errore mutavit! Hoc idem et Manassen in Paralipomenon et Nineven fecisse legimus in pro-

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Psalm li. 6.

² Psalm li. 14.

³ 1 Kings, xxi. 25 seq.

⁴ 2 Chron., xxxiii. 12.

⁵ Jonah, iii. 5-10.

LETTER LXXVII

fold denial. Aaron did a sacrilegious act by fashioning a calf's head in gold; but his brother's prayers made amends. David, that saintly and most merciful man, committed both murder and adultery; but he atoned for it by fasting for seven days. He lay on the ground, he grovelled in the ashes, he forgot his royal power, he sought for light in the darkness. He turned his eyes only to Him whom he had offended and cried with a lamentable voice: 'Against thee, thee only have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight,'¹ and, 'Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation and uphold me with thy free spirit.'² So it came about that he who by his virtues taught me first how I might stand and not fall, by his penitence taught me how if I fell I might rise again. Do we read of any among the kings so wicked as Ahab, of whom the Scripture says: 'There was none like unto Ahab which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord'?³ But when he was rebuked by Elijah for shedding Naboth's blood and heard the prophet threaten him with God's wrath: 'Thou hast killed and taken possession: behold I will bring evil upon thee and will take away thy posterity,' and so on, then: 'he rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh and fasted in sackcloth and went softly. Then came the word of the Lord to Elijah the Tishbite, saying: "Seest thou how Ahab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, I will not bring the evil in his days."' O happy penitence, which drew God's eyes to itself, and by a confession of error changed the sentence of the Lord's wrath! The same conduct is attributed to Manasseh in the Chronicles,⁴ to Nineveh⁵ in the book of the prophet pheta, publicanum quoque in evangelio, e quibus primus non solum indulgentiam, sed et regnum recipere meruit, alius independentem Dei fregit iram, tertius pectus verberans pugnibus oculos non levabat ad caelum et multo iustificatior recessit humili confessione vitiorum quam superba phariseus iactatione virtutum. Non est loci huius, ut paenitentiam praedicem et quasi contra Montanum Novatumque scribens dicam illam hostiam domini esse placabilem et sacrificium Deo spiritum contribulatum et : 'Malo paenitentiam peccatoris quam mortem,' et : 'Exsurge, exsurge, Hierusalem,' et multa alia, quae prophetarum clangunt tubae.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Hoc unum loquar, quod et legentibus utile sit et praesenti causae conveniat. Non est confusa dominum in terris et ille eam non confundetur in caelo. Aperuit cunctis vulnus suum et decolore in corpore cicatricem flens Roma conspexit. Dissuta habuit latera, nudum caput, clausum os. Non est ingressa ecclesiam domini, sed extra castra cum Maria, sorore Moysi, separata consedit, ut, quam sacerdos eiecerat, ipse revocaret. Descendit de solio deliciarum suarum, accepit molam, fecit farinam et discalciatis pedibus transivit fluentia lacrimarum. Sedit super carbonis ignis; hi ei fuere in adiutorium. Faciem, per quam secundo viro placuerat, verberabat, oderat gemmas, linteamina videre non poterat, orna-

¹ S. Luke, xviii, 13.

² Founders of heretical sects in the second and third centuries.

³ Ezekiel, xviii, 23.

⁴ Baruch, v. 5.

LETTER LXXVII

Jonah, and to the publican in the Gospel.¹ The first not only earned God's pardon but regained his kingdom; the second broke the force of God's impending anger; the third smiting his breast with his fists would not lift his eyes to heaven, and yet by the humble confession of his faults he went away more justified than the Pharisee with his arrogant boasting of his virtues. This, however, is not the place to preach penitence, or to say of it, as though I were writing against Montanus and Novatus,² that it is a victim well pleasing to the Lord and that a broken spirit is God's sacrifice. Nor will I quote the words: 'I prefer the repentance of a sinner rather than his death,'³ or 'Arise, arise, O Jerusalem,'⁴ or any other of the many sayings which are noised abroad by the trumpets of the prophets.

This one thing I will say, for it is both useful to my readers and pertinent to the present case. Fabiola was not ashamed of the Lord on earth, and He will not be ashamed of her in heaven. She laid bare her wound to all, and Rome beheld with tears the scar upon her livid body. She uncovered her limbs, bared her head, and closed her mouth. She did not enter God's church but like Miriam, the sister of Moses, sat apart outside the camp, until the priest who had cast her out should call her back again. She came down from her throne of luxury, she took up the millstone and ground meal, with unshod feet she passed through rivers of tears. She sat upon coals of fire, and these became her aid. She beat the face by which she had won her second husband's love, she abhorred all jewelry, she could not bear even to look upon fine linen, she shrank menta fugiebat. Sic dolebat, quasi adulterium commisisset et multis impendiis medicaminum unum vulnus sanare cupiebat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Diu morati sumus in paenitentia, in qua velut in vadosis locis resedimus, ut maior nobis et absque ullo impedimento se laudum eius campus aperiret. Recepta sub oculis omnis ecclesiae communionem quid fecit? Scilicet in die bona malorum oblita est et post naufragium rursus temptare voluit pericula navigandi? Quin potius omnem censum, quem habere poterat—erat autem amplissimus et respondens generi eius—dilapidavit ac vendidit et in pecunia congregatum usibus pauperum praeparavit. Et primo omnium νοσοκομείον instituit, in quo aegrotantes colligeret de plateis et consumpta languoribus atque inedia miserorum membra refoveret. Describam nunc ego diversas hominum calamitates, truncas nares, effossos oculos, semiustos pedes, luridas manus, tumentes alvos, exile femur, crura turgentia et de exesis ac putridis carnibus vermiculos bullientes? Quotiens morbo regio et paedore confectos humeris suis portavit? Quotiens lavit purulentam vulnerum saniem, quam alius aspicere non audebat? Praebeat cibos propria manu et spirans cadaver sorbitiunculis inrigabat. Scio multos divites et religiosos ob stomachi angustiam exercere huiusce modi misericordiam per aliena ministeria et clementes from all adornment. If she had committed adultery her grief could not have been greater, and she went to the expense of many remedies in her eagerness to cure one wound.

I have lingered long in describing Fabiola's penitence, and my barque has grounded in shallow waters; but I wished to open up a wider and unimpeded field for her praises. When she was restored to communion before the eyes of the whole church, what did she do? Did she forget her sorrows in the midst of happiness, and determine after being shipwrecked to face once more the dangers of the main? Nay, she preferred to break up and sell all that she could lay hands on of her property—it was a large one and suitable to her rank—and when she had turned it into money she disposed of everything for the benefit of the poor. First of all she founded an infirmary and gathered into it sufferers from the streets, giving their poor bodies worn with sickness and hunger all a nurse's care. Need I describe here the diverse troubles from which human beings suffer, the maimed noses, the lost eyes, the scorched feet, the leprous arms, the swollen bellies, the shrunken thighs, the dropsical legs, and the diseased flesh alive with hungry worms? How often did she carry on her own shoulders poor filthy wretches tortured by epilepsy! How often did she wash away the purulent matter from wounds which others could not even endure to look upon! She gave food with her own hand, and even when a man was but a breathing corpse, she would moisten his lips with drops of water. I know that many wealthy and devout persons by reason of their weak stomachs carry on this work of mercy by the agency of others, esse pecunia, non manu. Quos equidem non reprobō et teneritudinem animi nequaquam interpretor infidelitatem; sed, sicut inbecillitati stomachi veniam tribuo, sic perfectae mentis ardorem in caelum laudibus fero. Magna fides ista contemnit; scit, quid in Lazaro dives purpuratus aliquando non fecerit, quali superba mens retributione damnata sit. Ille, quem despiciamus, quem videre non possumus, ad cuius intuitum vomitus nobis erumpit, nostri similis est, de eodem nobiscum formatus luto, isdem compactus elementis. Quidquid patitur, et nos pati possumus. Vulnera eius aestimemus propria et omnis animi in alterum duritia clementi in nosmet ipsos cogitatione frangetur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘ Non, mihi si linguae centum sint oraque centum,
Ferreā vox,
Omnia morborum percurrere nomina possim,’ quae Fabiola in tanta miserorum refrigeria commutavit, ut multi pauperum sani languentibus inviderent. Quamquam illa simili liberalitate erga clericos et monachos ac virgines fuerit—quod monasterium non illius opibus sustentatum est? Quem nudum et clinicum non Fabiolae vestimenta texerunt? In quos se indigentium eius non effudit praeceptis et festina largitio? Angusta misericordiae Roma fuit; peragrabat ergo insulas. Etruscum mare Vulscorumque provinciam et reconditos curvorum litorum sinus, in quibus monachorum consistunt chori, vel proprio corpore vel transmissa per fideles ac sanctos viros munificentia circuibat.

7. Unde repente et contra opinionem omnium and show mercy with the purse, not with the hand. I do not blame nor do I by any means construe their lack of fortitude as lack of faith. But while I excuse their weakness, I extol to the skies the ardent zeal that perfect courage possesses. A great faith makes light of discomfort: it knows the retribution that fell upon the rich man clothed in purple, who in his pride refused Lazarus aid. The sufferer whom we despise and cannot bear to behold, whose very aspect turns our stomachs, is a man like ourselves, formed of the same clay, made out of the same elements. Whatever he suffers we may possibly suffer also. Let us regard his wounds as our own, and then all our lack of sympathy for others will be overcome by our pity for ourselves.

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, VI. 625.

LETTER LXXVII

‘ Had I a hundred tongues, a hundred mouths
With voice of brass, I could not tell the names ’¹ of all the maladies which Fabiola treated. She was, indeed, such a comforter that many poor people who were well fell to envying the sick. Not but what she showed the same generosity to the clergy, monks, and virgins. What monastery was there which her purse did not aid? What naked or bed-ridden sufferer did she not supply with clothes? On what indigent person did she not pour out her swift and lavish donations? Rome was not large enough for her compassionate kindness. She went from island to island, and travelled round the Etruscan Sea, and through the Volscian province, with its lonely curving bays, where bands of monks have taken up their home, bestowing her bounty either in person or by the agency of holy men of the faith.

Then suddenly, and to every one's surprise, she

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Hierosolymam navigavit, ubi multorum excepta concursu nostro parumper usa est hospitio; cuius societatis recordans videor mihi adhuc videre, quam vidi. Iesu bone, quo illa fervore, quo studio intenta erat divinis voluminibus et veluti quandam famem satiare desiderans per prophetas, evangelia psalmosque currebat quaestiones proponens et solutas recondens in scriniolo pectoris sui! Nec vero satiabatur audiendi cupidine, sed addens scientiam addebat dolorem, et, quasi oleum flammae adiceres, maioris ardoris fomenta capiebat. Quodam die, cum in manibus Moysi Numeros teneremus, et me verecunde rogaret, quid sibi vellet nominum tanta congeries, cur singulae tribus in aliis atque in aliis locis varie iungerentur, quomodo Balaam ariolus sic futura Christi mysteria prophetarit, ut nullus propemodum prophetarum tam aperte de eo vaticinatus sit, respondi, ut potui, et visus sum interrogationi eius satisfacere. Revolvens ergo librum pervenit ad eum locum, ubi catalogus describitur omnium mansionum, per quas de Aegypto egrediens populus pervenit usque ad fluenta Iordanis. Cumque causas et rationes quaereret singularum, in quibusdam haesitavi, in aliis inoffenso cucurri pede, in plerisque simpliciter ignorantiam confessus sum. Tunc vero magis coepit urguere et, quasi mihi non liceret nescire, quod nescio, expostulare ac se indignam tantis mysteriis dicere. Quid plura? Extorsit mihi sailed to Jerusalem, where she was welcomed by a great concourse of people, and for a short time was my guest. When I remember that meeting, I seem to see her still as I saw her then. Blessed Jesus, with what fervour and zeal did she study the sacred volumes! In her eagerness to satisfy her hunger, she ran through the prophets, the gospels and the psalms; she suggested questions and stored up my answers in her heart's repository. Nor did her eagerness to hear ever bring with it satiety; increasing her knowledge she also increased her sorrow, and as though oil were cast upon fire she supplied fuel ever for a more burning zeal. One day we were occupied with Moses' Numbers, and she modestly questioned me as to the meaning of its mass of names. Why was it, she asked, that individual tribes were grouped in so many different ways in different places, and how did it happen that the soothsayer Balaam in prophesying the future mysteries of Christ foretold His coming more plainly than almost any of the prophets.¹ I replied as best I could, and I think I satisfied her inquiries. So she unrolled the book further, and came to the passage where the list is given of all the halting places by which the people on leaving Egypt made their way to the river Jordan. She asked me the meaning and the origin of each name, and in some cases I hesitated, in others I hurried through without stumbling, in very many I had frankly to confess ignorance. Thereupon she began to press me harder, expostulating with me as though it were not allowed me to be in ignorance of what I do not know, and declaring that she herself was unworthy of understanding such mysteries. Why say more?

¹ Numbers, xxiv. 17 ff.

LETTER LXXVII

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

negandi verecundia, ut proprium ei opus huiusce modi disputatiunculae pollicerer, quod usque in presens tempus, ut nunc intellego, domini voluntate dilatatum redditur memoriae illius, ut sacerdotalibus prioris ad se voluminis induta vestibus per mundi huius solitudinem gaudeat se ad terram repromissionis aliquando venisse.

8. Verum, quod coepimus, persequamur. Quarentibus nobis dignum tantae feminae habitaculum, cum ita solitudinem cuperet, ut diversorio Mariae carere nollet, ecce subito discurrentibus nuntiis oriens totus intremuit, ab ultima Maeotide inter glaciam Tanain et Massagetarum immanes populos, ubi Caucasi rupibus feras gentes Alexandri claustra cohibent, erupisse Hunorum examina, quae pernicibus equis huc illucque volitantia caedis pariter ac terroris cuncta complerent. Aberat tunc Romanus exercitus et bellis civilibus in Italia tenebatur. Hanc gentem Herodotus refert sub Dario, rege Medorum, viginti annis Orientem tenuisse captivum et ab Aegyptiis atque Aethiopibus annum exegisse vectigal. Avertat Iesus ab orbe Romano tales ultra bestias! Insuperati ubique aderant et famam celeritate vincentes non religioni, non dignitatibus, non aetati, non vagienti miserebantur infantiae. Cogebantur mori, qui dudum vivere coeperant et nesci-

¹ The first treatise dedicated to Fabiola was on the vestments worn by the Jewish priests, the second on the places passed by the chosen people on their journey from Egypt to the Promised Land.

² The Caspian Gates.

³ Herodotus, I. 104. He calls them Σκύθαι.

LETTER LXXVII

I was ashamed to refuse her, and she compelled me to promise a special work on this subject for her use. Up till this moment I have deferred writing it; but my delay, I now see, was God's will, and it is now consecrated to her memory. As a previous treatise addressed to her clothed her in priestly vestments, so now she may rejoice that she has passed through the wilderness of this world and come at last to the land of promise.¹

But let me continue the task I have begun. While I was seeking a dwelling suitable for so great a lady, whose desire for solitude included an unwillingness not to visit the place where Mary once lodged, suddenly messengers flew this way and that and the whole Eastern world trembled. We were told that swarms of Huns had poured forth from the distant Sea of Azov, midway between the icy river Tanais and the savage tribes of the Massagetae, where the gates of Alexander² keep back the barbarians behind the rocky Caucasus. Flying hither and thither on their swift steeds, said our informants, these invaders were filling the whole world with bloodshed and panic. At that time the Roman army was absent, being kept in Italy by reason of civil war. Of this race Herodotus³ tells us that under Darius, king of the Medes, they held the East captive for twenty years, and exacted a yearly tribute from the Egyptians and the Ethiopians. May Jesus save the Roman world from such wild beasts in the future! Everywhere their approach was unexpected, they outstripped rumour by their speed, and they spared neither religion nor rank nor age; nay, even for wailing infants they had no pity. Children were forced to die, who had only just begun to live, and entes malum suum inter hostium manus ac tela ridebant. Consonus inter omnes rumor petere eos Hierosolymam et ob nimiam auri cupiditatem ad hanc urbem concurrere. Muri neglecti pacis incuria sarciebantur Antiochiae; Tyrus volens a terra abrumpere insulam quaerebat antiquam. Tunc et nos compulsi sumus parare naves, esse in litore, adventum hostium praecavere et saevientibus ventis magis barbaros metuere quam naufragium, non tam propriae salutis quam virginum castimoniae providentes. Erat in illo tempore quaedam apud nos dissensio et barbarorum pugnam domestica bella superabant. Nos in Oriente tenuerunt iam fixae sedes et inveteratum locorum sanctorum desiderium; illa, quia tota in sarcinis erat et in omni orbe peregrina, reversa est ad patriam, ut ibi pauper viveret, ubi dives fuerat, manens in alieno, quae multos prius hospites habuit, et—ne sermonem longius traham—in conspectu Romanae urbis pauperibus erogaret, quod illa teste vendiderat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Nos hoc tantum dolemus, quod pretiosissimum de sanctis locis monile perdidimus. Recepit Roma, quod amiserat, ac procax et maledica lingua gentilium oculorum testimonio confutata est. Laudent ceteri misericordiam eius, humilitatem, fidem: ego ardorem animi plus laudabo. Librum, quo Heliodorum quondam iuvenis ad heremum cohortatus sum,

¹ Cf. Appendix II, p. 498 ff.

² At Bethlehem. Cf. Introduct., p. ix.

³ Letter XIV.

LETTER LXXVII

in ignorance of their fate smiled amid the brandished weapons of the foe. The general report was that they were making for Jerusalem, and that it was their excessive greed for gold that urged them to flock to that city. The walls of Antioch, neglected in the careless days of peace, were hastily repaired. Tyre, desirous of cutting herself off from the land, sought again her ancient island. We too were compelled to prepare ships, and to wait on the seashore as a precaution against the enemy's arrival; to fear the barbarians more than shipwreck, however fierce the winds might be; for we had to think not so much of our own lives as of the chastity of our virgins. At that time also there was a certain dissension amongst us,¹ and our domestic quarrels seemed more important than any fighting with barbarians. I myself clung to my fixed abode in the East,² and could not give up my inveterate longing for the Holy Land. Fabiola, however, who only had her travelling baggage and was a stranger in every land, returned to her native city to live in poverty where she had been rich, to lodge in the house of another, she who had once entertained many guests, and—not to prolong my story unduly—to pay over to the poor before the eyes of Rome all that she had sold with Rome for witness.

This only do I grieve for, that we in the Holy Land lost in her a most precious jewel. Rome recovered what she had lost, and the shameless tongue of slander was confuted by the testimony of the heathens' own eyes. Let others praise her pity, her humility, her faith: I will rather extol the ardour of her soul. The treatise³ in which as a young man I urged Heliodorus to be a hermit she tenebat memoriter, et Romana cernens moenia inclusam se esse plangebatur. Oblita sexus, fragilitatis inmemor ac solitudinis tantum cupida ibi erat, ubi animo morabatur. Non poterat teneri consilii amicorum: ita ex urbe quasi de vinculis gestiebat erumpere. Dispensationem pecuniae et cautam distributionem genus infidelitatis vocabatur. Non aliis elemosynam tribuere, sed suis pariter effusus ipsa pro Christo stipes optabat accipere. Sic festinabat, sic inpatiens erat morarum, ut illam crederes profecturam. Itaque, dum semper paratur, mors eam invenire non potuit inparatam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Inter laudes feminae subito mihi Pammachius meus exoritur. Paulina dormit, ut ipse vigilet; praecedit maritum, ut Christo famulum derelinquat. Hic heres uxoris et hereditatis alii possessores. Certabant vir et femina, quis in portu Abrahae tabernaculum figeret, et haec erat inter utrumque contentio, quis humanitate superaret. Vicit uterque et uterque superatus est. Ambo se victos et victores fatentur, dum, quod alter cupiebat, uterque perfecit. Iungunt opes, sociant voluntates, ut, quod aemulatio dissipatura erat, concordia cresceret. Necdum dictum, iam factum: emitur hospitium et ad hospitium turba concurrat. 'Non est' enim 'labor in Iacob nec dolor in Israhel.' Adducunt maria, quos in gremio suo terra suscipiat. Mittit Roma properantes, quos navigaturos litus molle confoveat.

¹ Numbers, xxiii. 21.

LETTER LXXVII

knew by heart, and when she looked upon the walls of Rome she complained that she was their prisoner. Forgetful of her sex, unmindful of her frailty, she craved only for solitude and was in truth where her soul lingered. Her friends' advice could not restrain her, so anxious was she to escape from the fetters of Rome. She said that to weigh out money and distribute it carefully showed a lack of faith. She desired not to hand over the task of almsgiving to others, but to spend all that she possessed, and then herself to receive a dole in Christ's name. In such haste was she, and so impatient of delay, that you might have thought her always on the brink of departure. So, as she was ever making ready, death could not find her unprepared.

As I sing her praises, my dear Pammachius suddenly rises before me. Paulina sleeps that he may keep vigil; she has gone before her husband, that she may leave him behind to serve Christ. He was his wife's heir, but others now possess that inheritance. A man and a woman contended for the privilege of setting up Abraham's tent in the harbour of Rome; and this was the struggle between the two, who should be first in that contest of kindness. Each won and each lost. Both confess themselves victors and vanquished, for what each desired they carried out together. They join purses and combine their plans, that harmony might increase what rivalry would have wasted. Hardly said, the thing was done; a hostel was purchased and a crowd flocked to it for hospitality; for 'There is no more travail in Jacob nor distress in Israel.'¹ The seas brought in travellers for the land to welcome. Rome sent others, who hastened to enjoy the comforts of the mild shore before they

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Quod Publius semel fecit in insula Melita erga unum apostolum et—ne contradictioni locum tribuam—in una nave, hoc isti et frequenter faciunt et in plures. Nec solum inopum necessitas sustentatur, sed prona in omnes munificentia aliquid et habentibus providet. Xenodochium in portu Romano situm totus pariter mundus audivit. Sub una aestate didicit Britania, quod Aegyptus et Parthus agnoverant vere.

11. Quod scriptum est: 'Timentibus dominum omnia cooperantur in bonum,' in obitu tantae feminae vidimus conprobatum. Quodam praesagio futurorum ad multos scripserat monachos, ut venirent et grave onere laborantem absolverent faceretque sibi de iniquo mammona amicos, qui eam reciperent in aeterna tabernacula. Venerunt, amici facti sunt: dormivit illa—quod voluit—et deposita tandem sarcina levior volavit ad caelos. Quantum haberet viventis Fabiolae Roma miraculum, in mortua demonstravit. Necdum spiritum exalaverat necdum debitam Christo reddiderat animam,

'Et iam fama volans, tanti praenuntia luctus,' totius urbis populos exequias congregabat. Sonabant psalmi et aurata tecta templorum reboans in sublime alleluia quatiebat.

'Hic iuvenum chorus, ille senum, qui carmine laudes Femineas et facta ferant.'

¹ Acts, xxviii. 7: 'who received us, and lodged us three days courteously.'

² Apparently this means 'that no one may criticize me as exaggerating.' ³ The regular name for an inn, ξενοδοχείον.

⁴ Romans, viii. 28. Jerome substitutes 'fear' for 'love.'

⁵ St. Luke, xvi. 9.

⁶ Virgil, Aeneid, XI. 139.

⁷ Virgil, Aeneid, VIII. 287.

LETTER LXXVII

set sail. What Publius¹ did once in the island of Malta for a single apostle and—not to leave room for contradiction²—for a single ship, they did many times for many men. Not only did they relieve the wants of the destitute; their generosity was at every one's service and provided even for those who possessed something themselves. The whole world heard that a Home for Strangers³ had been founded in the port of Rome, and Britain knew in the summer what Egypt and the Parthians had learned in the spring.

It is written: 'All things work together for good to them that fear God,'⁴ and in the death of the noble lady the words have been proved true. She had a presentiment of what was to happen, and had written to several monks, that they might come and relieve her from the heavy burden under which she groaned, and that she might make to herself friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, to receive her into everlasting habitations.⁵ They came, and were welcomed as friends; she fell asleep, as she had wished, and having at length rid herself of her burden, soared more lightly to heaven. How great had been the wonder of Fabiola's life Rome showed when she was dead. She had scarcely drawn her last breath and paid the debt of her soul to Christ, when brought the peoples of the whole city to attend her funeral. Psalms re-echoed loudly and cries of ' Alleluia ' shook the gilded roofs of the temples.

' Flying rumour heralding such woe ' ⁶

' Young men and old unite in song to praise
A woman and her fame to heaven raise.' ⁷

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Non sic Furius de Gallis, non Papirius de Samnitibus, non Scipio de Numantia, non Pompeius de Pontigentibus triumphavit. Illi corpora vicere, haec spiritales nequitas subiugavit. Audio: praecedentium turmas et catervatim exequias eius multitudinem fluctuantem non plateae, non porticus, non imminetia desuper tecta capere poterant prospectantes. Tunc suos in unum populos Roma conspexit: favebant sibi omnes in gloria paenitentis. Nec mirum, si de eius salute homines exultarent, de cuius conversione angeli laetabantur in caelo.

12. Hoc tibi, Fabiola, ingenii mei senile munus, has officiorum inferias dedi. Laudavimus virgines, viduas ac maritatas, quarum semper fuere candida vestimenta, quae 'sequuntur agnum, quocumque vadit.' Felix praeconium, quod nulla totius vitae sorde maculatur! Procul livor, facessat invidia. Si pater familias bonus est, quare oculus noster malus? Quae inciderat in latrones, Christi humeris reportata est. 'Multae mansiones sunt apud patrem. Ubi abundavit peccatum, superabundavit gratia.' Cui plus dimittitur, plus amat.

¹ Letters LXXVII and LXXVIII. ² Revelation, xiv. 4.

³ St. Matthew, xx. 15.

⁴ St. Luke x. 30, xv. 5.

⁵ St. John, xiv. 2.

⁶ Romans, v. 20.

⁷ St. Luke, vii. 47.

LETTER LXXVII

Not so gloriously did Furius triumph over the Gauls, Papirius over the Samnites, Scipio over Numantia, or Pompey over the peoples of the Black Sea. They conquered physical strength, she overcame spiritual iniquities. I hear it still: the crowds that went before the bier, the swaying multitude that attended her obsequies in throngs, no streets, no colonnades could contain, no overhanging roofs could hold the eager onlookers. On that day Rome saw all her peoples gathered together. Every one flattered himself that he had a share in the glory of her penitence. No wonder that men exulted in her salvation, seeing that the angels in heaven rejoiced over her conversion.

This,¹ the best gift of my aged powers, I present to you, Fabiola, as a funeral offering of respect. I have praised virgins, widows and married women who have kept their vestments always white, 'who follow the Lamb whithersoever He goeth.'² Blessed indeed is the praise of her whose life has been stained by no foulness. Let envy hold aloof, let jealousy be silent. If the father of the house be good, why should our eye be evil?³ She who fell among thieves has been carried home upon Christ's shoulders.⁴ 'In our father's house there are many mansions.'⁵ 'Where sin hath abounded, grace hath much more abounded.'⁶ To whom more is forgiven, the same loveth more.⁷

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

CVII

AD LAETAM DE INSTITUTIONE FILIAE

1. BEATUS apostolus Paulus scribens ad Corinthios et rudem Christi ecclesiam sacris instruens disciplinis inter cetera mandata hoc quoque posuit dicens: ' Si qua mulier habet virum infidelem et hic consentit habitare cum ea, ne dimittat virum. Sanctificatus est enim vir infidelis in uxore fidei et sanctificata est mulier infidelis in fratre. Alioquin filii vestri inmundi essent, nunc autem sancti sunt.' Si cui forte hactenus videbantur nimium disciplinae vincula laxata et praeceptis indulgentia praeceptoris, consideret domum patris tui, clarissimi quidem et eruditissimi viri, sed adhuc ambulantis in tenebris, et intellegat consilium apostoli illuc profecisse, ut radicis amaritudinem dulcedo fructuum compensaret et vites virgulae balsama pretiosa sudarent. Tu es nata de inpari matrimonio, de te et Toxotio meo Paula generata est. Quis hoc crederet, ut Albini pontificis neptis de repromissione matris nasceretur, ut praesente et gaudente avo parvulae adhuc lingua balbutiens alleluia resonaret et virginem Christi in ¹ Laeta, to whom this letter was sent in A.D. 403, married Toxotius, son of Paula and Toxotius, 'in whose veins ran the noble blood of Aeneas' (Letter CVIII, 4). She herself was the daughter of a pagan, the pontiff Albinus, and had written to Jerome concerning the education of her child Paula. The advice given in this letter, that the little girl should be sent to Bethlehem to be educated by her grandmother Paula and her aunt Eustochium, was accepted, and she eventually succeeded Eustochium as head of the nunnery there.

² 1 Corinthians, vii. 13.

LETTER CVII

LETTER CVII

TO LAETA¹

A Girl's Education

Written A.D. 403

THE blessed apostle Paul, writing to the Corinthians and instructing Christ's novice church in the ways of sacred discipline, among his other precepts laid down also the following rule: 'The woman that hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him. For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the believing wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the believing husband; else were your children unclean, but now they are holy.'² If any one up till now has perchance considered that Paul relaxed the bonds of discipline too much, and in his teaching was over-inclined to indulgence, let him consider the household of your father, who is a man of the highest rank and learning, but still walking in darkness, and he will perceive that the apostle's counsel has succeeded in making the sweetness of the fruit compensate for the bitterness of the parent tree, and has induced a common bush to exude precious balsam. You yourself are the child of a mixed marriage; but now you and my dear Toxotius are Paula's parents. Who would ever have believed that the granddaughter of the Roman pontiff Albinus would be born in answer to a mother's vows; that the grandfather would stand by and rejoice while the baby's yet stammering tongue cried 'Alleluia'; and that even the old man would nurse in his arms one of suo gremio nutriret et senex? Bene et feliciter expectavimus. Sancta et fidelis domus unum sanctificat infidelem. Candidatus est fidei, quem filiorum et nepotum credens turba circumdat. Ego puto etiam ipsum Iovem, si habuisset talem cognationem, potuisse in Christum credere. Despuat licet et inrideat epistolam meam et me vel stultum vel insanum clamitet, hoc et gener eius faciebat, antequam crederet. Fiunt, non nascuntur Christiani. Auratum squallet Capitolium, fuligine et aranearum telis omnia Romae templa cooperta sunt, movetur urbs sedibus suis et inundans populus ante delubra semirutata currit ad martyrum tumulos. Si non extorquet fidem prudentia, extorqueat saltem verecundia.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Hoc, Laeta, religiosissima in Christo filia, dictum sit, ut non desperes parentis salutem et eadem fide, qua meruisti filiam, et patrem recipias totaque domus beatitudine perfruaris sciens illud a domino repromissum: 'Quae apud homines impossibilia, apud Deum possibilia sunt.' Numquam est sera conversio. Latro de cruce transiit ad paradisum: Nabuchodonosor, rex Babylonius, post efferationem et cordis et corporis et beluarum in heremo convictum mentem recepit humanam. Et, ut omittam vetera, ne apud incredulos nimis fabulosa videantur, ante paucos annos propinquus vester Gracchus, nobilitatem patriciam nomine sonans, cum praefecturam regeret urbanam, nonne specu Mithrae et omnia portentosa

¹ St. Luke, xviii. 27.

² Probably in 378.

LETTER CVII

Christ's own virgins? We did well to expect this happy issue. The one unbeliever is sanctified by a saintly household of believers. He is a candidate for the faith, who has around him a throng of believing sons and grandsons: (I, for my part, think that even Jove might well have believed in Christ if he had had kinsfolk of this kind). He may spit in scorn upon this letter, and cry out that I am a fool or a madman; but his son-in-law did the same before he became a believer. Christians are not born but made. The gilded Capitol to-day looks dingy, all the temples in Rome are covered with soot and cobwebs, the city is shaken to its foundations, and the people hurry past the ruined shrines and pour out to visit the martyrs' graves. If knowledge does not compel faith, let shame at least do so.

Let this be said, dear Laeta, most dutiful daughter in Christ, so that you may not despair of your father's salvation. I hope that the same faith which has gained you a daughter as its reward may also win you your father, and that you may rejoice over blessings bestowed upon your whole household, knowing God's promise: 'The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.'¹ It is never too late to be converted. The robber passed from the cross to Paradise. Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, recovered his human understanding after he had been made like an animal in body and heart, and had lived with the beasts in the wilderness. To pass over incidents in remote antiquity, which to the sceptical may appear too fabulous for belief, did not your kinsman Gracchus, whose name recalls his patrician rank, destroy the cave of Mithras a few years ago when he was Prefect of Rome?² Did simulacra, quibus corax, nymphius,¹ miles, leo, Perses, heliodromus, pater initiantur, subvertit, fregit, excussit et his quasi obsidibus ante praemissis inpetravit baptismum Christi?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Solitudinem patitur et in urbe gentilitas. Dii quondam nationum cum bubonibus et noctuis in solis culminibus remanserunt; vexilla militum crucis insignia sunt, regum purpuras et ardentes diadematum gemmas patibuli salutaris pictura condecorat. Iam et Aegyptius Serapis factus est Christianus; Marnas Gazae luget inclusus et eversionem templi iugiter pertremescit. De India, Perside et Aethiopia monachorum cotidie turbas suscipimus; deposuit faretras Armenius, Huni discunt psalterium, Scythae fervent calore fidei; Getarum rutulus et flavus exercitus ecclesiarum circumfert tentoria et ideo forsitan contra nos aequa pugnat acie, quia pari religione confidunt.

3. Paene lapsus sum ad aliam materiam et currente rota, dum urceum facere cogito, amphoram finxit manus. Propositum enim mihi erat sanctae Marcellae et tuis precibus invitato ad matrem, id est ad te, sermonem dirigere et docere, quomodo instruere Paululam nostram debeas, quae prius Christo est consecrata quam genita, quam ante votis quam utero

¹ cryphius: Hilberg.

¹ The initiates passed through several grades, of which these are titles. The Raven and Lion, for example, dressed in character, and imitated the creatures in their mummery.

² In A.D. 389 the temple of Serapis at Alexandria was pulled down, and a Christian church built on the site.

³ The chief Syrian god in Gaza. Cf. Jerome's life of Hilarion, § 20.

LETTER CVII

he not break and burn all the monstrous images there by which worshippers were initiated as Raven, Bridegroom, Soldier, Lion, Perseus, Sun-runner, and Father?¹ Did he not send them before him as hostages, and gain for himself baptism in Christ?

Even in Rome now heathenism languishes in solitude. Those who once were the gods of the Gentiles are left beneath their deserted pinnacles to the company of owls and night-birds. The army standards bear the emblem of the cross. The purple robes of kings and the jewels that sparkle on their diadems are adorned with the gibbet sign that has brought to us salvation. To-day even the Egyptian Serapis² has become a Christian: Marnas³ mourns in his prison at Gaza, and fears continually that his temple will be overthrown. From India, from Persia and from Ethiopia we welcome crowds of monks every hour. The Armenians have laid aside their quivers, the Huns are learning the psalter, the frosts of Scythia are warmed by the fire of faith. The ruddy, flaxen-haired Getae carry tent-churches about with their armies; and perhaps the reason why they fight with us on equal terms is that they believe in the same religion.

I have almost slipped into another subject, and thinking to make a pitcher on my running wheel my hand has moulded a flagon.⁴ It was my intention, in answer to your prayers and those of the saintly Marcella, to direct my discourse to a mother, that is, to you, and to show you how to bring up our little Paula, who was consecrated to Christ before she was born, the child of prayers before the hour of suscepisti. Vidimus aliquid temporibus nostris de prophetalibus libris: Anna sterilitatem alvi fecunditate mutavit, tu luctuosam fecunditatem vitalibus liberis conmutasti. Fidens loquor accepturam te filios, quae primum foetum domino reddidisti. Ista sunt primogenita, quae offeruntur in lege. Sic natus Samuel, sic ortus est Samson, sic Iohannes propheta ad introitum Mariae exultavit et lusit. Audiebat enim per os virginis verba domini pertonantis et de utero matris in occursum eius gestiebat erumpere. Igitur, quae de repromissione nata est, dignam habeat ortu suo institutionem parentum. Samuel nutritur in templo, Iohannes in solitudine praeparatur. Ille sacro crine venerabilis est, vinum et siceram non bibit, adhuc parvulus cum Deo sermocinatur; hic fugit urbes, zona pellicia cingitur, locustis alitur et melle silvestri et in typum paenitentiae praedicat tortuosissimi animalis vestitus exuviis.

⁴ Horace, Ars Poetica, 21: amphora coepit institui: currente rota | cur urceus exit?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Sic erudienda est anima, quae futura est templum domini. Nihil aliud discat audire, nihil loqui, nisi quod ad timorem Dei pertinet. Turpia verba non intellegat, cantica mundi ignoret, adhuc tenera lingua psalmis dulcibus inbuatur. Procul sit aetas lasciva puerorum, ipsae puellae et pedisequae a saecularium consortiis arceantur, ne, quod mali didicerint, peius doceant. Fiant ei litterae vel conception. In our own days we have seen something such as we read of in the prophets: Hannah exchanged her barrenness for fruitful motherhood, you have exchanged a fertility bound up with sorrow for children who will live for ever. I tell you confidently that you who have given your first-born to the Lord will receive sons at His hand. The first-born are the offerings due under the Law. Such was the case both with Samuel and with Samson, and so it was that John the Baptist leaped for joy when Mary came in.¹ For he heard the thunder of the Lord's voice on the Virgin's lips, and was eager to break out from his mother's womb to meet Him. Therefore let your child of promise have a training from her parents worthy of her birth. Samuel was nurtured in the Temple, John was trained in the Wilderness. The one inspired veneration with his long hair, took neither wine nor strong drink, and even in his childhood talked with God. The other avoided cities, wore a skin girdle, and fed on locusts and wild honey, clothing himself in the hair of the most twisted of all animals² as a symbol of the repentance which he preached.

¹ St. Luke, i. 41.

² I.e. the camel.

LETTER CVII

Thus must a soul be trained which is to be a temple of God. It must learn to hear nothing and to say nothing save what pertains to the fear of the Lord. It must have no comprehension of foul words, no knowledge of worldly songs, and its childish tongue must be imbued with the sweet music of the psalms. Let boys with their wanton frolics be kept far from Paula: let even her maids and attendants hold aloof from association with the worldly, lest they render their evil knowledge worse by teaching it to her. Have a set of letters made for her, of boxwood buxae vel eburneae et suis nominibus appellentur. Ludat in eis, ut et lusus eius eruditio sit, et non solum ordinem teneat litterarum, ut memoria nominum in canticum transeat, sed ipse inter se crebro ordo turbetur et mediis ultima, primis media misceantur, ut eas non sonu tantum, sed et visu noverit. Cum vero coeperit trementi manu stilum in cera ducere, vel alterius superposita manu teneri regantur articuli vel in tabella sculpantur elementa, ut per eosdem sulcos inclusa marginibus trahantur vestigia et foras non queant evagari. Syllabas iungat ad praemium, et, quibus illa aetas delectari potest, munusculis invitetur. Habeat et in discendo socias, quibus invidet, quarum laudibus mordeatur. Non est obiurganda, si tardior sit, sed laudibus excitandum ingenium; et vicisse se gaudeat et victam doleat. Cavendum in primis, ne oderit studia, ne amaritudo eorum percepta in infantia ultra rudes annos transeat. Ipsa nomina, per quae consuescet verba contexere, non sint fortuita, sed certa et coacervata de industria, prophetarum videlicet atque apostolorum, et omnis ab Adam patriarcharum series de Matheo Lucaque descendat, ut, dum aliud agit, futurae memoriae praeparetur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Magister probae aetatis et vitae atque eruditionis est eligendus nec, puto, erubescit doctus vir id or of ivory, and tell her their names. Let her play with them, making play a road to learning, and let her not only grasp the right order of the letters and remember their names in a simple song, but also frequently upset their order and mix the last letters with the middle ones, the middle with the first. Thus she will know them all by sight as well as by sound. When she begins with uncertain hand to use the pen, either let another hand be put over hers to guide her baby fingers, or else have the letters marked on the tablet so that her writing may follow their outlines and keep to their limits without straying away. Offer her prizes for spelling, tempting her with such trifling gifts as please young children. Let her have companions too in her lessons, so that she may seek to rival them and be stimulated by any praise they win. You must not scold her if she is somewhat slow; praise is the best sharpener of wits. Let her be glad when she is first and sorry when she falls behind. Above all take care not to make her lessons distasteful; a childish dislike often lasts longer than childhood. The very words from which she will get into the way of forming sentences should not be taken at haphazard but be definitely chosen and arranged on purpose. For example, let her have the names of the prophets and the apostles, and the whole list of patriarchs from Adam downwards, as Matthew and Luke give it. She will then be doing two things at the same time, and will remember them afterwards.

LETTER CVII

For teacher you must choose a man of approved years, life and learning. Even a sage is not ashamed, methinks, to do for a relative or for a facere vel in propinqua vel in nobili virgine, quod Aristoteles fecit in Philippi filio, ut ipse librarium vilitate initia ei traderet litterarum. Non sunt contemnenda quasi parva, sine quibus magna constare non possunt. Ipse elementorum sonus et prima institutio praeceptoris aliter de erudito, aliter de rustico ore profertur. Unde et tibi est providendum, ne ineptis blanditiis feminarum dimidiata dicere filiam verba consuescas et in auro atque purpura ludere, quorum alterum linguae, alterum moribus officit, ne discat in tenero, quod ei postea dediscendum est. Gracchorum ¹ eloquentiae multum ab infantia sermo matris scribitur contulisse, Hortensii ² oratio in paterno sinu coaluit. Difficiliter eraditur, quod rudes animi perbiberunt. Lanarum conchyliis quis in pristinum candorem revocet? Rudis testa diu et saporem retinet et odorem, quo primum imbuta est. Graeca narrat historia Alexandrum, potentissimum regem orbisque domitorem, et in moribus et in incessu Leonidis, paedagogi sui, non potuisse carere vitiis, quibus parvulus adhuc fuerat infectus. Proclivis est enim malorum aemulatio et, quorum virtutem adsequi nequeas, cito imitere vitia. Nutrix ipsa non sit temulenta, non lasciva, non garrula; habeat modestam gerulam, nutricium gravem. Cum avum viderit, in pectus eius transiliat, e collo pendeat, nolenti alleluia decantet. Rapiat eam avia, patrem risibus recognoscat,

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Graccorum: Hilberg.

² Hortensiae: Hilberg.

¹ Dyed purple with the juice of the murex.

² Horace, Epistles, I. ii. 70: quo semel est imbuta recens servabit | odorem testa diu.

LETTER CVII

high-born virgin what Aristotle did for Philip's son, when like some humble clerk he taught him his first letters. Things must not be despised as trifles, if without them great results are impossible. The very letters themselves, and so the first lesson in them, sound quite differently from the mouth of a learned man, and of a rustic. And so you must take care not to let women's silly coaxing get your daughter into the way of cutting her words short, or of disporting herself in gold brocade and fine purple. The first habit ruins talk, the second character; and children should never learn what they will afterwards have to unlearn. We are told that the eloquence of the Gracchi was largely due to the way in which their mother talked to them as children, and it was by sitting on his father's lap that Hortensius became a great orator. The first impression made on a young mind is hard to remove. The shell-dyed wool¹—who can bring back its pristine whiteness? A new jar keeps for a long time the taste and smell of its original contents.² Greek history tells us that the mighty king Alexander, who subdued the whole world, could not rid himself of the tricks of manner and gait which in his childhood he had caught from his governor Leonides. For it is easy to imitate the bad, and you may soon copy the faults of those to whose virtue you can never attain. Let Paula's foster-mother be a person neither drunken nor wanton nor fond of gossip: let her nurse be a modest woman, her foster-father a respectable man. When she sees her grandfather, she must leap into his arms, hang on his neck, and sing 'Alleluia' whether he likes it or not. Let her grandmother snatch her away, let her recog-sit omnibus amabilis et universa propinquitas rosam ex se natam gaudeat. Discat statim, quam habeat et alteram aviam, quam amitam, cui imperatori, cui exercitui tiruncula nutriatur. Illas desideret, ad illas tibi minitetur abscessum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Ipse habitus et vestitus doceat eam, cui promissa sit. Cave ne aures perfores, ne cerusa et purpurisso consecrata Christo ora depingas, ne collum margaritis et auro premas, ne caput gemmis oneres, ne capillum inrufes et ei aliquid de gehennae ignibus auspiceris. Habeat alias margaritas, quibus postea venditis emptura est pretiosissimum margaritum. Praetextata, nobilissima quondam femina, iubente viro Hymetio, qui patruus Eustochiae virginis fuit, habitum eius cultumque mutavit et neglectum crinem undanti gradu texuit vincere cupiens et virginis propositum et matris desiderium. Et ecce tibi eadem nocte cernit in somnis venisse ad se angelum terribili facie minitantem poenas et haec verba frangentem: 'Tunc ausa es viri imperium praeferre Christo? Tu caput virginis Dei sacrilegis adtrectare manibus? Quae iam nunc arescent, ut sentias excruciatam, quid feceris, et finito mense quinto ad inferna ducaris. Sin autem perseveraveris in scelere, et marito simul orbaberis et filiis.' Omnia nize her father with a smile, let her endear herself to all, so that the whole family may rejoice that they have such a rosebud among them. Let her learn too at once who is her other grandmother and her aunt, who is her captain and for whose army she is being trained as a recruit. Let her crave their company and threaten you that she will leave you for them.

¹ Cf. Appendix, p. 488.

LETTER CVII

Her very dress and outward appearance should remind her of Him to whom she is promised. Do not pierce her ears, or paint with white lead and rouge the cheeks that are consecrated to Christ. Do not load her neck with pearls and gold, do not weigh down her head with jewels, do not dye her hair red and thereby presage for her the fires of hell. Let her have other pearls which she will sell hereafter and buy the pearl that is of great price. There was once a lady of rank named Praetextata, who at the bidding of her husband Hymetius, the uncle of Eustochia,¹ altered that virgin's dress and appearance, and had her hair waved, desiring thus to overcome the virgin's resolution and her mother's wishes. But lo! that same night in her dreams she saw an angel, terrible of aspect, standing before her, who threatened her with punishment and broke into speech thus: 'Have you dared to put your husband's orders before those of Christ? Have you presumed to lay sacrilegious hands upon the head of God's virgin? Those hands this very hour shall wither, and in torment you shall recognize your guilt, until at the fifth month's end you be carried off to hell. Moreover, if you persist in your wickedness, you shall lose both your husband and your children.' All this was duly fulfilled, and a swift per ordinem expleta sunt et seram miseræ pœnitentiam velox signavit interitus. Sic ulciscitur Christus violatores templi sui, sic gemmas et pretiosissima ornamenta defendit. Et hoc retuli, non quod insultare velim calamitatibus infelicium, sed ut te moneam, cum quanto metu et cautione servare debeas, quod domino spondisti.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Heli sacerdos offendit dominum ob vitia liberorum; episcopus fieri non potest, qui filios habuerit luxuriosos et non subditos. At e contrario de muliere scribitur, quod 'salva fiet per filiorum generationem, si permanserit in fide et caritate et sanctificatione cum pudicitia.' Si perfecta aetas et sui iuris inputatur parentibus, quanto magis lactans et fragilis et quae iuxta sententiam domini ignorat dexteram aut sinistram, id est boni ac mali nescit differentiam! Sollicita provides, ne filia percutiatur a vipera; cur non eadem cura provideas, ne feriatur a malleo universae terrae, ne bibat de aureo calice Babylonis, ne egrediatur cum Dina et velit videre filias regionis alienae, ne ludat pedibus, ne trahat tunicas? Venena non dantur nisi melle circumlita et vitia non decipiunt nisi sub specie umbraque virtutum. 'Et quomodo,' inquires, 'peccata patrum filiis non redduntur nec filiorum parentibus, sed "anima quae peccaverit, ipsa morietur"?' Hoc de his dicitur, qui possunt sapere, de quibus in evangelio scriptum

¹ 1 Samuel, ii. 30.

² 1 Timothy, ii. 15. Jerome substitutes 'chastity' for 'sobriety.'

³ I.e., Babylon.

⁴ Genesis, xxxiv. 1.

⁵ Lucr. I. 936: veluti pueris absinthia tetra medentes | cum dare conantur, prius oras pocula circum | contingunt mellis dulci flavoque liquore.

⁶ Ezekiel, xviii. 20.

LETTER CVII

death marked the unhappy woman's late repentance. So it is that Christ takes vengeance upon the violators of his temple, so he defends his pearls and precious jewels. I have told you this, not with any wish to exult over the downfall of the wretched, but to remind you with what anxiety and carefulness you must watch over that which you have vowed to the Lord.

The priest Eli lost God's favour because of his children's faults;¹ a man cannot be a bishop, if his sons are men of profligate and disorderly life. On the other hand it is written of the woman: 'She shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with chastity.'² If parents get the credit for their children's deeds, even when they are of ripe age and their own masters, how much more are they responsible for a frail baby girl, who, as the Lord says, cannot discern between right hand and left, that is, does not know the difference between good and evil. You take anxious thought to prevent a viper biting your daughter; why do you not show the same prudent care to save her from the hammer of the whole earth,³ to guard her from drinking of Babylon's golden cup, from going out with Dinah to see the daughters of a strange land,⁴ from sporting in the dance, from trailing her robe at her heels? You smear honey round the cup before you give a drug,⁵ and vices only deceive when they wear the mien and semblance of virtue. You will ask: 'how is it that the sins of the fathers are not reckoned against the sons, nor the sins of the sons against the parents, but "the soul that sinneth it shall die"?'⁶ That passage, I answer, refers to those who have reached the age of discreest: 'Aetatem habet, pro se loquatur.' Qui autem parvulus est et sapit ut parvulus, donec ad annos sapientiae veniat et Pythagorae litterae eum perducant ad bivium, tam mala eius quam bona parentibus inputantur, nisi forte aestimas Christianorum filios, si baptismum non acceperint, ipsos tantum reos esse peccati et non scelus referri ad eos, qui dare noluerint, maxime eo tempore, quo contradicere non poterant, qui accepturi erant, sicut e regione salus infantium maiorum lucrum est. Offerre necne filiam potestatis tuae fuit, quamquam alia sit tua condicio, quae prius eam vovisti, quam conceperis; ut autem oblatam negligas, ad periculum tuum pertinet. Qui claudam et mutilam et qualibet sorde maculatam obtulerit hostiam, sacrilegii reus est; quanto magis, qui partem corporis sui et inlibatae animae puritatem regiis amplexibus parat, si negligens fuerit, punietur!

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. Postquam grandicula esse coeperit et in exemplum sponsi sui crescere sapientia, aetate et gratia apud Deum et homines, pergat cum parentibus ad templum veri patris, sed cum illis non egrediatur e templo. Quaerant eam in itinere saeculi, inter turbas et frequentiam propinquorum et nusquam alibi reperiant nisi in adyto scripturarum prophetas et apostolos de spiritalibus nuptiis sciscitantem. Imitetur Mariam, quam Gabriel solam in cubiculo

¹ St. John, ix. 21.

² Pythagoras depicted the Choice of Life under the form of the Greek letter γ, which was originally made with one straight stroke on the right, and half-way up a curved branch on the left. The lower part represents the period of childhood; the branching ways the time when the choice has to be made between good and evil. The steep path to the right is the path of virtue.

LETTER CVII

tion, of whom the Gospel says: 'He is of age, let him speak for himself.'¹ As for the little child with a child's understanding, until he comes to years of wisdom and the letter of Pythagoras² confronts him with the two roads, his evil deeds as well as his good are laid to his parents' account; unless indeed you imagine that the children of Christians, if they have not received baptism, are themselves alone responsible for their sins and no guilt attaches to those who refused it them at the time when the recipients could not have objected. The truth is that baptism means salvation for the child and advantage for the parents. It rested with you whether you should offer your daughter or not; although you scarcely had the option, since you offered her before she was conceived. But now that you have offered her you neglect her at your peril. He that offers a victim that is lame or maimed or marked with any blemish is considered guilty of sacrilege. How much greater will be the punishment, if one proves negligent, who makes ready for the King's embrace a portion of her own body and the purity of the unmutilated soul!

When Paula begins to be a big girl, and like her Spouse to increase in wisdom and stature and in favour with God and man, let her go with her parents to the temple of her true Father, but let her not come out from the temple with them. Let them seek her upon the world's highway, amid crowds and the company of their kinsfolk, but let them find her nowhere save in the shrine of the Scriptures, inquiring there of the prophets and apostles concerning her spiritual nuptials. Let her take pattern by Mary whom Gabriel found alone in her chamber, suo repperit et ideo forsitan timore perterrita est, quia virum, quem non solebat, aspexit. Aemuletur eam, de qua dicitur: 'Omnis gloria filiae regis ab intus'; loquatur et ipsa electo caritatis iaculo vulnerata: 'Introduxit me rex in cubiculum suum.' Nunquam exeat foras, ne inveniant eam, qui circum-eunt civitatem, ne percutiant et vulnerent et auferentes theristrum pudicitiae nudam in sanguine derelinquant; quin potius, cum aliquis ostium eius pulsaverit, dicat: 'Ego murus et ubera mea turris. Lavi pedes meos, non possum inquinare eos.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. Non vescatur in publico, id est in parentum convivio, nec videat cibos, quos desideret. Et licet quidam putent maioris esse virtutis praesentem contemnere voluptatem, tamen ego securioris arbitror continentiae nescire, quod quaeras. Legi quondam in scholis puer: 'Aegre reprehendas, quod sinas consuescere.' Discat iam tunc et vinum non bibere, 'in quo est luxuria.' Ante annos robustae aetatis periculosa est teneris gravis abstinentia. Usque ad id tempus, si necessitas postularit, et balneas adeat et vino modico utatur propter stomachum et carnum edulio sustentetur, ne prius deficient pedes, quam currere incipiant. Et 'haec dico iuxta indulgentiam, non iuxta imperium,' timens debilitatem, non docens luxuriam. Alioquin, quod Iudaica superstitio ex parte facit in eiuratione quorundam animalium atque escarum, quod Indorum Bragmanae et Aegyptiorum

¹ Psalm xlv. 13.

² Song of Solomon, i. 4.

³ Song of Solomon, viii. 10 and v. 3.

⁴ Publilius Syrus, Sententiae, 180. Cf. p. 478.

⁵ Ephesians, v. 18.

⁶ 1 Timothy, v. 23.

⁷ 1 Corinthians, vii. 6.

LETTER CVII

Mary who perchance was terrified because she saw a strange man. Let her seek to rival that one of whom it is said: 'All the glory of the king's daughter is from within.'¹ Wounded with love's arrow let her too say to her chosen: 'The king hath brought me into his chamber.'² At no time let her go out abroad, lest those that go about the city find her, lest they smite her and wound her and take away the veil of her chastity and leave her naked in her blood. Nay rather, when one knocketh at her door let her say: 'I am a wall and my breasts are a tower. I have washed my feet; how can I defile them?'³

She should not take her food in public, that is, at her parents' guest-table; for she may there see dishes that she will crave for. And though some people think it shows the higher virtue to despise a pleasure ready to your hand, I for my part judge it part of the surer self-restraint to remain in ignorance of what you would like. Once when I was a boy at school I read this line: 'Things that have become a habit you will find it hard to blame.'⁴ Let her learn even now not to drink wine 'wherein is excess.'⁵ Until they have reached their full strength, however, strict abstinence is dangerous for young children: so till then, if needs must, let her visit the baths, and take a little wine for the stomach's sake,⁶ and have the support of a meat diet, lest her feet fail before the race begins. 'I say this by way of indulgence and not by way of command,'⁷ fearing weakness, not teaching wantonness. Moreover, what the Jewish superstition does in part, solemnly rejecting certain animals and certain products as food, what the Brahmans in India and the Gymnosophists gymnosophistae in polentae et orizae et pomorum solo observant cibo, cur virgo Christi non faciat in toto? Si tanti vitrum, quare non maioris sit pretii margaritum? Quae nata est ex repromissione, sic vivat, ut illi vixerunt, qui de repromissione generati sunt. Aequa gratia aequum habeat et laborem. Surda sit ad organa: tibia, lyra et cithara cur facta sint, nesciat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Reddat tibi pensum cotidie scripturarum certum. Ediscat Graecorum versuum numerum. Sequatur statim et Latina eruditio; quae si non ab initio os tenerum composuit, in peregrinum sonum lingua corrumpitur et externis vitiis sermo patrius sordidatur. Te habeat magistram, te rudis miretur infantia. Nihil in te et in patre suo videat, quod si fecerit, peccet. Memento vos parentes virginis et magis eam exemplis docere posse quam voce. Cito flores pereunt, cito violas et lilia et crocum pestilens aura corrumpit. Numquam absque te procedat in publicum, basilicas martyrum et ecclesias sine matre non adeat. Nullus ei iuvenis, nullus cincinnatus adrideat. Vigiliarum dies et sollemnes pernoctationes sic virguncula nostra celebret, ut ne transversum quidem unguem a matre discedat. Nolo de ancillulis suis aliquam plus diligat, cuius crebro auribus insusurret. Quicquid uni loquitur, hoc omnes sciant. Placeat ei comes non compta atque formosa, quae liquido guttore carmen dulce in Egypt observe on their diet of only porridge, rice, and fruit, why should not Christ's virgin do altogether? If a glass bead is worth so much, surely a pearl must have a higher value. The child of promise must live as those lived before her who were born under the same vow. Let an equal favour bring with it also an equal labour. Paula must be deaf to all musical instruments, and never even know why the flute, the lyre, and the harp came into existence.

LETTER CVII

Let her every day repeat to you a portion of the Scriptures as her fixed task. A good number of verses she should learn by heart in the Greek, but knowledge of the Latin should follow close after. If the tender lips are not trained from the beginning, the language is spoiled by a foreign accent and our native tongue debased by alien faults. You must be her teacher, to you her childish ignorance must look for a model. Let her never see anything in you or her father which she would do wrong to imitate. Remember that you are a virgin's parents and that you can teach her better by example than by words. Flowers quickly fade; violets, lilies, and saffron are soon withered by a baleful breeze. Let her never appear in public without you, let her never visit the churches and the martyrs' shrines except in your company. Let no youth or curled dandy ogle her. Let our little virgin never stir a finger's breadth from her mother when she attends a vigil or an all-night service. I would not let her have a favourite maid into whose ear she might frequently whisper: what she says to one, all ought to know. Let her choose as companion not a spruce, handsome girl, able to warble sweet songs in liquid moderetur, sed gravis, pallens, sordidata, subtristis. Praeponatur ei probae fidei et morum ac pudicitiae virgo veterana, quae illam doceat et adsuescat exemplo ad orationem et psalmos nocte consurgere, mane hymnos canere, tertia, sexta, nona hora quasi bellatricem Christi stare in acie accensaque lucernula reddere sacrificium vespertinum. Sic dies transeat, sic nox inveniat laborantem. Orationi lectio, lectioni succedat oratio. Breve videbitur tempus, quod tantis operum varietatibus occupatur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Discat et lanam facere, tenere colum, ponere in gremio calatum, rotare fusum, stamina pollice ducere. Spernat bombycum telas, Serum vellera et aurum in fila lentescens. Talia vestimenta paret, quibus pellatur frigus, non quibus corpora vestita nudentur. Cibus eius holusculum sit et simila raroque pisciculi. Et ne gulae praecepta longius traham, de quibus in alio loco plenius sum locutus, sic comedat, ut semper esuriat, ut statim post cibum possit legere, orare, psallere. Displicent mihi in teneris vel maxime aetatibus longa et inmoderata ieiunia, quibus iunguntur ebdomades et oleum in cibo ac poma vitantur. Experimento didici asellum in via, cum lassus fuerit, diverticula quaerere. Faciant hoc cultores Isidis et Cybelae, qui gulosa abstinentia Fasides aves et fumantes turtures vorant, notes, but one grave and pale, carelessly dressed and inclined to melancholy. Set before her as a pattern some aged virgin of approved faith, character, and chastity, one who may instruct her by word, and by example accustom her to rise from her bed at night for prayer and psalm singing, to chant hymns in the morning, at the third, sixth, and ninth hour, to take her place in the ranks as one of Christ's amazons, and with kindled lamp to offer the evening sacrifice. So let the day pass, and so let the night find her still labouring. Let reading follow prayer and prayer follow reading. The time will seem short when it is occupied with such a diversity of tasks.

LETTER CVII

Let her learn also to make wool, to hold the distaff, to put the basket in her lap, to turn the spindle, to shape the thread with her thumb. Let her scorn silk fabrics, Chinese fleeces, and gold brocades. Let her have clothes which keep out the cold, not expose the limbs they pretend to cover. Let her food be vegetables and wheaten bread and occasionally a little fish. I do not wish here to give long rules for eating, since I have treated that subject more fully in another place; but let her meals always leave her hungry and able at once to begin reading or praying or singing the psalms. I disapprove, especially with young people, of long and immoderate fasts, when week is added to week and even oil in food and fruit are banned. I have learned by experience that the ass on the high road makes for an inn when it is weary. Leave such things to the worshippers of Isis and Cybele, who in gluttonous abstinence gobble up pheasants and turtle doves all smoking hot, of course to avoid contaminating ne scilicet Cerealia dona contaminent. Hoc in perpetuo ieiunio praeceptum sit, ut longo itineri vires perpetes supparentur, ne in prima mansione currentes corruamus in mediis. Ceterum, ut ante scripsi, in quadragesima continentiae vela pandenda sunt et tota aurigae retinacula equis laxanda properantibus, quamquam alia sit condicio saecularium, alia virginum ac monachorum. Saecularis homo in quadragesima ventris ingluviem decoquit et in coclearum morem suo victitans suco futuris dapibus ac saginae aqualiculum parat; virgo et monachus sic in quadragesima suos emittant equos, ut sibi meminerint semper esse currendum. Finitus labor maior, infinitus moderatior est; ibi enim respiramus, hic perpetuo incedimus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Si quando ad suburbana pergis, domi filiam non relinquo; nesciat sine te nec possit vivere; cum sola fuerit, pertremescat. Non habeat conloquia saecularium, non malarum virginum contubernia, non intersit nuptiis servulorum nec familiae perstreptentis lusibus misceatur. Scio praecepisse quosdam, ne virgo Christi cum eunuchis lavet, ne cum maritis feminis, quia alii non deponant animos virorum, aliae tumentibus uteris praeferant foeditatem. Mihi omnino in adulta virgine lavacra displicent, quae se ipsam debet erubescere et nudam videre non posse. Si enim vigiliis et ieiuniis macerat corpus suum et in servitutem redigit, si flammam libidinis et incentiva ferventis aetatis extinguere cupit continentiae the gift of Ceres. If you fast without a break, you must so arrange things that your strength lasts out the long journey: we must not run well for the first lap and then fall in the middle of the race. In Lent, however, as I have written previously, the sails of self-denial may be spread wide, and the charioteer may loosen the reins and let his horses go full speed. Not but what there is one rule for worldlings, and another for virgins and monks. The worldling in Lent digests again what remains in his crop, and like a snail lives on his own juice,¹ while he gets his belly fit for the rich food and feasts that are to come. Not so with the monk and virgin: when they give their steeds the rein in Lent, they must remember that their race lasts for ever. Limited efforts are greater, unlimited more moderate: for there we have breathing space, here we never stop.

¹ Cf. Plautus, Captivi, 80.

LETTER CVII

If ever you visit the country, do not leave your daughter behind at Rome. She should have neither the knowledge nor the power to live without you, and should tremble to be alone. Let her not converse with worldlings, nor associate with virgins who neglect their vows. Let her not be present at slaves' weddings, nor take part in noisy household games. I know that some people have laid down the rule that a Christian virgin should not bathe along with eunuchs or with married women, inasmuch as eunuchs are still men at heart, and women big with child are a revolting sight. For myself I disapprove altogether of baths in the case of a full-grown virgin. She ought to blush at herself and be unable to look at her own nakedness. If she mortifies and enslaves her body by vigils and fasting, if she desires to quench the flame of lust and to frigore, si adpetitis sordibus turpare festinat naturalem pulchritudinem, cur e contrario balnearum fomentis sopitos ignes suscitatur?

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Pro gemmis aut serico divinos codices amet, in quibus non auri et pellis Babyloniae vermiculata pictura, sed ad fidem placeat emendata et erudita distinctio. Discat primum Psalterium, his se canticis avocet, et in Proverbiis Salomonis erudiatur ad vitam. In Ecclesiaste consuescat calcare, quae mundi sunt; in Iob virtutis et patientiae exempla sectetur. Ad Evangelia transeat numquam ea positura de manibus; Apostolorum Acta et Epistulas tota cordis inbibat voluntate. Cumque pectoris sui cellarium his opibus locupletarit, mandet memoriae Prophetas et Heptateuchum et Regum ac Paralipomenon libros Hesdraeque et Hester volumina, ut ultimum sine periculo discat Canticum Canticorum, ne, si in exordio legerit, sub carnalibus verbis spiritalium nuptiarum epithalamium non intellegens vulneretur. Caveat omnia apocrypha et, si quando ea non ad dogmatum veritatem, sed ad signorum reverentiam legere voluerit, sciat non eorum esse, quorum titulis praenotantur, multaque his admixta vitiosa et grandis esse prudentiae aurum in luto quaerere. Cypriani opuscula semper in manu teneat, Athanasii epistulas et ¹ I.e., the Roman, or as we call them "Turkish," baths.

LETTER CVII

check the hot desires of youth by a cold chastity, if she hastens to spoil her natural beauty by a deliberate squalor, why should she rouse a sleeping fire by the incentive of baths? ¹

Instead of jewels or silk let her love the manuscripts of the Holy Scriptures, and in them let her prefer correctness and accurate arrangement to gilding and Babylonian parchment with elaborate decorations. Let her learn the Psalter first, with these songs let her distract herself, and then let her learn lessons of life in the Proverbs of Solomon. In reading Ecclesiastes let her become accustomed to tread underfoot the things of this world; let her follow the examples of virtue and patience that she will find in Job. Let her then pass on to the Gospels and never again lay them down. Let her drink in the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles with all the will of her heart. As soon as she has enriched her mind's storehouse with these treasures, let her commit to memory the Prophets, the Heptateuch, the books of Kings and the Chronicles, and the rolls of Ezra and Esther. Then at last she may safely read the Song of Songs: if she were to read it at the beginning, she might be harmed by not perceiving that it was the song of a spiritual bridal expressed in fleshly language. Let her avoid all the apocryphal books, and if she ever wishes to read them, not for the truth of their doctrines but out of respect for their wondrous tales, let her realize that they are not really written by those to whom they are ascribed, that there are many faulty elements in them, and that it requires great skill to look for gold in mud. Let her always keep Cyprian's works by her, and let her peruse the letters of Atha-

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Hilarii libros inoffenso decurrat pede. Illorum tractatibus, illorum delectetur ingeniis, in quorum libris pietas fidei non vacillet; ceteros sic legat, ut magis iudicet quam sequatur.

13. Respondebis: 'Quomodo haec omnia mulier saecularis in tanta frequentia hominum Romae custodire potero?' Noli ergo subire onus, quod ferre non potes, sed, postquam ablactaveris eam cum Isaac et vestieris cum Samuhele, mitte aviae et amitae. Redde pretiosissimam gemmam cubiculo Mariae, et cunis Iesu vagientis inpone. Nutriatur in monasterio, sit inter virginum choros, iurare non discat, mentiri sacrilegium putet, nesciat saeculum, vivat angelice, sit in carne sine carne, omne hominum genus sui simile putet et, ut cetera taceam, certe te liberet servandi difficultate et custodiae periculo. Melius est tibi desiderare absentem quam pavere ad singula, cum quo loquatur, quid loquatur, cui adnuat, quem libenter aspiciat. Trade Eustochio parvulam, cuius nunc et ipse vagitus pro te oratio est, trade comitem, futuram sanctitatis heredem. Illam videat, illam amet, illam 'primis miretur ab annis,' cuius et sermo et habitus et incessus doctrina virtutum est. Sit in gremio aviae, quae repetat in nepte, quidquid praemisit in filia, quae longo usu didicit nutrire, nasius and the treatises of Hilary without fear of stumbling. She may take pleasure in the learned expositions of all such writers as maintain in their books a steady love of the faith. If she reads others, let it be as a critic rather than as a disciple.

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, VIII. 517.

LETTER CVII

You will answer: 'How shall I, a woman of the world living in crowded Rome, be able to keep all these injunctions?' Do not then take up a burden which you cannot bear. When you have weaned Paula as Isaac was weaned, and when you have clothed her as Samuel was clothed, send her to her grandmother and her aunt. Set this most precious jewel in Mary's chamber, and place her on the cradle where Jesus cried. Let her be reared in a monastery amid bands of virgins, where she will learn never to take an oath, and to regard a lie as sacrilege. Let her know nothing of the world, but live like the angels; let her be in the flesh and without the flesh, thinking all mankind to be like herself. Thus, to say nothing of other things, she will free you from the difficult task of watching over her and from all the responsibility of guardianship. It is better for you to regret her absence than every moment to be fearing what she is saying, to whom she is talking, whom she greets and whom she likes to see. Give to Eustochium the little child, whose very wailings are now a prayer on your behalf; give her, to be her companion to-day, to be the inheritor of her sanctity in the years to come. Let her gaze upon and love, let her 'from her first years admire'¹ one whose words and gait and dress are an education in virtue. Let her grandmother take her on her lap and repeat to her grandchild the lessons she once taught her daughter. Long experience has docere, servare virgines, in cuius corona centenarii cotidie numeri castitas textitur. Felix virgo, felix Paula Toxotii, quae per aviae amitaeque virtutes nobilior est sanctitate quam genere! O si tibi contingeret videre socrum et cognatam tuam et in parvis corpusculis ingentes animos intueri! Pro insita tibi pudicitia non ambigerem, quin praecederes filiam et primam Dei sententiam secunda evangelii lege mutares. Ne tu parvi penderes aliorum desideria liberorum et te ipsa magis offerres Deo! Sed quia 'tempus est amplexandi et tempus longe fieri a complexibus' et 'uxor non habet potestatem corporis sui' et 'unusquisque in ea vocatione, qua vocatus est, in ea permaneat' in domino, et, qui sub iugo est, sic debet currere, ne in luto comitem derelinquat, totum redde in subole, quod in te interim distulisti. Anna filium, quem Deo voverat, postquam obtulit tabernaculo, numquam recepit indecens arbitrata, ut futurus propheta in huius domo cresceret, quae adhuc alios filios habere cupiebat. Denique, postquam concepit et peperit, non est ausa ad templum accedere et vacua apparere coram domino, nisi prius redderet, quod debebat, talique immolato sacrificio reversa domum quinque liberos sibi genuit, quia primogenitum Deo peperat. Miraris felicitatem sanctae mulieris? Imitare fidem. Ipse, si Paulam

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Cf. c. Jov. I. 3, where the respective merits of the estates of marriage, widowhood and virginity are compared to the seeds which brought forth thirty, sixty and a hundred fold: for this association of 100 with virginity, cf. also Letters XXII, 15 and 19, and LXVI, 2.

² Genesis, xxxv. 11: Be fruitful and multiply.

³ Ecclesiastes, iii. 5.

⁴ 1 Corinthians, vii. 4.

⁵ 1 Corinthians, vii. 20.

⁶ 1 Samuel, i. 22.

LETTER CVII

taught her how to rear, instruct, and watch over virgins, and in her crown every day is woven the mystic hundred of chastity.¹ O happy virgin! O happy Paula, daughter of Toxotius! By the virtues of her grandmother and her aunt she is nobler in sanctity even than in lineage. Oh, if you could only see your mother-in-law and your sister, and know the mighty souls that dwell within their feeble bodies! Then I doubt not that you would obey your innate love of chastity and come to them even before your daughter, exchanging God's first decree² for the Gospel's second dispensation. You would surely count as nothing your desire for other children and would rather offer yourself to God. But inasmuch as 'there is a time to embrace and a time to refrain from embracing,'³ and 'the wife hath not power over her own body,'⁴ and 'every man should abide in the same calling wherein he was called'⁵ in the Lord, and because he who is under the yoke ought so to run as not to leave his companion in the mire, pay back in your children all that you defer paying in your own person. When Hannah had brought to the tabernacle the son whom she had vowed to God, she never took him back again, thinking it improper that a future prophet should grow up in the house of one who still desired to have other sons.⁶ In fine, after she had conceived and borne him, she did not venture to visit the temple and appear before God empty-handed, but first paid her debt, and then after offering her great sacrifice returned home, and having borne her first son for God was then given five children for herself. Do you wonder at the happiness of that holy woman? Then imitate her faith. If you et majus gestabo humeris

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

miseris, balbutientia senex verba formabo multo gloriosior mundi philosopho, qui non regem Macedonum Babylonio periturum veneno, sed ancillam et sponsam Christi erudiam regnis caelestibus offerendam.

CXVII

AD MATREM ET FILIAM IN GALLIA COMMORANTES

1. RETTULIT mihi quidam frater e Gallia se habere sororem virginem matremque viduam, quae in eadem urbe divisim habitarent cellulis et vel ob hospitii solitudinem vel custodiendas facultatulas praesules sibi quosdam clericos adsumpsissent, ut maiori dedecore iungerentur alienis, quam a se fuerant separatae. Cumque ego ingemescerem et multo plura tacendo quam loquendo significarem: 'Quaeso te,' inquit, 'corripas eas litteris tuis et ad concordiam revoces, ut mater filiam, filia matrem agnoscat.' Cui ego: 'Optimam,' inquam, 'mihi iniungis provinciam, ut alienus conciliem, quas filius fraterque non potuit, quasi vero episcopalem cathedram teneam et non clausus cellula ac procul a turbis remotus vel praeterita plangam vitia vel vitare nitar will send us Paula, I undertake to be both her tutor and her foster-father. I will carry her on my shoulders, and my old tongue shall train her stammering lips. And I shall take more pride in my task than did the worldly philosopher; for I shall not be teaching a Macedonian king, destined to die by poison in Babylon, but a handmaid and bride of Christ who one day shall be presented to the heavenly throne.

LETTER CVII AND LETTER CXVII

LETTER CXVII

TO A MOTHER AND DAUGHTER LIVING IN GAUL

Dangerous friendships

WRITTEN A.D. 405

A CERTAIN brother from Gaul told me the other day that he had a virgin sister and a widowed mother who, though living in the same city, had separate apartments, and had taken to themselves clerical directors, either to prevent their feeling lonely, or else to manage their small properties; and that by this union with strangers they had caused more scandal even than by living apart. I groaned to hear his tale, and by silence expressed far more than I could by words. 'Pray,' he continued, 'rebuke them in a letter and recall them to harmony, so that the mother may recognize her daughter, and the daughter her mother.' 'This is a fine commission,' I replied, 'that you lay upon me, that I a stranger should reconcile those with whom a son and brother has failed. You talk as though I held a bishop's chair instead of being confined, far from men's turmoil, in a tiny cell, where I lament past sins and praesentia. Sed et incongruum est latere corpore et lingua per orbem vagari.' Et ille: 'Nimium,' ait, 'formidolosus; ubi illa quondam constantia, in qua multo sale urbem defricans Lucilianum quippiam rettulisti?' 'Hoc est,' aio, 'quod me fugat et labra dividere non sinit. Postquam ergo arguendo crimina factus sum criminus et iuxta tritum vulgi sermone proverbium iurantibus et negantibus cunctis me aures nec credo habere nec tango ipsique parietes in me maledicta resonarunt "Et psallebant contra me, qui bibebant vinum," coactus malo tacere didici rectius esse arbitrans ponere custodiam ori meo et ostium munitum labiis meis, quam declinare cor in verba malitiae et, dum carpo vitia, in vitium detractionis incurrere.' Quod cum dixissem: 'Non est,' inquit, 'detrahere verum dicere, nec privata correptio generalem doctrinam facit, cum aut rarus aut nullus sit, qui sub huius culpa reatum cadat. Quaeso ergo te, ne me tanto itinere vexatum frustra venisse patiaris. Scit enim dominus, quod post visionem sanctorum locorum hanc vel maxime causam habui, ut tuis litteris sorori me redderes et matri.' Et ego: 'Iam iam,' inquam, 'quod vis, faciam; nam et epistulae transmarinae sunt et specialiter sermo dictatus rarus potest invenire, quos mordeat. Te autem moneo, ut clam sermonem hunc habeas. Cumque portaveris pro viatico, si auditus fuerit, laetemur pariter; sin autem contemptus, quod et magis reor, ego verba perdiderim, tu itineris longitudinem.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Horae, Satires, I. x. 3: sale multo urbem defricuit. Lucilius was a satirist.

² This proverb has not been identified nor has any satisfactory explanation of its nature been given.

³ Psalm lxi. 12.

⁴ I.e. the journey from Gaul to Palestine.

LETTER CXVII

try to avoid present temptations. It is inconsistent surely to hide one's body, and to allow one's tongue to roam the world.' Thereupon he answered: 'You are too fearful; where now is the hardihood wherewith, like Lucilius of old,¹ you scoured the city with abundant salt?' 'It is just that,' said I, 'which deters me and forbids me now to open my lips. Because I tried to convict crime I have myself been made out a criminal. It is like the popular proverb:² as all the world declares on oath that I have no ears, I believe it too and do not touch them. The very walls resounded with curses against me and "I was the song of drunkards."³ I have been taught by painful experience to hold my tongue, and now I think it better to set a guard to my mouth, and keep the door of my lips close fastened, rather than to incline my heart to malicious words, and while censuring the faults of others myself to fall into that of detraction.' To that he said: 'Speaking the truth is not detraction, and a special rebuke is not a general lecture. There are few persons or none who are guilty of this particular fault. I beg you therefore not to let me have made this long and painful journey⁴ in vain. The Lord knows that after the sight of the holy places my chief motive for coming was to get you to restore me by a letter to my mother and sister.' 'Well, well,' I answered, 'I will do as you wish. My letters will pass across the sea, and a discourse specially composed can seldom offend others. I warn you, however, to keep what I say private. Take it as part of your luggage, and if it is listened to, let us rejoice together. But if it is rejected, as I rather think it will be, I shall have wasted my words and you your long journey.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Primum scire vos cupio, soror ac filia, me non idcirco scribere, quia aliquid de vobis suspicer, sed, ne ceteri suspicentur, vestram orare concordiam. Alioquin—quod absit!—si peccati vos aestimarem glutino cohaesisse, numquam scriberem sciremque me surdis narrare fabulam. Deinde hoc obsecro, ut, si mordacius quippiam scripsero, non tam meae austeritatis putetis esse quam morbi. Putridae carnes ferro curantur et cauterio, venena serpentino pelluntur antidoto; quod satis dolet, maiori dolore expellitur. Ad extremum hoc dico, quod, etiam si conscientia vulnus non habeat, habet tamen fama ignominiam. Mater et filia, nomina pietatis, officiorum vocabula, vincula naturae secundaque post Deum foederatio, non est laus, si vos diligitis; scelus est, quod odistis. Dominus Iesus subiectus est parentibus suis: venerabatur matrem, cuius erat ipse pater, colebat nutricium, quem nutrierat, gestatumque se meminerat alterius utero, alterius brachiis. Unde et in cruce pendens commendat parentem discipulo, quam numquam ante crucem dimiserat.

3. Tu vero, filia—iam enim desino ad matrem loqui, quam forsitan aetas et inbecillitas ac solitudo excusabilem faciunt—tu, inquam, filia, eius domum angustam iudicas, cuius non tibi fuit venter angustus? Decem mensibus utero clausa vixisti, et uno die in

LETTER CXVII

The Letter

In the first place, my sister and daughter, I wish you to know that I am writing not because I suspect anything evil of you, but that I am begging you to live in harmony to prevent other people becoming suspicious. In any case, if I had thought—far be it from me—that you were caught in the snares of sin, I should never have written, knowing that my tale would be addressed to deaf ears. In the second place, if I write at all sharply, I beg you to attribute it not to any harshness on my part, but to the malady which I am treating. When the flesh has mortified, cautery and the knife are the remedies; for poison snake's venom is the antidote; serious pain is cured by greater pain. Lastly I say this: even if your own conscience is unhurt, scandal brings disgrace. Mother and daughter! names of affection, titles of duties, bonds of nature, an alliance second after God, there is no praise if you love; it is crime that you hate. Our Lord Jesus was subject to His parents: He revered the mother of whom He was Himself the parent: He honoured the foster-father whom He Himself had fostered: He remembered that the one had carried Him in her womb, and the other in his arms. Wherefore also when He was hanging on the cross, He commended to a disciple the mother whom before the cross He had never sent away.

For the moment I say no more to the mother; perhaps age, weakness and loneliness make her excusable. But you, my daughter, you, I say, do you think that her house is too small for you whose womb was not too small? You lived for ten months in the shelter of your mother's body; can you not uno cubiculo cum matre non duras? An oculos eius ferre non potes et, quia omnes motus tuos illa, quae genuit, quae aluit et ad hanc perduxit aetatem, facilius intellegit, testem domesticam fugis? Si virgo es, quid times diligentem custodiam? Si corrupta, cur non palam nubis? Secunda post naufragium tabula est, quod male coeperis, saltem hoc remedio temperare. Neque vero hoc dico, quo post peccatum tollam paenitentiam, ut, quod male coepit, male perseveret, sed quod desperem in istius modi copula divulsionem. Alioquin, si ad matrem migraveris post ruinam, facilius poteris cum ea plangere, quod per illius absentiam perdidisti. Quodsi adhuc integra es et non perdidisti, conserva, ne perdas. Quid tibi necesse est in ea versari domo, in qua necesse habeas cotidie aut perire aut vincere? Quisquamne mortalium iuxta viperam securus somnos capit? Quae ut non percutiat, certe sollicitat. Securius est perire non posse quam iuxta periculum non perisse; in altero tranquillitas est, in altero gubernatio, ibi gaudemus, hic evadimus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Sed forte respondeas: 'Non bene morata mater est, res saeculi cupit, amat divitias, ignorat ieiunium, oculos stibio linit, vult compta procedere et nocet proposito meo nec possum cum huiusce modi vivere.' Primum quidem, etiam si talis est, ut causaris, maius habebis praemium, si talem non endure to live with her for one day in one room? Or is it that you cannot bear her eyes? Knowing that she who bore you, nursed you and reared you understands all your movements without difficulty, do you shrink from a witness to your home life? If you are a virgin, why do you fear careful guardianship? If you have lost your virginity, why do you not marry openly? Marriage is a raft for the shipwrecked, a remedy that may at least cure a bad beginning. Nor do I say this, because after sin I would abolish repentance, so that what began wrong may go on wrong; but because with connections of this sort I despair of a break. In any case, if you return to your mother after your downfall, you will be more easily able in her company to lament that which you lost by separating from her. If, on the other hand, you are still a pure virgin and have not lost your chastity, guard it lest you lose it now. Why must you live in a house where you must every day win a battle or be ruined? Can any one sleep soundly by the side of a viper? It may not attack, but it certainly causes uneasiness. It is safer to be where you cannot possibly perish, than to graze the peril and just not to perish. In the first case, calm water; in the second, skilful steering; there we are gay, here we just escape.

LETTER CXVII

You may perhaps reply: 'My mother has not a good character, she desires the things of this world, she loves riches, she ignores all fasts, she rubs her eyes with antimony, she likes to go out in fine clothes, she is a danger to my vows, I cannot live with a person of her kind.' To begin with, even if she is the sort of woman you allege, you will have the greater reward if you refuse to desert her with all her faults. She deseras. Illa te diu portavit, diu aluit et difficiliores infantiae mores blanda pietate sustinuit. Lavit pannorum sordes et immundo saepe foedata est stercore. Adsedit aegrotanti et, quae propter te sua fastidia sustinuerat, tua quoque passa est. Ad hanc perduxit aetatem; ut Christum amares, docuit. Non tibi displiceat eius conversatio, quae te sponso tuo virginem consecravit. Quodsi ferri non potest et delicias eius fugis atque, ut vulgo soletis dicere, saecularis est mater, habes alienas virgines, habes sanctum pudicitiae chorum. Quid matrem deserens eum eligis, qui suam forsitan sororem reliquit et matrem? Illa difficilis, sed iste facilis; illa iurgatrix, iste placabilis. Quem quaero utrum secuta sis an postea inveneris. Si secuta es, manifestum est, cur matrem reliqueris; si postea repperisti, ostendis, quid in matris hospicio non potueris invenire. Durus doctor et meo mucrone me vulnerans: 'Qui ambulat,' inquit, 'simpliciter, ambulat confidenter.' Tacerem, si me remorderet conscientia, et in aliis meum crimen non reprehenderem nec per trabem oculi mei alterius festucam viderem. Nunc autem, cum inter fratres procul habitans eorumque fruens contubernio honeste sub arbitris et videam raro et videar, inpudentissicarried you long, and she nursed you for many months; her gentle love bore with the peevish ways of your infancy. She washed your soiled napkins and often dirtied her hands with their nastiness. She sat by your bed when you were ill and was patient with your sickness, even as she had before endured the sickness of maternity which you caused. She brought you up to womanhood; she taught you to love Christ. The company of one who consecrated you as a virgin to your Spouse ought not to be distasteful to you. Still, if you cannot put up with her and her fashionable ways, if she is really, as people say, a worldly mother, there are virgins of other families, a holy company of chaste maidens, with whom you might live. Why, when you desert your mother, do you choose a man who perhaps has left a sister and mother of his own? She is hard to get on with, you will say, he is easy; she is fond of quarrels, he is amiable. Well, I have one question to ask: did you leave your mother to follow this man or did you come upon him after you had left her? In the first case, it is plain why you deserted your parent; in the second, you reveal clearly what it was that you could not find under your mother's roof. A stern teacher, who wounds me with my own scalpel, says: 'He that walketh uprightly walketh surely.'¹ If I had a guilty conscience I would hold my tongue, and not blame in others an offence which I myself commit, nor see the mote in my neighbour's eye through the beam in my own. But as it is, since I live far away in a community of brothers whose society, as witnesses can testify, I honourably enjoy, rarely seeing or being seen by other men, it would be the height of shamelessness mum est eius te verecundiam non sequi, cuius te sequi testeris exemplum. Quodsi dixeris: 'Et mihi sufficit conscientia mea; habeo Deum iudicem, qui meae vitae testis est; non curo, quid loquantur homines,' audi apostolum scribentem: 'Providentes bona non solum coram Deo, sed etiam hominibus.' Si quis te carpit, quod sis Christiana, quod virgo, ne cures, quod ideo dimiseris matrem, ut in monasterio inter virgines viveres; talis detractio laus tua est. Ubi non luxuria in puella Dei, sed duritia carpitur, crudelitas ista pietas est. Illum enim praefers matri, quem praeferre iuberis et animae tuae. Quem si et ipsa praetulerit, et filiam te sentiet et sororem.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Proverbs, x. 9.

LETTER CXVII

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Quid igitur? Scelus est sancti viri habere contubernium? Obtorto collo me in ius trahis, ut aut probem, quod nolo, aut multorum invidiam subeam. Sanctus vir numquam filiam a matre seiungit; utramque suspicit, utramque veneratur. Sit quamlibet sancta filia, mater vidua indicium castitatis est. Si coevus tuus est ille nescio quis, matrem tuam honoret et suam; si senior, te ut filiam diligat et parentis subiciat disciplinae. Non expedit amborum famae plus te illum amare quam matrem, ne non videatur affectum in te eligere, sed aetatem. Et for you not to adopt the modest life of the man whom you profess to have taken as your exemplar. You may reply: 'For me also my own conscience is sufficient. God is my judge who is witness of my life. I care not what men may say.' Listen then to the apostle's words: 'Provide things honest not only in the sight of God but also in the sight of men.'¹ Heed it not if anyone criticizes you for being a Christian and a virgin, and for having left your mother to live in a monastery with other virgins. Such censure is your truest praise. When men blame one of God's maidens, not for self-indulgence, but for sternness, what they call cruelty is really devotion. You are preferring to your mother Him whom you are bidden to prefer to your own soul. And if she herself should ever also thus prefer Him, she will find in you both a daughter and a sister.

¹ Romans, xii. 17.

LETTER CXVII

'What!' you may say, 'is it a crime to live under the same roof with a holy man?' You drag me by the scruff of the neck into court, and give me choice either to approve against my will, or else incur odium from many. A holy man never separates a daughter from her mother; he respects them both, he regards both of them with reverence. However saintly a daughter may be, a widowed mother is a warranty of her chastity. If this man of yours is of the same age as you are, he should honour your mother as his own; if he is your elder, he should love you as a daughter and submit you to a mother's discipline. It is not expedient, for your reputation or for his, that he should love you more than he loves your mother: so that he may not seem to make his choice in you not of your affection but of your youth. And I should still say this, if you hoc dicerem, si fratrem monachum non haberes, si domesticis careres praesidiis; nunc vero, pro dolor, inter matrem atque germanum—et matrem viduam fratremque monachum—cur se alienus interserit? Bonum quidem est, ut te et filiam noveris et sororem; si autem utrumque non potes et mater quasi dura respuitur, saltim frater placeat. Si frater asperior est, mollior sit illa, quae genuit. Quid palles? Quid aestuas? Quid vultum rubore suffundis et trementibus labiis impatientiam pectoris contestaris? Non superat amorem matris et fratris nisi solus uxoris affectus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Audio praeterea te suburbana, villarum amoenitates cum adfinibus et cognatis et istius modi genus hominibus circumire. Nec dubito, quin vel consobrina vel soror sit, in quarum solacium novi generis ducaris adsecula—absit quippe, ut, quamvis proximi sint et cognati, virorum te suspicer captare consortia—obsecro ergo te, virgo, ut mihi respondeas: sola vadis in comitatu propinquorum an cum amasio tuo? Quamvis sis inpudens, saecularium oculis eum ingerere non audebis. Si enim hoc feceris, et te et illum familia universa cantabit, vos cunctorum digiti denotabunt, ipsa quoque soror aut adfinis sive cognata, quae in adulationem tui sanctum et nonnum had no brother who is a monk, if you lacked protectors at home. But as things stand, why does a stranger—O grievous thought!—thrust himself in between you and your mother and brother, your mother a widow and your brother a monk? It would be a good thing for you to know that you are both a daughter and a sister. But if you cannot do both, and if your palate rejects your mother as being a rough wine, your brother at least should prove satisfactory. If he should be somewhat harsh, then she who bore you may seem more mellow. Why do you turn pale? Why does your bosom heave? Why do your hot blushes and quivering lips confess your restlessness? Nothing can overcome a woman's love for a mother and a brother, except only the passion of a wife.

LETTER CXVII

I hear, moreover, that you go the round of suburban retreats and pleasant country houses in company with your relatives and connections by marriage and such like intimate friends. Nor do I doubt, that there is some female cousin or sister, for whose comfort you may be taken as a new sort of attendant—indeed, far be it from me to suppose, that although they may be members of your own family, you angle for the society of men—and so I pray you, my virgin, tell me this: do you appear alone in your kinsfolk's society or do you take your sweetheart with you? However shameless you may be, you will scarcely dare to flaunt him in the eyes of worldly people. For if you should do so, your entire family will make a song of you and him; every finger will be pointed at the pair of you; even your sister or kinswoman or relative, who in your presence to flatter you calls him a monk coram te vocant, cum se paululum converterit, portentosum ridebit maritum. Sin autem sola ieris—quod et magis aestimo—utique inter servos adulescentes, inter maritas feminas atque nupturas, inter lascivas puellas et comatos linteatosque iuvenes furvarum vestium puella gradieris. Dabit tibi barbatulus quilibet manum, sustentabit lassam et pressis digitis aut temptabitur aut temptabit. Erit tibi inter viros matronasque convivium: expectabis aliena oscula, praegustatos cibos et absque scandalo tuo in aliis sericas vestes auratasque miraberis. In ipso quoque convivio, ut vescaris carnibus, quasi invita cogeris, ut vinum bibas, Dei laudabitur creatura, ut laves balneis, sordibus detrahetur; et omnes te, cum aliquid eorum, quae suadent, retractans feceris, puram, simplicem, dominam et vere ingenuam conelamabunt. Personabit interim aliquis cantator ad mensam et inter psalmos dulci modulatione currentes, quoniam alienas non audebit uxores, te, quae custodem non habes, saepius respectabit. Loquetur nutibus et, quidquid metuet dicere, significabit affectibus. Inter has et tantas inlecebras voluptatum etiam ferreas mentes libido domat, quae maiorem in virginibus patitur famem, dum dulcius putat omne, quod nescit. Narrant gentilium fabulae and a holy man, will laugh behind his back at your fright of a husband. If, on the other hand, you go out alone—which I rather suppose—you, a girl in your dark clothes, will be one of a party of youthful attendants, married women and women soon to be brides, pleasure-loving damsels, and young fops with long hair and close-fitting tunics. Some boy with a little beard will give you his arm, and hold you up if you are tired, and as your fingers squeeze he will either be tempted himself or will tempt you. You will sit down to table with married men and women; you will wait till the others have finished kissing and the dishes have been tasted, and without making any protest will admire the silk dresses and the gold brocade that the others are wearing. At the dinner itself they will pretend you are unwilling and will force you to partake of the meat; to get you to drink wine, they will praise it as the gift of the Creator. To induce you to visit the baths, they will speak of dirt with disgust. And when you reluctantly do something of what they would have you do, they will cry out in chorus: 'What a frank, innocent girl she is! What a genuine lady!' Meanwhile some singer will come into the dining-room, and as he performs a selection of soft flowing airs, he will not dare to look at other men's wives, but he will very often glance at you, who have no protector. He will speak by gestures, and a meaning emphasis in his voice will convey what he is afraid to put into words. Amid such strong allurements to pleasure as these even iron wills are overcome by desire, which in the case of virgins is the sharper set because it thinks that anything of which it knows nothing is especially delightful. Heathen legends tell us that cantibus sirenarum nautas in saxa praecipites et ad Orphei citharam arbores bestiasque ac silicum dura mollita. Difficile inter epulas servatur pudicitia. Nitens cutis sordidum ostentat animum.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

LETTER CXVII

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. Legimus in scolis pueri—et spiritantia in plateis aera conspeximus—aliquem ossibus vix haerentem inlicitis arsisse amoribus et ante vita caruisse quam peste. Quid tu facies, puella sani corporis, delicata, pinguis, rubens, aestuans inter carnes, inter vina et balneas, iuxta maritas, iuxta adulescentulos? Etsi rogata non dederis, tamen formae putes testimonium, si rogeris. Libidinosa mens ardentius honesta persequitur et, quod non licet, dulcius suspicatur. Vestis ipsa vilis et pulla animi tacentis indicium est, si rugam non habeat, si per terram, ut altior videaris, trahatur, si de industria dissuta sit tunica, ut aliquid intus appareat operiatque, quod foedum est, et aperiat, quod formosum. Caliga quoque ambulantis nigella ac nitens stridore iuvenes ad se vocat. Papillae fasciis comprimuntur et crispanti cingulo angustius pectus artatur. Capilli vel in frontem vel in aures defluunt. Palliolum interdum cadit, ut candidos nudet umeros, et, quasi videri noluerit, celat festina, quod volens retraxerat. Et quando in publico quasi per verecundiam operit faciem, lupathe songs of the sirens drew sailors headlong on to their rocks, and that trees and beasts and hard stones were all softened by the music of Orpheus' lyre. At a banquet it is hard to preserve one's chastity. A sleek skin is the sure sign of a foul mind.

¹ Virgil, Eclogues, III. 102: vix ossibus haerent.

LETTER CXVII

When I was a boy at school I read of a man—and in the streets I have since seen his living image in bronze—who burned with unlawful passion even when his flesh scarcely clung to his bones,¹ and who passed away from life with his malady still unhealed. What then will you do, a healthy young girl, dainty, plump, rosy, all afire amid the fleshpots, amid the wines and baths, side by side with married women, with young men? Even if you refuse to give what they ask for, you may think that the asking is evidence of your beauty. A libertine is all the more ardent when he is pursuing virtue, and thinks that the unlawful is especially delightful. Your very robe, coarse and sombre though it be, betrays your unexpressed desires, if it be without crease, if it be trailed upon the ground to make you seem taller, if your vest be slit on purpose to let something be seen within, hiding that which is unsightly and disclosing that which is fair. As you walk along, your shiny black shoes by their creaking give an invitation to young men. Your breasts are confined in strips of linen, and your chest is imprisoned close by a tight girdle. Your hair comes down over your forehead or over your ears. Your shawl sometimes drops, so as to leave your white shoulders bare, and then, as though unwilling to be seen, it hastily hides what it intentionally revealed. And when in public it hides the face in a pretence of modesty, with a narum arte id solum ostendit, quod ostensum magis placere potest.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. Respondebis: 'Unde me nosti? et quomodo tam longe in me iactas oculos tuos?' Fratris hoc tui mihi narravere lacrimae et intolerabiles per momenta singultus. Atque utinam ille mentitus sit et magis timens hoc quam arguens dixerit! Sed mihi crede, soror: nemo mentiens plorat. Dolet sibi praelatum iuvenem, non quidem comatum, non vestium sericarum, sed trossulum et in sordibus delicatum, qui ipse sacculum signet, textrinum teneat, pensa distribuat, regat familiam, emat quicquid de publico necessarium est, dispensator et dominus et praeveniens officula servulorum, quem omnes rodant famuli, et quicquid domina non dederit, illum clamitent subtraxisse. Querulum servulorum genus est et, quantumcumque dederis, semper eis minus est. Non enim considerant de quanto, sed quantum detur, doloremque suum solis, quod possunt, detractationibus consolantur. Ille parasitum, iste inpostorem, hic heredipetam, alius novo quolibet appellat vocabulo. Ipsum iactant adsidere lectulo, obstetrices adhibere languenti, portare matulam, calefacere lintea, plicare fasciolas. Facilius mala credunt homines et quodcumque domi fingitur, rumor in publico fit. Nec mireris, si ancillae et servuli de vobis ista confingant, cum mater quoque id ipsum queratur et frater.

LETTER CXVII

harlot's skill it shows only those features which give men when shown more pleasure.

You will reply: 'From what source do you know all this about me? How could you ever have set eyes upon me when you live so far away?' Your brother's tears told me this and his scarcely endurable outbursts of sobbing. Would that he may have spoken falsely, would that his words may have been the expression of fears, not of facts! But believe me, sister; no one ever weeps when he is lying. He is indignant that a young man is preferred to himself, not indeed a long-haired fop in silk clothes, but still a coxcomb dainty even in his squalor, a rogue who puts his own seal on your purse, manages the weaving, apportions the wool to be spun, directs the household, and buys all that is needed in the market. He is both steward and master, and anticipates the servants in all their duties, so that the whole household have their teeth in him and protest that he has filched all that their mistress does not give them. Servants are always full of complaints, and, however much you give them, it is too little. They do not consider how much you have, but only how much they get, and they console their indignation in the only way they can, by finding fault. One calls him a parasite, another an incubus, another a legacy-hunter, another any fresh name he can invent. They put it about that he sits at your bedside, fetches nurses when you feel unwell, removes the slops, makes you warm bandages, and folds compresses. People are only too ready to believe evil, and tales invented within doors soon get noised abroad. Nor need you wonder that your maids and footmen invent such tales about you both, when even your mother and brother make similar complaints.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Fac igitur, quod moneo, quod precor, ut primum matri, dehinc, si id fieri non potest, saltim fratri reconcilieris. Aut si ista tam cara nomina hostiliter detestaris, dividere ab eo, quem tuis diceris praetulisse. Si autem et hoc non potes—reverteris enim ad tuos, si illum possis deserere—vel honestius sodali tuo utere. Separentur domus vestrae dividaturque convivium, ne maledici homines sub uno tectulo vos manentes lectulum quoque crimentur habere communem. Potes et ad necessitates tuas, quale voluisti, habere solacium et aliqua ex parte publica carere infamia, quamquam cavenda sit macula, quae nullo nitro secundum Hieremiam, nulla fullonum herba lui potest. Quando vis, ut te videat—et invisct—adhibe arbitros amicos, libertos, servulos. Bona conscientia nullius oculos fugiet. Intret intrepidus, securus exeat. Taciti oculi et sermo silens et totius corporis habitus vel trepidationem interdum vel securitatem loquuntur. Aperi, quaeso, aures tuas et clamorem totius civitatis exaudi. Iam perdidisti vestra vocabula et mutuo ex vobis cognomina suscepistis: tu illius diceris et ille tuus. Hoc mater audit et frater paratique sunt et precantur vos sibi dividere et privatam vestrae coniunctionis infamiam laudem facere communem. Tu esto cum matre, sit ille cum fratre. Audentius diliges¹ sodalem fratris tui: honestius amabit mater amicum filii quam filiae suae. Quodsi nolueris, si mea

¹ diliges: Hilberg.

¹ Jeremiah, ii. 20, 22: 'playing the harlot.'

LETTER CXVII

Do, therefore, what I advise and pray you to do. Be reconciled with your mother: if that is impossible, at least make peace with your brother. Or, if you abominate those dear names, separate yourself from the man whom you are said to have preferred to your own people. If even this you cannot do—for you would return to your own folk if you could bear to leave him—pay more regard to appearances in your dealings with your friend. Live in separate houses and take your meals apart; if you stay under one roof, slanderers will accuse you of sharing one bed together. You can thus have the help you wished for when you need it, and to a certain degree avoid public disgrace. Not but what you must ever beware of that stain which Jeremiah¹ tells us no nitre or fuller's soap can wash out. When you wish him to see you—and he will visit you—have people in the room with you, friends or freedmen or slaves. A good conscience will shrink from no man's gaze. Let him come in without embarrassment and go away without anxiety. Silent looks, unspoken words, a man's whole bearing, at times spell uneasiness, at other times security. Pray, open your ears and listen to the outcry of the whole city. You two have already lost your own names and interchanged them for new ones: he is known as your man and you as his woman. Your mother and your brother have heard this talk, and they are ready each to take one of you, begging you thus to turn a private disgrace into a common glory. You can live with your mother, he with your brother. You may then more boldly show affection for your brother's friend: your mother may with more propriety love her son's comrade than she could her daughter's. But if you monita rugata fronte contempseris, epistula tibi haec voce libera proclamabit: ' Quid alienum servum obsides? Quid ministrum Christi tuum famulum facis? Respice ad populum, singulorum facies intuere. Ille in ecclesia legit et te aspiciunt universi, nisi quod paene licentia coniugali de tua infamia gloriaris nec iam secreto dedecore potes esse contenta; procacitatem libertatem vocas. " Facies meretricis facta est tibi, nescis erubescere." '

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Iterum me malignum, iterum suspiciosum, iterum rumigerulum clamitas. Egone suspiciosus, egone malivulus, qui, ut in principio epistulae praefatus sum, ideo scripsi, quia non suspicabar, an tu negligens, dissoluta, contemptrix, quae annis nata viginti et quinque adulescentem necdum bene barbatulum ita brachiis tuis quasi cassibus inclusisti? Optimum re vera paedagogum, qui te moneat, qui asperitate frontis exterreat et, quamquam in nullis aetatibus libido sit tuta, tamen vel cano capite ab aperta defendat ignominia! Veniet, veniet tempus—dies adlabitur, dum ignoras—et iste formosulus tuus, quia cito senescunt mulieres, maxime quae iuxta viros sunt, vel ditiozem reperiet vel iuniorem. Tunc te paenitebit pertinaciae, quando et rem et famam amiseris, quando, quod male iunctum fuerat, dividetur bene, nisi forte secura es et coalescente tanti temporis caritate discidium non vereris.

¹ Jeremiah, iii. 3.

LETTER CXVII

still refuse, if with wrinkled brow you reject my warning, then this letter will cry aloud to you with unchecked voice. 'Why,' it will say, 'do you besiege another's servant? Why do you make Christ's minister your slave? Look at the people and regard each individual face. When he is reading in church the whole congregation fix their eyes on you: but you perhaps with almost a wife's recklessness glory in your shame, and secret disgrace no longer satisfies you; you call boldness freedom. "You have a whore's forehead and refuse to be ashamed."'¹

Again you cry out that I am a malignant, that I am suspicious, that I am a scandal-monger. Am I truly suspicious or malignant, I who, as I said at the beginning of this letter, only took up my pen because I felt no suspicions of you? Is it not you rather who are careless, loose and scornful, you who at the age of twenty-five have caught in the snare of your arms a youth whose beard has hardly grown? A fine instructor in truth he must be, able to advise, by stern looks to frighten, and even by his grey hair to defend you from open shame! Not but what lust is never safe at any time of life. The day will surely, surely come—for time glides on while you notice it not—when your handsome youngster will find a richer or a more youthful mistress. Women soon grow old, especially when they live with a man at their side. You will be sorry for your decision and regret your obstinacy, on the day when you find property and reputation gone and this unhappy union happily broken—unless perhaps you feel quite at ease, and seeing that your affection has had so long a time to become established, you have no fear of a rupture.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Tu quoque, mater, quae propter aetatem maledicta non metuis, noli sic vindicari, ut pecces. Magis a te discat filia separari, quam tu ab illa disjungi. Habes filium et filiam et generum, immo contubernalem filiae tuae; quid quaeris aliena solacia et ignes iam sopitos suscitās? Honestius tibi est saltim culpam filiae sustentare quam occasionem tuae quaerere. Sit tecum filius monachus, pietatis viduitatisque praesidium. Quid tibi alienum hominem in ea praesertim domo, quae filium et filiam capere non potuit? Eius iam aetatis es, ut possis nepotes habere de filia. Invita ad te utrumque. Revertatur cum viro, quae sola exierat—virum dixi, non maritum; nemo calumniatur: sexum significare volui, ne coniugium—aut, si erubescit et retractat et domum, in qua nata est, arbitratur angustam, vos ad eius hospitium pergite. Quamvis artum sit, facilius potest matrem et fratrem capere quam alienum hominem, cum quo certe in uno cubiculo manere non poterat. Sint in una domo duae feminae, duo masculi. Sin autem et tertius ille γυροβοσκός tuus abire non vult et seditioes ac turbas concitat, sit biga, sit triga, frater vester ac filius et sororem illis exhibebit et matrem. Alii vitricum et generum vocent, ille nutricium appellet et fratrem.

¹ Jerome insists that the brother should live in the house; preferably with one other man—his sister's mate—but even if the mother's male friend remains the brother must stay: thus there are either two men or three men in the establishment.

LETTER CXVII

As for you, my friend's mother, your age frees you from any fear of scandal; but do not think that it gives you liberty to do wrong. Your daughter should rather learn from you how to separate from a companion than you be taught by her how to break away from a paramour. You have a son and a daughter and a son-in-law, or rather a man who lives under your daughter's roof. Why seek other consolations or try to wake sleeping fires? It would at least be more respectable for you to screen your daughter's fault than to seek in it an occasion for wrongdoing on your own part. Let your son who is a monk live with you and strengthen you in your natural affection and in your vow of widowhood. Why do you have a stranger in the house that could not hold a son and a daughter? You are old enough now to have grandchildren by your daughter. Invite the pair to your home. Let her return with her man, she who went out alone. I say 'man,' not 'husband'; so no one need cavil; I merely refer to his sex and not to any conjugal relationship. If she is ashamed and hangs back, and thinks the house where she was born is too small for her, then let all of you move to her lodging. However cramped it may be, it can more easily contain a mother and a brother than it could a strange man, for surely she could not have remained in the same bedroom with him. Let there be two females and two males in the one house. But if the third male too, that 'nurturer of your old age,' refuses to leave you and stirs up quarrels and confusion, be it a team of two, be it a team of three, he who is both brother and son will offer to the other men a sister and a mother.¹ Others may speak of them as step-father and son-in-law: your son must call them foster-father and brother.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Haec ad brevem lucubratiunculam celeri sermone dictavi volens desiderio postulantis satisfacere et quasi ad scholasticam materiam me exercens—eadem enim die mane pulsabat ostium, qui profecturus erat—simulque, ut ostenderem obtreptatoribus meis, quod et ego possim, quicquid venerit in buccam, dicere. Unde et de scripturis pauca perstrinxi nec orationem meam, ut in ceteris libris facere solitus sum, illarum floribus texui. Extemporalis est dictio et tanta ad lumen lucernulae facultate perfusa, ut notariorum manus lingua praecurreret et signa ac furta verborum volubilitas sermonis obrueret. Quod idcirco dixi, ut, qui non ignoscit ingenio, ignoscat vel tempori.

CXXV

AD RUSTICUM MONACHUM

1. NIHIL Christiano felicius, cui promittuntur regna caelorum; nihil laboriosius, qui cotidie de vita periclitatur. Nihil fortius, qui vincit diabolum; nihil inbecillius, qui a carne superatur. Utriusque rei exempla sunt plurima. Latro credidit in cruce et ¹ Probably Rusticus of Narbonne; following Jerome's advice he entered a monastery, was ordained later and consecrated Bishop of Narbonne 430.

LETTER CXVII AND LETTER CXXV

Note

I dictated this letter, talking quickly, in the space of one short night, wishing to satisfy a friend's earnest request and to try my hand, as it were, upon a scholastic subject—for that same morning my visitor, who was on the point of departure, knocked at my door—and at the same time, wishing to show my detractors that I too can say the first thing that comes into my head. I therefore introduced few quotations from the Scriptures and did not interweave my discourse with its flowers, as I have done in my other books. I extemporized as I went, and by the light of one small lamp poured forth my words in such profusion, that my tongue outstripped my secretaries' pens and my volubility baffled the tricks of their shorthand. I say this that those who make no excuses for lack of ability may make some for lack of time.

LETTER CXXV

To RUSTICUS¹

Good and bad monks

Written A.D. 411

NOTHING is happier than the Christian, for to him is promised the kingdom of heaven: nothing is more toil-worn, for every day he goes in danger of his life. Nothing is stronger than he is, for he triumphs over the devil: nothing is weaker, for he is conquered by the flesh. There are many examples of the truth of both statements. The robber on the cross believed, and it was immediately vouchsafed him

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

statim meretur audire: 'Amen, amen dico tibi: hodie mecum eris in paradiso.' Iudas de apostolatus fastigio in proditionis tartarum labitur et nec familiaritate convivii nec intinctione buccellae nec osculi gratia frangitur, ne quasi hominem tradat, quem filium Dei noverat. Quid Samaritana vilis? Non solum ipsa credit et post sex viros unum invenit dominum Messiamque cognoscit ad fontem, quem in templo Iudaeorum populus ignorabat, sed auctor fit multorum salutis et apostolis ementibus cibos esurientem reficit lassumque sustentat. Quid Salomone sapientius? Attamen infatuatur amoribus feminarum. 'Bonum est sal' nullumque sacrificium absque huius aspersione suscipitur—unde et apostolus praecipit: 'Sermo vester sit sale conditus'—quod, si infatuetur, foras proicitur in tantumque perdit nominis dignitatem, ut ne in sterquilinio quidem utile sit, quo solent credentium arva condiri et sterile animarum solum pinguescere. Haec dicimus, ut prima te, fili Rustice, fronte doceamus magna coepisse, excelsa sectari et adolescentiae, immo pubertatis, incentiva calcantem perfectae quidem aetatis gradum scandere, sed lubricum iter est, per quod ingrederis, nec tantam sequi gloriam post victoriam, quantam ignominiam post ruinam.

2. Non mihi nunc per virtutum prata ducendus es nec laborandum ut ostendam tibi variorum pulchri-

¹ St. Luke, xxiii. 43. ² Colossians, iv. 6. ³ Matt. v. 13.

LETTER CXXV

to hear the words: 'Verily I say unto thee, to-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.'¹ Judas on the other hand fell from his high place as apostle into the traitor's hell, and neither by the close intercourse of the banquet nor by the dipping of the sop nor by the grace of Christ's kiss was he prevented from betraying as man Him whom he had known as the Son of God. What could be of less worth than the woman of Samaria? Yet not only did she herself believe, and after her six husbands find one Lord, not only did she recognize at the well the Messiah whom the Jews failed to recognize in the temple; she brought salvation to many, and while the apostles were buying food she comforted Him who was hungry and weary. What could be wiser than Solomon? Yet he was rendered foolish by his love of women. 'Salt is good,' and no sacrifice is received unless it is sprinkled with it. Therefore it was that the apostle gave command: 'Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt.'² But if salt has lost its savour, it is cast out,³ and so completely loses its credit that it is not even useful on the dunghill to season believers' fields and enrich the barren soil of their souls. I say all this, my son Rusticus, because in the forefront of this treatise I would teach the greatness of your undertaking and the loftiness of your goal. You must know that only by treading underfoot the allurements of youth and early manhood can you climb to the heights of perfect maturity. The path you tread is slippery, and the glory of success is less than the disgrace of failure.

It is not my task now to lead you through the meadows of virtue, nor need I labour to show you the beauty of their gay blossoms, the purity of the tudinem florum, quid in se lilia habeant puritatis, quid rosarum verecundia possideat, quid violae purpura promittat in regno, quid rutilantium spondeat pictura gemmarum. Iam enim propitio domino stivam tenes, iam in tectum atque solarium cum Petro apostolo conscendisti, qui esuriens in Iudaeis Cornelii saturatur fide et famem incredulitatis eorum gentium conversione restinguit atque in vase evangeliorum quadrangulo, quod de caelo descendit ad terras, docetur et discit omnes homines posse salvari. Rursumque, quod viderat, in specie candidissimi linteaminis in superna transfertur et credentium turbas de terris in caelum rapit, ut pollicitatio domini compleatur: 'Beati mundo corde, quoniam ipsi Deum videbunt.' Totum, quod adprehensa manu insinuare tibi cupio, quod quasi doctus nauta post multa naufragia rudem conor instruere vectorem, illud est, ut, in quo litore pudicitiae pirata sit, noveris, ubi Charybdis et radix omnium malorum avaritia, ubi Scyllaei obtrectatorum canes, de quibus apostolus loquitur: 'Ne mordentes invicem mutuo consumamini,' quomodo in media tranquillitate securi Libycis interdum vitiorum Syrtibus obruamur, quid venenatorum animantium desertum huius saeculi nutriat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Navigantes Rubrum Mare, in quo optandum nobis est ut verus Pharao cum suo mergatur exercitu, multis difficultatibus ac periculis ad urbem Abisamam perveniunt. Utroque litore gentes vagae, immo

¹ Acts x. 9-16.

³ Galatians, v. 15.

² St. Matthew, v. 8.

⁴ A city of Arabia Felix.

LETTER CXXV

lilies, the modesty of the roses, and the sure promise of the kingdom given by the violet's purple and the jewelled brilliance of each painted flower. By God's favour you have already put your hand to the plough, and have already climbed up to the house-top and the terrace like the apostle Peter, who when he was hungry among the Jews was satisfied by the faith of Cornelius and appeased the cravings caused through their unbelief by the conversion of the Gentiles, being taught by the four-cornered vessel of the Gospels let down from heaven to earth that it was possible for all men to be saved.¹ And then, again, the fair white sheet which he saw in his vision was taken up, carrying hosts of believers from earth to heaven, that the promise of the Lord might be fulfilled: 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.'² In all this I only wish to take you by the hand and convey to you certain knowledge. Like an experienced sailor who has been in many a shipwreck, I seek to instruct a novice, and to tell you where you will find the pirates who would rob you of chastity, where lies the Charybdis of avarice, root of all evils, where are Scylla's dogs, those calumniators of whom the apostle says: 'If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.'³ I would warn you too that sometimes as we sail at ease in calm weather we may be sucked down by the quicksands of vice, and that many venomous creatures have their home in the desert of this world.

Those who navigate the Red Sea, where we must hope that the real Pharaoh may be drowned with all his host, have to face many difficulties and dangers before they reach the city of Abisama.⁴ Both shores are infested by nomad tribes and savage beasts.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

beluae habitant ferocissimae. Semper solliciti, semper armati totius anni vehunt cibaria. Latentibus saxis vadisque durissimis plena sunt omnia, ita ut speculator et ductor in summa mali arbore sedeat et inde regendae et circumflectendae navis dictata praedicat. Felix cursus est, si post sex menses supra dictae urbis portum teneant, a quo se incipit aperire oceanus, per quem vix anno perpetuo ad Indiam pervenitur et ad Gangem fluvium—quem Phison sancta scriptura cognominat—qui circuit omnem terram Evilat et multa genera pigmentorum de paradisi dicitur fonte evehere. Ibi nascitur carbunculus et zmaragdus et margarita candentia et uniones, quibus nobilium feminarum ardet ambitio, montesque aurei, quos adire propter dracones et gryphas et inensorum corporum monstra hominibus impossibile est, ut ostendatur nobis, quales custodes habeat avaritia.

4. Quorsum ista? Perspicuum est. Si negotiatores saeculi tanta sustinent, ut ad incertas perveniant periturasque divitias, et servant cum animae discrimine, quae multis periculis quaesierunt, quid Christi negotiatori non faciendum est, qui venditis omnibus quaerit pretiosissimum margaritum, qui totis substantiae suis opibus emit agrum, in quo reperiat thesaurum, quem nec fur effodere nec latro possit auferre?

5. Scio me offensurum esse quam plurimos, qui generalem de vitiis disputationem in suam referant contumeliam et, dum mihi irascuntur, suam indicant conscientiam multoque peius de se quam de me iudicant. Ego enim neminem nominabo nec veteris

¹ Genesis, ii. 11.

² St. Matthew, xiii. 45 and vi. 19.

LETTER CXXV

Travellers must be always on the alert, always armed, and they must take a year's provisions with them. The sea is full of hidden rocks and dangerous shoals, so that a look-out man on the top of the mast has to call out directions for the ship's course and steering. It is a successful trip if the harbour of the above-named city is reached in six months. At that point begins the ocean, which takes nearly a year to cross before you come to India and the river Ganges—called Phison in the Scriptures—which compasses the whole land of Evilat,¹ and is said to carry down from its source in Paradise many kinds of bright pigments. This land is the home of the carbuncle and the emerald, and those gleaming pearls which our great ladies so ardently desire. There are also in it mountains of gold which men cannot approach because of the dragons and griffins and other huge monsters, set there to show us what sort of guardians avarice employs.

To what end, you ask, do I say this? My reason is plain. If the merchants of this world undergo such pains to arrive at doubtful and passing riches, and after seeking them in the midst of dangers keep them at the risk of their lives, what should Christ's merchant do who sells all he has to buy the pearl of great price, and with his whole substance buys a field that he may find therein a treasure which neither thief can dig up nor robber carry away? ²

I know that I shall offend a very large number of people, who think that any general discourse on vice is meant as an attack upon themselves. Their anger against me is evidence of a guilty conscience, and they pass a severer judgment on their own character than on mine. I shall not mention names nor use comoediae licentia certas personas eligam atque perstringam. Prudentis viri est ac prudentium feminarum dissimulare, immo emendare, quod in se intellegant, et indignari sibi magis quam mihi nec in monitorem maledicta congerere, qui, ut isdem teneatur eriminibus, certe in eo melior est, quod sua ei mala non placent.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

6. Audio religiosam habere te matrem, multorum annorum viduam, quae aluit, quae erudivit infantem et post studia Galliarum, quae vel florentissima sunt, misit Romam non parcens sumptibus et absentiam filii spe sustinens futurorum, ut ubertatem Gallici nitoremque sermonis gravitas Romana condiret nec calcaribus in te sed frenis uteretur, quod et in disertissimis viris Graeciae legimus, qui Asianum tumorem Attico siccabat sale et luxuriantes flagellis vineas falcebus reprimebant, ut eloquentiae toreularia non verborum pampinis, sed sensuum quasi uvarum expressionibus redundarent. Hanc tu suscipe ut parentem, ama ut nutricem, venerare ut sanctam. Nec aliorum imiteris exemplum, qui relinquunt suas et alienas appetunt, quorum dedecus in propatulo est sub nominibus pietatis quaerentium suspecta consortia. Novi ego quasdam iam maturioris aetatis et plerasque generis libertini adolescentibus delectari et filios quaerere spiritales paulatimque pudore superato per ficta matrum nomina erumpere in licentiam maritalem. Alii sorores virgines deserunt the licence of the Old Comedy to pick out definite persons for criticism. A wise man and wise women will either hide or correct any faults they find in themselves, they will be more indignant with themselves than with me, and will not heap curses upon their adviser. Granted that he is liable to the same charges as they are, in his case his faults give him no pleasure; and so far at least he is their superior.

LETTER CXXV

I hear that your mother is a religious woman who for many years has been a widow, and that when you were a child she reared and taught you herself. After you had studied in the flourishing academies of Gaul she sent you to Rome, sparing no expense and consoling herself for her son's absence with bright hopes of his future. Her idea was that Roman gravity would temper the exuberance and glitter of your Gallic eloquence, and in your case would act as a bit rather than as a spur. So we read of the greatest Greek orators, that they seasoned the bombast of Asia with Attic salt and pruned their vines severely when the shoots were too luxuriant. They wished to fill the wine-press of eloquence, not with leaf-clusters of words, but with the rich grape-juice of sound sense. Respect her then as a parent, love her as a mother, venerate her as a saint. Do not imitate those who leave their own relatives and run after strange women. Their infamy is plain; for under pretext of piety they really seek illicit intercourse. I know some women of ripe age who in many cases take their pleasure with young freedmen, calling them their spiritual children, and gradually so far overcoming any sense of shame as to allow themselves under this pretence of motherhood all the licence of marriage. In other cases men et extraneis viduis copulantur. Sunt, quae oderunt suos et non suorum palpantur affectu, quarum impatientia, index animi, nullam recepit excusationem et cassa impudicitiae velamenta quasi aranearum fila dirumpit. Videas nonnullos accinctis renibus, pulla tunica, barba prolixa a mulieribus non posse discedere, sub eodem conmanere tecto, simul inire convivia, ancillas iuvenes habere in ministerio et praeter vocabulum nuptiarum omnia esse matrimonii. Nec culpa est nominis Christiani, si simulator religionis in vitio sit, quin immo confusio gentilium, cum ea vident ecclesiis displicere, quae omnibus bonis non placent.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

7. Tu vero, si monachus esse vis, non videri, habeto curam non rei familiaris, cui renuntiando hoc esse coepisti, sed animae tuae. Sordes vestium candidae mentis indicio sint, vilis tunica contemptum saeculi probet ita dumtaxat, ne animus tumeat, ne habitus sermoque dissentiat. Balnearum fomenta non quaeras, qui calorem corporis ieiuniorum cupis frigore extinguere. Quae et ipsa moderata sint, ne nimia debilitent stomachum et maiorem refectionem poscentia erumpant in cruditatem, quae parens libidinum est. Modicus et temperatus cibus et carni et animae utilis est. Matrem ita vide, ne per illam alias videre cogaris, quarum vultus cordi tuo abandon their sisters who are virgins, and unite themselves to widows who are no relations. There are women who hate their own kin and feel no affection for their family. Their restlessness reveals their state of mind, for it disdains excuses and rends asunder like cobwebs any veils that might conceal their licentiousness. You may see some men also with girded loins, sombre tunics and long beards, who yet can never leave women's society. They live with them under one roof, they go out to dinner with them, they have young girls to wait upon them, and, save that they are not called husbands, they enjoy all the privileges of marriage. But it is no fault of Christianity if a hypocrite falls into sin: rather it is the confusion of the Gentiles when they see that the churches condemn what is condemned by all honest folk.

LETTER CXXV

If you wish to be, and not merely seem, a monk, have regard not for your property—you began your vows by renouncing it—but for your soul. Let a squalid garb be the evidence of a clean heart: let a coarse tunic prove that you despise the world; provided only that you do not pride yourself on such things nor let your dress and language be at variance. Avoid hot baths: your aim is to quench the heat of the body by the help of chilling fasts. But let your fasts be moderate, since if they are carried to excess they weaken the stomach, and by making more food necessary to make up for it lead to indigestion, which is the parent of lust. A frugal, temperate diet is good both for body and soul.

See your mother often, but do not be forced to see other women when you visit her. Their faces may dwell in your heart and so

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

haereant, 'Et tacitum vivat sub pectore vulnus.' Ancillulas, quae illi in obsequio sunt, tibi scias esse in insidiis, quia, quantum vilior earum condicio, tanto facilior ruina est. Et Iohannes Baptista sanctam matrem habuit pontificisque filius erat et tamen nec matris affectu nec patris opibus vincebatur, ut in domo parentum cum periculo viveret castitatis. Vivebat in heremo et oculis desiderantibus Christum nihil aliud dignabatur aspicere. Vestis aspera, zona pellicia, cibus locustae melque silvestre, omnia virtuti et continentiae praeparata. Filii prophetarum—quos monachos in veteri legimus testamento—aedificabant sibi casulas propter fluentia Iordanis et turbis urbium derelictis polenta et herbis agrestibus victitabant. Quamdiu in patria tua es, habeto cellulam pro paradiso, varia scripturarum poma decerpe, his utere deliciis, harum fruiere complexu. Si scandalizat te oculus, pes, manus tua, proice ea. Nulli parcas, ut soli parcas animae. 'Qui viderit mulierem ad concupiscendum eam, iam moechatus est eam in corde suo. Quis gloriabitur castum se habere cor?' Astra non sunt munda in conspectu domini: quanto magis homines, quorum vita temptatio est! Vae nobis, qui, quotiens concupiscimus, totiens fornicamur. 'Incubriatus est,' inquit, 'gladius meus in caelo': multo amplius in terra, quae spinas et tribulos generat. Vas electionis, in cuius Christus ore sonabat, macerat corpus suum et subicit servituti et tamen cernit naturalem carnis ardorem suae

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, IV. 67.

³ St. Matthew, v. 28.

⁵ Isaiah, xxxiv. 5.

² St. Matthew, xviii. 9.

⁴ Proverbs, xx. 9.

LETTER CXXV

‘ A secret wound may fester in your breast.’¹

You must remember too that the maids who wait upon her are an especial snare; the lower they are in rank, the easier it is to ruin them. John the Baptist had a saintly mother and his father was a priest; but neither his mother’s love nor his father’s wealth could prevail upon him to live in his parents’ house at the risk of his chastity. He took up his abode in the desert, and desiring only to see Christ refused to look at anything else. His rough garb, his skin girdle, his diet of locusts and wild honey were all alike meant to ensure virtue and self-restraint. The sons of the prophets, who are the monks of the Old Testament, built huts for themselves by the stream of Jordan, and leaving the crowded cities lived on porridge and wild herbs. As long as you stay in your native city, regard your cell as Paradise, gather in it the varied fruits of the Scriptures, make them your delight, and rejoice in their embrace. If your eye or your foot or your hand offend you, cast it off.² Spare nothing, provided that you spare your soul. ‘ Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.’³ ‘ Who can boast “ I have made my heart clean ”?’⁴ The stars are not pure in God’s sight: how much less are men, whose life is one long temptation! Woe to us, who commit fornication whenever we have lustful thoughts! ‘ My sword,’ says the Scripture, ‘ hath drunk its fill in heaven’⁵: much more then will it on earth, which produces thorns and thistles. The chosen vessel, from whose mouth we hear Christ’s own words, keeps his body under and brings it into subjection; but still he perceives that the natural repugnare sententiae, ut, quod non vult, hoc agere compellatur, et quasi vinum patiens vociferatur et dicit: ' Miser ego homo, quis me liberabit de corpore mortis huius? ' Et tu te arbitraris absque lapsu et vulnere posse transire, nisi omni custodia servaveris cor tuum et cum salvatore dixeris: ' Mater mea et fratres mei hi sunt, qui faciunt voluntatem patris mei? ' Crudelitas ista pietas est; immo quid tam pium, quam sanctae matri sanctum filium custodire? Optat et illa te vivere, non videre ad tempus, ut semper cum Christo videat. Anna Samuhelem non sibi, sed tabernaculo genuit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Filii Ionadab, qui vinum et siceram non bibebant, qui habitabant in tentoriis et, quas nox conpulerat, sedes habebant, scribuntur in psalmo, quod primi captivitatem sustinuerint, quia exercitu Chaldaeorum vastante Iudaeam urbes introire compulsi sunt.

8. Viderint, quid alii sentiant—unusquisque enim suo sensu ducitur—mihi oppidum carcer est et solitudo paradus. Quid desideramus urbium frequentiam, qui de singularitate censemur? Moyses, ut praeesset populo Iudaeorum, quadraginta annis eruditur in heremo, pastor ovium hominum factus est pastor; apostoli de piscatione lacus Genesar ad piscationem hominum transierunt. Tunc habebant patrem, rete, naviculam: secuti dominum protinus omnia reliquerunt portantes cotidie crucem suam et

¹ Romans, vii. 24.

² St. Luke, viii. 21.

³ Jeremiah, xxxv. 6.

⁴ The reference is to the heading of Psalm lxxi, given in the Septuagint (70): τῷ Δαυὶδ υἱῶν Ἰωνάδαβ, καὶ τῶν πρώτων αἰχμαλωτισθέντων.

⁵ Monachus means 'lonely.'

LETTER CXXV

heat of the body fights against his fixed purpose, and he is compelled to do what he will not. Like a man suffering violence he cries aloud and says: 'O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?'¹ And do you think then that you can pass through life without a fall and without a wound, if you do not keep your heart with all diligence and say with the Saviour: 'My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God and do it'?² Such cruelty as this is really love. Nay, what greater love can there be than to guard a holy son for a holy mother? She desires your eternal life: she is content not to see you for the moment, provided that she may see you for ever with Christ. She is like Hannah, who brought forth Samuel, not for her own comfort, but for the service of the tabernacle.

The sons of Jonadab drank no wine nor strong drink and lived in tents which they pitched whenever night came on.³ Of them the psalm⁴ says that they were the first to undergo captivity, for when the Chaldean host was devastating Judaea they were compelled to enter cities. Let others think as they will—every one follows his own bent—but to me a town is a prison, and the wilderness a paradise. What do we monks want with crowded cities, we whose very name bespeaks loneliness?⁵ Moses was trained for forty years in the desert to fit him for the task of leading the Jewish people, and from being a shepherd of sheep he became a shepherd of men. The apostles left their fishing on Lake Gennesaret to fish for human souls. Then they had a father, nets, and a little boat: but they followed the Lord straightway and abandoned everything, carrying their cross ne virgam quidem in manu habentes. Hoc dico, ut, etiam si clericatus te titillat desiderium, discas, quod possis docere, et rationabilem hostiam offeras Christo, ne miles antequam tiro, ne prius magister sis quam discipulus. Non est humilitatis meae neque mensurae iudicare de ceteris et de ministris ecclesiarum sinistrum quippiam dicere. Habeant illi ordinem et gradum suum, quem si tenueris, quomodo tibi in eo vivendum sit, editus ad Nepotianum liber docere te poterit. Nunc monachi incunabula moresque discutimus et eius monachi, qui liberabilibus studiis eruditus in adulescentia iugum Christi collo suo inposuit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. Primumque tractandum est, utrum solus an cum aliis in monasterio vivere debeas. Mihi placet, ut habeas sanctorum contubernium nec ipse te doceas et absque ductore¹ ingrediaris viam, quam numquam ingressus es, statimque in partem tibi alteram declinandum sit et errori pateas plusque aut minus ambules, quam necesse est, ut currens lasseris, moram faciens obdormias. In solitudine cito subrepat superbia et, si parumper ieiunaverit hominemque non viderit, putat se alicuius esse momenti oblitusque sui, unde quo venerit, intus corpore lingua foris vagatur. Iudicat contra apostoli voluntatem alienos servos; quod gula poposcerit, porrigit manus; dormit,

¹ doctore: Hilberg.

¹ A monk—monachus—originally was a solitary living in the desert, but after the time of St. Basil monks were usually organized in communities under a rule, and devoted their time to prayer, meditation and useful work. If a monk wished to enter the ministry of the Church he had to be ordained as deacon by a bishop. He then normally lived in a city and had a cure of souls.

² Letter LII.

³ Romans, xiv. 4.

LETTER CXXV

every day, without so much as a stick in their hands. I say this, so that if you are tickled by a desire to become a clergyman,¹ you may learn now what you will then be able to teach others, offering a reasonable sacrifice to Christ. You must not think yourself an old soldier while you are still a recruit, a master while you are still a pupil. It would not become my lowly rank to pass judgment on others, or to say anything unfavourable about those who serve in churches. Let them keep their proper place and station, and if you ever join them, my treatise written for Nepotian² will show you how you ought to live in that position. For the moment I am discussing a monk's early training and character, a monk, moreover, who after a liberal education in his early manhood placed upon his neck the yoke of Christ.

The first point with which I must deal is whether you ought to live alone or in a monastery with others. I would prefer you to have the society of holy men and not to be your own teacher. If you set out on a strange road without a guide you may easily at the start take a wrong turning and make a mistake, going too far or not far enough, running till you weary yourself or delaying your journey for a sleep. In solitude pride quickly creeps in, and when a man has fasted for a little while and has seen no one, he thinks himself a person of some account. He forgets who he is, whence he comes, and where he is going, and lets his body run riot within, his tongue abroad. Contrary to the apostle's³ wishes, he judges another man's servants; he stretches out his hand for anything that his gullet craves; he does what he pleases and sleeps as long as he pleases; he quantum voluerit; nullum veretur, omnes se inferiores putat crebriusque in urbibus quam in cellula est et inter fratres simulat verecundiam, qui platarum turbis conliduntur. Quid igitur? Solitariam vitam reprehendimus? Minime, quippe quam saepe laudavimus. Sed de ludo monasteriorum huiusce modi volumus egredi milites, quos rudimenta non terreant, qui specimen conversationis suae multo tempore dederint, qui omnium fuerunt minimi, ut primi omnium fierent, quos nec esuries nec saturitas aliquando superavit, qui paupertate laetantur, quorum habitus, sermo, vultus, incessus doctrina virtutum est, qui nesciunt secundum quosdam ineptos homines daemonum obpugnantium contra se portenta confingere, ut apud inperitos et vulgi homines miraculum sui faciant et exinde sectentur lucra.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Vidimus nuper et planximus Croesi opes unius morte deprehensas urbisque stipes quasi in usus pauperum congregatas stirpi et posteris derelictas. Tunc ferrum, quod latebat in profundo, supernatavit aquae et inter palmarum arbores Merrae amaritudo monstrata est. Nec mirum: talem et socium habuit et magistrum, qui egentium famem suas fecit esse divitias et miseris derelicta in suam miseriam tenuit. Quorum clamor tandem pervenit ad caelum et patientissimas Dei vicit aures, ut missus angelus pessimo Nabal Carmelio diceret: 'Stulte, hac nocte auferent animam tuam a te; quae autem preparasti, cuius erunt?'

¹ Exodus, xv. 23.

² St. Luke, xii. 20.

LETTER CXXV

fears no one, he thinks all men his inferiors, spends more time in cities than in his cell, and though among the brethren he makes a pretence of modesty, in the crowded squares he ruffles it with the best. What then, you will say? Do I disapprove of the solitary life? Not at all: I have often commended it. But I wish to see the soldiers who march out from a monastery-school men who have not been frightened by their early training, who have given proof of a holy life for many months, who have made themselves last that they might be first, who have not been overcome by hunger or satiety, who take pleasure in poverty, whose garb, conversation, looks and gait all teach virtue, and who have no skill—as some foolish fellows have—in inventing monstrous stories of their struggles with demons, tales invented to excite the admiration of the ignorant mob and to extract money from their pockets.

Just lately, to my sorrow, I saw the fortune of a Croesus brought to light at one man's death, and beheld a city's alms collected ostensibly for the poor's benefit left by will to his sons and their descendants. Then the iron which was hidden in the depths floated upon the surface, and amid the palm trees the bitter waters of Marah¹ were seen. Nor need we wonder at his avarice: his partner and teacher was a man who turned the hunger of the needy into a source of wealth for himself, and to his own wretchedness kept back the legacies that were left to the wretched. But at last their cries reached heaven and were too much for God's patient ears, so that he sent an angel to say to this villainous Nabal the Carmelite: 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?'²

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. Volo ergo te et propter causas, quas supra exposui, non habitare cum matre et praecipue, ne offerentem delicatos cibos renuendo contristes aut, si acceperis, oleum igni adicias et inter frequentiam puellarum per diem videas, quod noctibus cogites. Numquam de manu et oculis tuis recedat liber, psalterium discatur ad verbum, oratio sine intermissione, vigil sensus nec vanis cogitationibus patens. Corpus pariter animusque tendatur ad dominum. Iram vince patientia; ama scientiam scripturarum et carnis vitia non amabis. Nec vacet mens tua variis perturbationibus, quae, si pectori insederint, dominabuntur tui et te deducunt ad delictum maximum. Fac et aliquid operis, ut semper te diabolus inveniat occupatum. Si apostoli habentes potestatem de evangelio vivere laborabant manibus suis, ne quem gravarent, et aliis tribuebant refrigeria, quorum pro spiritualibus debebant metere carnalia, cur tu in usus tuos cessura non praepares? Vel fiscellam texe iunco vel canistrum lentis plecte viminibus, sariatur humus, areolae aequo limite dividantur; in quibus cum holerum iacta fuerint semina vel plantae per ordinem positae, aquae ducantur inriguae, ut pulcherrimorum versuum spectator adsistas:

‘ Ecce supercilio clivosi tramitis undam
Elicit, illa cadens raucum per levia murmur
Saxa ciet scatebrisque arentia temperat arva.’

¹ 2 Thessalonians, iii. 8.

² Virgil, Georgics, I. 108.

LETTER CXXV

For the reasons then which I have given above, I wish you not to live with your mother. And there are some further considerations. If she offers you a dainty dish, you would grieve her by refusing it, while if you take it you would be throwing oil on fire. Moreover, in a house that is full of girls you would see things in the day-time that you would think about in the night. Always have a book in your hand and before your eyes; learn the psalms word by word, pray without ceasing, keep your senses on the alert and closed against vain imaginings. Let your mind and body both strain towards the Lord, overcome wrath by patience; love the knowledge of the Scriptures and you will not love the sins of the flesh. Do not let your mind offer a lodging to disturbing thoughts, for if they once find a home in your breast they will become your masters and lead you on into fatal sin. Engage in some occupation, so that the devil may always find you busy. If the apostles who had the power to make the Gospel their livelihood still worked with their hands that they might not be a burden on any man,¹ and gave relief to others whose carnal possessions they had a right to enjoy in return for their spiritual benefits, why should you not provide for your own future wants? Make creels of reeds or weave baskets of pliant osiers. Hoe the ground and mark it out into equal plots, and when you have sown cabbage seed or set out plants in rows, bring water down in channels and stand by like the onlooker in the lovely lines:

'Lo, from the channelled slope he brings the stream, Which falls hoarse murmuring o'er the polished stones

And with its bubbling flood allays the heat
Of sun-scorched fields.'²

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Inserantur infructuosae arbores vel gemmis vel surculis, et parvo post tempore laboris tui dulcia poma decerpas. Apum fabricare alvearia, ad quas te mittunt Proverbia, et monasteriorum ordinem ac regiam disciplinam in parvis disce corporibus. Texantur et lina capiendis piscibus, scribantur libri, ut et manus operetur cibos et anima lectione saturetur. 'In desideriis est omnis otiosus.' Aegyptiorum monasteria hanc morem tenent, ut nullum absque opere ac labore suscipiant, non tam propter victus necessaria quam propter animae salutem, ne vagetur perniciosis cogitationibus, et instar fornicantis Hierusalem omni transeunti divaricet pedes suos.

12. Dum essem iuvenis et solitudinis me deserta vallarent, incentiva vitiorum ardoremque naturae ferre non poteram; quae cum crebris ieiuniis frangerem, mens tamen cogitationibus aestuabat. Ad quam edomandam cuidam fratri, qui ex Hebraeis crediderat, me in disciplinam dedi, ut post Quintiliani acumina Ciceronisque fluvios gravitatemque Frontonis et lenitatem Plinii alphabetum discerem, stridentia anhelantiaque verba meditarer. Quid ibi laboris insumperim, quid sustinuerim difficultatis, quotiens desperaverim quotiensque cessaverim et contentione discendi rursus inceperim, testis est conscientia tam mea, qui passus sum, quam eorum, qui mecum duxere vitam. Et gratias ago domino,

¹ Proverbs, vi. 8, where LXX. adds: ἡ πορεύθητι πρὸς τὴν μέλισσαν καὶ μαθὲ ὡς ἐργάτης ἐστὶ κ.τ.λ.

² Proverbs, xiii. 4. (LXX.)

LETTER CXXV

Graft barren trees with buds or slips, so that you may, after a little time, pluck sweet fruit as a reward for your labours. Make hives for bees, for to them the Proverbs of Solomon send you,¹ and by watching the tiny creatures learn the ordinance of a monastery and the discipline of a kingdom. Twist lines too for catching fish, and copy out manuscripts, so that your hand may earn you food and your soul be satisfied with reading. 'Every one that is idle is a prey to vain desires.'² Monasteries in Egypt make it a rule not to take any one who will not work, thinking not so much of the necessities of life as of the safety of men's souls, lest they should be led astray by dangerous imaginings, and be like Jerusalem in her whoredoms, who opened her feet to every chance comer.

When I was a young man, though I was protected by the rampart of the lonely desert, I could not endure against the promptings of sin and the ardent heat of my nature. I tried to crush them by frequent fasting, but my mind was always in a turmoil of imagination. To subdue it I put myself in the hands of one of the brethren who had been a Hebrew before his conversion, and asked him to teach me his language. Thus, after having studied the pointed style of Quintilian, the fluency of Cicero, the weightiness of Fronto, and the gentleness of Pliny, I now began to learn the alphabet again and practise harsh and guttural words. What efforts I spent on that task, what difficulties I had to face, how often I despaired, how often I gave up and then in my eagerness to learn began again, my own knowledge can witness from personal experience and those can testify who were then living with me. I thank the quod de amaro semine litterarum dulces fructus capio.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

13. Dicam et aliud, quid in Aegyptio viderim. Graecus adulescens erat in coenobio, qui nulla continentiae, nulla operis magnitudine flammam poterat carnis extinguere. Hunc periclitantem pater monasterii hac arte servavit. Imperat cuidam viro gravi, ut iurgiis atque conviciis insectaretur hominem et post inrogatam iniuriam primus veniret ad querimonias. Vocati testes pro eo loquebantur, qui contumeliam fecerat. Flere ille contra mendacium; nullus alius credere veritati, solus pater defensionem suam callide opponere, ne 'abundantiori tristitia absorberetur frater.' Quid multa? Ita annus ductus est, quo expleto interrogatus adulescens super cogitationibus pristinis, an adhuc molestiae aliquid sustineret: 'Papae,' inquit, 'vivere non licet, et fornicari libet?' Hic si solus fuisset, quo adiutore superasset?

14. Philosophi saeculi solent amorem veterem amore novo quasi clavum clavo expellere. Quod et Asuero septem principes fecere Persarum, ut Vasti reginae desiderium aliarum puellarum amore conpescerent. Illi vitium vitio peccatumque peccato remediuntur, nos amore virtutum vitia superemus. 'Declina,' ait, 'a malo et fac bonum; quaerere pacem et persequere eam.' Nisi oderimus malum, bonum amare non possumus. Quin potius faciendum est bonum, ut declinemus a malo; pax quaerenda, ut bella fugiamus. Nee sufficit eam

¹ 2 Corinthians, ii. 7.

² Esther, ii. 2.

³ Psalm xxxiv. 14.

LETTER CXXV

Lord that from a bitter seed of learning I am now plucking sweet fruits.

I will tell you of another thing that I saw in Egypt. There was a young Greek in a community there, who could not quench the fires of the flesh by any continence or any labour however severe. In his danger the father of the monastery saved him by the following device. He instructed a grave elder to pursue the young man with revilings and abuse, and after having thus insulted him to be the first to lay a complaint. When witnesses were called they always spoke in favour of the aggressor. The youth could only weep at the false charge, but no one believed the truth. The father alone would cleverly put in a plea on his behalf, lest 'our brother be swallowed up by overmuch sorrow.'¹ To cut a long tale short, a whole year passed in this way, and at the end the youth was asked about his former imaginings, whether they still troubled him. 'Good heavens,' he replied, 'how can I want to fornicate, when I am not allowed even to live?' If he had been alone, by whose help could he have overcome temptation?

Worldly philosophers are wont to drive out an old passion by a new one, as you drive out an old nail by hammering in another. This is what the seven princes of Persia did to Ahasuerus, when they assuaged his regret for queen Vashti by suggesting an amour with other maidens.² They cure fault by fault and sin by sin: we must overcome vice by love of virtue. 'Depart from evil,' says the Scripture, 'and do good; seek peace and pursue it.'³ If we do not hate evil we cannot love good. Nay more, we must do good if we are to depart from evil: we must seek peace, if we are to avoid wars. Nor is it quaerere, nisi inventam fugientemque omni studio persequamur, ' quae exsuperat omnem sensum,' in qua habitatio Dei est dicente propheta: ' Et factus est in pace locus eius,' pulchreque persecutio pacis dicitur iuxta illud apostoli: ' Hospitalitatem persequentes,' ut non levi citatoque sermone et—ut ita loquar—summis labiis hospites invitemus, sed toto mentis ardore teneamus quasi auferentes secum de lucro nostro atque compendio.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

15. Nulla ars absque magistro discitur. Etiam muta animalia et ferarum greges ductores sequuntur suos. In apibus principes sunt; grues unam sequuntur ordine litterato. Imperator unus, iudex unus provinciae. Roma, ut condita est, duos fratres simul habere reges non potuit et parricidio dedicatur. In Rebeccae utero Esau et Iacob bella gesserunt. Singuli ecclesiarum episcopi, singuli archipresbyteri, singuli archidiaconi et omnis ordo ecclesiasticus suis rectoribus nititur. In navi unus gubernator, in domo unus dominus; in quamvis grandi exercitu unius signum expectatur. Et ne plura replicando fastidium legenti faciam, per haec omnia ad illud tendit oratio, ut doceam te non tuo arbitrio dimittendum, sed vivere debere in monasterio sub unius disciplina patris consortioque multorum, ut ab alio discas humilitatem, ab alio patientiam, hic te silentium, ille doceat mansuetudinem, non facias, quod vis, comedas,

¹ Philippians, iv. 7.

² Psalm lxxvi. 2. (Septuagint lxxv. 2.)

³ Romans, xii. 13.

⁴ Genesis, xxv. 22.

LETTER CXXV

enough merely to seek peace; when we have found it and it flies from us, we must pursue with all our might. 'Peace passeth all understanding,'¹ and in it is God's dwelling. As the prophet says: 'In peace also is His habitation.'² The pursuing of peace is a fine metaphor, and is like the saying of the apostle, 'pursuing hospitality.'³ Our invitation to guests should not be a mere light form of words, spoken, if I may use the phrase, with the surface of the lips; we should be as eager to detain them as if they were robbers carrying off our savings.

No art is learned without a master. Even dumb animals and herds of wild beasts follow leaders of their own. Bees have rulers, and cranes fly behind one of their number in the shape of the letter Y. There is one emperor, and one judge for each province. When Rome was founded it could not have two brothers reigning together, and so it was inaugurated by an act of fratricide. Esau and Jacob warred against one another in Rebecca's womb.⁴ Each church has but one bishop, one arch-presbyter, one archdeacon; every ecclesiastical order is subjected to its own rulers. There is one pilot in a ship, one master in a house; and however large an army may be, the soldiers await one man's signal. I will not weary my reader with further repetition, for the purpose of all these examples is simply this. I want to show you that you had better not be left to your own discretion, but should rather live in a monastery under the control of one father and with many companions. From one of them you may learn humility, from another patience; this one will teach you silence, that one meekness. You will not do what you yourself wish; you will eat what you are ordered; quod iuberis, habeas, quantum acceperis, vestiarius, quod acceperis, operis tui pensa persolvas, subiciaris, cui non vis, lassus ad stratum venias ambulansque dormites, necdum expleto somno surgere compellaris, dicas psalmum in ordine tuo—in quo non dulcedo vocis sed mentis affectus quaeritur scribente apostolo: ‘Psallam spiritu, psallam et mente,’ et: ‘Cantantes in cordibus vestris’: legerat enim esse praeceptum: ‘psallite sapienter’—servias fratribus, hospitem laves pedes, passus iniuriam taceas, praepositum monasterii timeas ut dominum, diligas ut parentem, credas tibi salutare, quidquid ille praeceperit, nec de maioris sententia iudices, cuius officii est oboedire et implere, quae iussa sunt, dicente Moyse: ‘Audi, Israhel, et tace.’ Tantis negotiis occupatus nullis vacabis cogitationibus et, dum ab alio transis ad aliud opusque succedit operi, illud solum mente retinebis, quod agere compelleris.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

16. Vidi ego quosdam, qui, postquam renuntiavere saeculo—vestimentis dumtaxat et vocis professione, non rebus—nihil de pristina conversatione mutarunt. Res familiaris magis aucta quam inmutata est; eadem ministeria servulorum, idem apparatus convivii; in vitro et patella fictili aurum come-

¹ 1 Corinthians, xiv. 15.

³ Psalm xlvii. 7.

² Ephesians, v. 19.

⁴ Deuteronomy, xxvii. 9.

LETTER CXXV

you will take what you are given; you will wear the dress allotted to you; you will perform a set amount of work; you will be subordinate to some one you do not like; you will come to bed worn out with weariness and fall asleep as you walk about. Before you have had your fill of rest, you will be forced to get out of bed and take your turn in psalm-singing, a task where real emotion is a greater requisite than a sweet voice. The apostle says: 'I will pray with the spirit and I will pray with the understanding also,'¹ and, again: 'Make melody in your hearts.'² He had read the precept: 'Sing ye praises with understanding.'³ You will serve the brethren; you will wash the feet of guests; if you suffer wrong you will say nothing; the superior of the monastery you will fear as a master and love as a father. Whatever precepts he gives you will believe to be wholesome for you. You will not pass judgment upon your elder's decisions, for it is your duty to be obedient and carry out orders, according to the words of Moses: 'Keep silence and hearken, O Israel.'⁴ You will be so busy with all these tasks that you will have no time for vain imaginings, and while you pass from one occupation to the next you will only have in mind the work that you are being forced to do.

I myself have seen some men who after they had renounced the world—in garb, at least, and in verbal professions, but not in reality—changed nothing of their former mode of life. Their household has increased rather than diminished; they have the same number of servants to wait upon them and keep the same elaborate table; though they drink from glass and eat from plates of earthenware, it

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

ditur et inter turbas et examina ministrorum nomen sibi vindicant solitarii. Qui vero pauperes sunt et tenui substantiola videnturque sibi scioli, pomparum ferculis similes procedunt ad publicum, ut caninam exercean facundiam. Alii sublatis in altum humeris et intra se nescio quid cornicantes stupentibus in terram oculis tumentia verba trutinantur, ut, si praekonem addideris, putes incedere praefecturam. Sunt qui, humore cellularum inmoderatisque ieiuniis, taedio solitudinis ac nimia lectione, dum diebus ac noctibus auribus suis personant, vertuntur in μελαγχολίαν et Hippocratis magis fomentis quam nostris monitis indigent. Plerique artibus et negotiationibus pristinis carere non possunt mutatisque nominibus institorum eadem exercent commercia, non victum et vestitum, quod apostolus praecipit, sed maiora quam saeculi homines emolumenta sectantes. Et prius quidem ab aedilibus, quos ἀγορανόμους Graeci appellant, vendentium cohercebatur rabies nec erat inpune peccatum, nunc autem sub religionis titulo exercentur iniusta compendia et honor nominis Christiani fraudem magis facit quam patitur. Quodque pudet dicere, sed necesse est, ut saltem sic ad nostrum erubescamus dedecus, publice extendentes manus pannis aurum tegimus et contra omnium opinionem plenis sacculis morimur divites, qui quasi pauperes viximus. Tibi, cum in monasterio fueris, haec facere non licebit et ¹ Images of the gods were carried on these litters in solemn state.

² The institores were travelling merchants who dealt largely in female finery. Cf. Horace, Odes, III. vi. 302; Ep. XVII. 20.

³ 1 Timothy, vi. 8.

LETTER CXXV

is gold they swallow, and amidst crowds of servants swarming round them they claim the name of hermit. Others, who are poor and of slender means and think themselves full of wisdom, pass through the streets like the pageants in a procession,¹ to practise a cynical eloquence. Others shrug their shoulders and croak indistinctly to themselves, and with glassy eyes fixed upon the earth they balance swelling words upon their tongues, so that if you add a crier, you might think it was his excellency the governor who was coming along. Some, too, by reason of damp cells and immoderate fasts, added to the weariness of solitude and excessive study, have a singing in their ears day and night, and turning melancholy mad need Hippocrates' fomentations more than any advice of mine. Very many cannot forgo their previous trades and occupations, and though they change its name carry on the same pedlar's² traffic as before, seeking for themselves not food and raiment, as the apostle directs,³ but greater profits than men of the world expect. In the past the mad greed of sellers was checked by the aediles, or as the Greeks call them, market-inspectors, and men could not cheat with impunity: to-day under the cloak of religion such men hoard up unjust gains, and the good name of Christianity does more wrong than it suffers. I am ashamed to say it, but I must—at least we ought to blush at our disgrace—we hold out our hands in public for alms while we have gold hidden under our rags, and to every one's surprise after living as poor men we die rich with purses well filled. In your case, since you will be in a monastery, such conduct will not be allowed; habits will gradually grow on you, and finally you will do of inollescente paulatim consuetudine, quod primum cogebaris, velle incipies et delectabit te labor tuus oblitusque praeteritorum semper priora sectaberis nequaquam considerans, quid alii mali faciant, sed quid boni tu facere debeas.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

17. Neque vero peccantium ducaris multitudine et te pereuntium turba sollicitet, ut tacitus cogites: 'Quid? ergo omnes peribunt, qui in urbibus habitant? Ecce illi fruuntur suis rebus, ministrant ecclesiis, adeunt balneas, unguenta non spernunt et tamen in omnium flore versantur.' Ad quod et ante respondi et nunc breviter respondebo: me in praesenti opusculo non de clericis disputare, sed monachum instituere. Sancti sunt clerici et omnium vita laudabilis. Ita ergo age et vive in monasterio, ut clericus esse merearis, ut adulescentiam tuam nulla sorde conmacules, ut ad altare Christi quasi de thalamo virgo procedas et habeas de foris bonum testimonium feminaeque nomen tuum noverint, vultum nesciant. Cum ad perfectam aetatem veneris, si tamen vita comes fuerit, et te vel populus vel pontifex civitatis in clerum adlegerit, agito, quae clerici sunt, et inter ipsos sectare meliores, quia in omni condicione et gradu optimis mixta sunt pessima.

18. Ne ad scribendum cito prosilias et levi ducaris insania. Multo tempore disce, quod doceas. Ne your own accord what was at first a matter of compulsion; you will take pleasure in your labours, and forgetting what is behind you will reach out to that which is before; you will not think at all of the evil that others do, but only of the good which it is your duty to perform.

¹ Cf. p. 412, n. 1.

LETTER CXXV

Do not be influenced by the number of those that sin, or disturbed by the host of the perishing, so as to have the unspoken thought: 'What? Shall all then perish who live in cities? Behold, they enjoy their property, they serve in the churches, they frequent the baths, they do not disdain unguents, and yet they flourish and are universally respected.' To such reasonings I have replied before, and will now do so briefly again, merely remarking that in this present short treatise I am not discussing the behaviour of the clergy, but laying down rules for a monk.¹ The clergy are holy men, and in every case their life is worthy of praise. Go then and so live in your monastery that you may deserve to be a clergyman, that you may keep your youth free from all stain of defilement, and that you may come forth to Christ's altar as a virgin steps from her bower; that you may be well spoken of abroad, and that women may know your reputation but not your looks. When you come to ripe years, that is, if life be granted you, and have been appointed as a clergyman either by the people or by the bishop of the city, then act as becomes a cleric, and among your colleagues choose the better men as your models. In every rank and condition of life the very bad is mingled with the very good.

Do not rashly leap into authorship, and be led by light-headed madness. Spend years in learning

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

credas laudatoribus tuis, immo inrisoribus aurem ne libenter adcommodes, qui cum te adulationibus foverint et quodam modo inpotem mentis effecerint, si subito respexeris, aut ciconiarum deprehendas post te colla curvari aut manu auriculas agitari asini aut aestuantem canis protendi linguam. Nulli detrahas nec in eo te sanctum putes, si ceteros laceres. Accusamus saepe, quod facimus, et contra nosmet ipsos disertis in nostra vitia invehimur muti de eloquentibus iudicantes. Testudineo Grunnius incedebat ad loquendum gradu et per intervalla quaedam vix pauca verba capiebat, ut eum putares singultire, non proloqui. Et tamen, cum mensa posita librorum exposuisset struem, adducto supercilio contractisque naribus ac fronte rugata duobus digitulis concrepabat hoc signo ad audiendum discipulos provocans. Tunc nugas meras fundere et adversum singulos declamare; criticum diceres esse Longinum censorumque Romanae facundiae notare, quem vellet, et de senatu doctorum excludere. Hic bene nummatus plus placebat in prandiis. Nec mirum, qui multos inescare solitus erat factoque cuneo circumstrepentium garrulorum procedebat in publicum intus Nero, foris Cato, totus ambiguus, ut ex contrariis diversisque naturis unum monstrum novamque bestiam diceres esse compactum iuxta illud poeticum :

¹ Closely copied from Persius I. 58-60.

² A character in the mime Porci Testamentum : here the reference is to Rufinus, once Jerome's friend but afterwards for theological reasons his bitter enemy. Cf. App. II, p. 498 ff.

LETTER CXXV

what you are to teach. Do not believe your flatterers, or rather do not lend an ear too readily to mockers; such men will warm your heart with fulsome praise and make you in a fashion lose control of your mind, but if you turn round quickly you will see them making stork-necks behind your back, or flapping their hands like a donkey's ears, or putting out the tongue like a mad dog.¹ Never speak evil of any man or think that holiness consists in attacking others. Often we accuse our neighbour of what we do ourselves, and eloquently inveigh against vices of which we too are guilty, dumb men trying to criticize orators. When the Grunter² came forward to address an audience he used to advance first at a snail's pace and utter a few words at such long intervals that you might have thought that he was gasping for breath rather than making a speech. He would put his table in position and arrange on it a pile of books, and then frowning and drawing in his nose and wrinkling his forehead he would call his pupils to attention with a snap of his fingers. After this prelude he would pour out a flood of nonsense, declaiming against individuals so fiercely that you might imagine him to be a critic like Longinus or the most eloquent of Roman censors, and putting a black mark against any one he pleased to exclude him from the senate of the learned. He had plenty of money, and was more attractive at his dinner-parties. And no wonder; he hooked many with this bait, and gathering a wedge of noisy chatterers about him he would make public progress, Nero at home, Cato abroad, a complete puzzle, so that you might call him one monster made up of different and opposing natures, a strange beast like that of which

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘Prima leo, postrema draco, media ipsa chimaera.’

19. Numquam ergo tales videas nec huiusce modi hominibus adpliceris, ne declines cor tuum in verba malitiae et audias: ‘Sedens adversus fratrem tuum detrahebas et adversus filium matris tuae ponebas scandalum,’ et iterum: ‘Filii hominum dentes eorum arma et sagittae,’ et alibi: ‘Molliti sunt sermones eius super oleum et ipsi sunt iacula,’ et apertius in Ecclesiaste: ‘Si mordeat serpens in silentio, sic, qui fratri suo occulte detrahit.’ Sed dicis: ‘Ipse non detraho, aliis loquentibus facere quid possum?’ ‘Ad excusandas excusationes in peccatis’ ista praetendimus. Christus arte non luditur. Nequaquam mea, sed apostoli sententia est: ‘Nolite errare; Deus non inridetur.’ Ille in corde, nos videmus in facie. Salomon loquitur in Proverbiis: ‘Ventus aquilo dissipat nubes et vultus tristis linguas detrahentium.’ Sicut enim sagitta, si mittatur contra duram materiam, nonnumquam in mittentem revertitur et vulnerat vulnerantem illudque completur: ‘Facti sunt mihi in arcum pravum,’ et alibi: ‘Qui mittit in altum lapidem, recidet in caput eius,’ ita detractor, cum tristem faciem viderit audientis, immo ne audientis quidem, sed obturantis aures suas, ne audiat iudicium sanguinis, ilico conticescit, pallet vultus, haerent labia, saliva siccatur. Unde idem vir

¹ Lucretius, V. 905, describing the Chimaera.

² Psalm l. 20.

³ Psalm lvii. 4.

⁴ Psalm lv. 21.

⁵ Ecclesiastes, x. 11. R.V. margin.

⁶ Psalm cxli. 4.

⁷ Galatians, vi. 7.

⁸ Proverbs, xxv. 23.

⁹ Psalm lxxviii. 57.

¹⁰ Ecclesiasticus, xxvii. 25.

¹¹ Cf. Isaiah, xxxiii. 15 (of the righteous man): qui obterat aures ne audiat sanguinem.

LETTER CXXV

the poet tells us: 'In front a lion, behind a dragon, in the middle a very goat.'¹

Therefore you must never look at men such as he was, or have any intercourse with fellows of this kind, lest you turn your heart aside unto words of evil and hear the words: 'Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son,'² and again: 'The sons of men whose teeth are spears and arrows,'³ and in another place: 'His words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords,'⁴ and more clearly in Ecclesiastes: 'Surely the serpent will bite where there is no enchantment, and the slanderer is no better.'⁵ But you may say: 'I myself am not given to detraction, but if other people say things, what can I do?' Such a plea is only an excuse to 'practise wicked works with men that work iniquity.'⁶ Christ is not deceived by such a trick. It is not I but the apostle who says: 'Be not deceived; God is not mocked.'⁷ God looks upon the heart, we only see the face. In the Proverbs Solomon says: 'As the north wind driveth away rain, so doth an angry countenance a back-biting tongue.'⁸ As an arrow, if it be aimed at a hard substance, sometimes rebounds upon the archer and wounds the wounder—and so the word is fulfilled: 'They were turned aside like a deceitful bow,'⁹ and in another place: 'Whoso casteth a stone on high casteth it on his own head'¹⁰—so when a slanderer sees that his hearer is looking surly, and so far from listening is stopping up his ears so that he may not hearken to the blood judgment,¹¹ he for his part at once falls silent, his face turns pale, his lips stick fast, and the moisture dries up within his mouth. Wherefore the same wise man says: 'Meddle not sapiens: 'Cum detractoribus,' inquit, 'non commiscearis, quoniam repente veniet perditio eorum; et ruinam utriusque quis novit?' Tam scilicet eius, qui loquitur, quam illius, qui audit loquentem. Veritas angulos non amat nec quaerit susurrones. Timotheo dicitur: 'Adversus presbyterum accusationem cito ne receperis. Peccantem autem coram omnibus argue, ut et ceteri metum habeant.' Non est facile de perfecta aetate credendum, quam et vita praeterita defendit et honorat vocabulum dignitatis, verum, qui homines sumus et interdum contra annorum maturitatem puerorum vitiis labimur, si me vis corrigi delinquentem, aperte increpa, tantum ne occulte mordeas: 'Corripiet me iustus in misericordia et increpabit me, oleum autem peccatoris non inpinguet caput meum. Quem enim diligit dominus, corripit, flagellat autem omnium filium, quem recipit.' Et per Esaiam clamat Deus: 'Populus meus, qui beatos vos dicunt, seducunt vos et semitas pedum vestrorum supplantant.' Quid enim mihi prodest, si aliis mala mea referas, si me nesciente peccatis meis, immo detractionibus tuis alium vulneres et, cum certatim omnibus narres, sic singulis loquaris, quasi nulli alteri dixeris? Hoc est non me emendare, sed vitio tuo satisfacere. Praecipit dominus peccantes in nos argui debere secreto vel adhibito teste et, si audire noluerint, referri ad ecclesiam habendosque in malo pertinaces quasi ethnicos et publicanos.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Proverbs, xxiv. 21 Vulgate.

² 1 Timothy, v. 19 (slightly altered).

³ Psalm cxli. 5. (Septuagint cxl. 5.)

⁴ Hebrews, xii. 6.

⁵ Isaiah, iii. 12 (Septuagint).

LETTER CXXV

with them that are given to detraction: for their calamity shall rise suddenly; and who knoweth the ruin of them both? ¹—that is, the ruin of him who speaks and him who listens. Truth does not love corners nor does she seek out whisperers. To Timothy it is said: ‘Against an elder receive not an accusation suddenly; but him that sinneth rebuke before all, that others also may fear.’ ² When a man is of ripe years you should not readily believe evil of him; his past life is a defence and so is the honourable title of elder. Still, as we are but men and sometimes in spite of our mature age fall into the sins of youth, if I do wrong and you wish to correct me, rebuke me openly and do not indulge in secret backbiting. ‘Let the righteous smite me, it shall be a kindness, and let him reprove me; but let not the oil of the sinner enrich my head.’ ³ ‘Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.’ ⁴ By the mouth of Isaiah God makes proclamation: ‘O my people, they who call you happy cause you to err and destroy the way of your paths.’ ⁵ What benefit is it to me if you tell other people of my misdeeds, if without my knowledge you hurt another by the story of my sins or rather by your slanders, if while really eager to tell your tale to all you speak to each individual as though he were your only confidant? Such conduct seeks not my improvement but the satisfaction of your own vice. The Lord gave commandment that those who sin against us should be arraigned privately or else in the presence of a witness, and that if they refuse to listen they should be brought before the Church, and those who persist in wickedness should be regarded as heathens and publicans.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

20. Haec expressius loquor, ut adulescentem meum et linguae et aurium prurigne liberem, ut renatum in Christo sine ruga et macula quasi pudicam virginem exhibeam sanctamque tam mente quam corpore, ne solo nomine gloriatur et absque oleo bonorum operum extincta lampade excludatur ab sponso. Habes ibi sanctum doctissimumque pontificem Proculum, qui viva et praesenti voce nostras scidulas superet cotidianisque tractatibus iter tuum dirigat nee patiatur te in partem alteram declinando viam relinquere regiam, per quam Israhel ad terram repromissionis properans se transiturum esse promittit. Atque utinam exaudiatur vox ecclesiae conplorantis: 'Domine, pacem da nobis; omnia enim reddidisti nobis.' Utinam, quod renuntiamus saeculo, voluntas sit, non necessitas, et paupertas habeat expetita gloriam, non inlata cruciatum. Ceterum iuxta miserias huius temporis et ubique gladios saevientes satis dives est, qui pane non indiget, nimium potens, qui servire non cogitur. Sanctus Exsuperius, Tolosae episcopus, viduae Sareptensis imitator, esuriens paseit alios et ore pallente ieiuniis fame torquetur aliena omnemque substantiam Christi visceribus erogavit. Nihil illo ditius, qui corpus domini canistro viminco, sanguinem portat vitro, qui avaritiam proiecit e templo, qui absque funiculo et

¹ Bishop of Marseilles.

² Isaiah, xxvi. 12 (Septuagint).

³ Bishop of Toulouse in the beginning of the fifth century, and a friend of Jerome. He lived at Rome before his episcopate (Letter LIV, 11).

⁴ 1 Kings, xvii. 12.

LETTER CXXV

I have spoken thus definitely because I wish to free a young friend of mine from an itching tongue and itching ears, so that I may present him born again in Christ without spot or roughness as a chaste virgin, holy both in body and in mind. I would not have him boast in name alone, or be shut out by the Bridegroom because his lamp has gone out for want of the oil of good works. You have in your town a saintly and most learned prelate, Proculus,¹ and he by the living sound of his voice can do more for you than any pages I can write. By daily homilies he will keep you in the straight path and not suffer you to turn right or left and leave the king's highway, whereby Israel undertakes to pass on its hasty journey to the promised land. May the voice of the Church's supplication be heard: 'Lord, ordain peace for us, for thou also hast wrought all our works for us.'² May our renunciation of the world be a matter of free will and not of necessity! May we seek poverty as a glorious thing, not have it forced upon us as a punishment! However, in our present miseries, with swords raging fiercely all around us, he is rich enough who is not in actual want of bread, he is more powerful than he needs be who is not reduced to slavery. Exuperius,³ the saintly bishop of Toulouse, like the widow of Zarephath feeds others and goes hungry himself.⁴ His face is pale with fasting, but it is the craving of others that torments him, and he has spent all his substance on those that are Christ's flesh. Yet none is richer than he; for in his wicker basket he carries the body of the Lord and in his glass cup His blood. He has driven greed from the temple; without scourge of ropes or chiding words he has overthrown the tables inreparatione vendentium columbas, id est dona Spiritus Sancti, mensas subvertit mammonae et nummulariorum aera dispersit, ut domus Dei domus vocaretur orationis et non latronum spelunca. Huius e vicino sectare vestigia et ceterorum, qui virtutum illius similes sunt, quos sacerdotium et humiliores facit et pauperiores, aut, si perfecta desideras, exi cum Abraham de patria et de cognatione tua et perge, quo nescis. Si habes substantiam, vende et da pauperibus, si non habes, grandi onere liberatus es; nudum Christum nudus sequere. Durum, grande, difficile, sed magna sunt praemia.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

CXXVII

AD PRINCIPIAM VIRGINEM DE VITA SANCTAE MARCELLAE

1. SAEPE et multum flagitas, virgo Christi Principia, ut memoriam sanctae feminae Marcellae litteris recolam et bonum, quo diu frui sumus, etiam ceteris noscendum imitandumque describam. Satisque doleo, quod hortaris ~~sponte~~ ~~currentem~~ et me arbitraris indigere precibus, qui ne tibi quidem in

¹ This letter is really a memoir of Marcella, the noble lady in whose house on the Aventine Jerome used to meet his female disciples while he was living in Rome. The chief facts of her life are given here by Jerome, who concludes with an account of the sack of Rome in A.D. 410. In 408 the Goths, who had been settled in Dalmatia, by Theodosius (379-395), taking advantage of Stilicho's death, marched into Italy under Alaric, and forced Rome to pay ransom. The process was repeated in the next year and in 410 the city was stormed and sacked, although the Goths, who were of mammon of those that sell doves, that is, the gifts of the Holy Spirit; he has scattered the money of the money-changers, so that the house of God might be called a house of prayer and not a den of robbers. Follow closely in his steps and in those of others like him in virtue, men whom their holy office only makes more humble and more poor. Or else, if you desire perfection, go out like Abraham from your native city and your kin, and travel whither you know not. If you have substance, sell it and give it to the poor. If you have none, you are free from a great burden. Naked yourself follow a naked Christ. The task is hard and great and difficult; but great also are the rewards.

LETTER CXXV AND LETTER CXXVII

LETTER CXXVII

TO PRINCIPIA

*Marcella*¹ and the sack of Rome

Written A.D. 412

You have often and earnestly begged me, Principia, virgin of Christ, to honour in writing the memory of that saintly woman Marcella, and to set forth the goodness we so long enjoyed for others to know and imitate. It is, however, something of a grief to me that you should spur a willing horse,² or that you should think I need Christians, spared the churches. Soon afterwards Alaric died in South Italy, his sudden end being used as a warning to Attila in 452 by Leo the Great. For Marcella and her circle, cf. Appendix I.

² A proverb: Cic. Att., xiii. 45. 1: quod me hortaris . . . , currentem tu quidem.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

eius dilectione concedam multoque plus accipiam quam tribuam benefici tantarum recordatione virtutum. Nam ut lucusque reticerem et bienium praeterirem silentio, non fuit dissimulationis, ut male aestimas, sed tristitiae incredibilis, quae ita meum obpressit animum, ut melius iudicarem tacere inpraesentiarum, quam nihil dignum illius laudibus dicere. Neque vero Marcellam tuam, immo meam et, ut verius loquar, nostram, omniumque sanctorum et proprie Romanae urbis inclitum decus, institutis rhetorum praedicabo, ut exponam illustrem familiam, alti sanguinis decus et stemmata per consules et praefectos praetorio decurrentia. Nihil in illa laudabo, nisi quod proprium est et in eo nobiliter, quod opibus et nobilitate contempta facta est paupertate et humilitate nobilior.

2. Orbata patris morte viro quoque post nuptias septimo mense privata est. Cumque eam Cerealis, cuius clarum inter consules nomen est, propter aetatem et antiquitatem familiae et insignem—quod maxime viris placere consuevit—decorem corporis ac insignem temperantiam ambitiosius peteret suasque longaeuus polliceretur divitias et non quasi in uxorem sed quasi in filiam vellet donationem transfundere Albinaque mater tam clarum praesidium viduitati domus ultro appeteret, illa respondit: ‘ Si vellem your entreaties, seeing that I do not yield even to you in love for her. In recording her signal virtues I shall indeed receive more benefit myself than I confer upon others. That I have kept silence up till now, and have allowed two years to pass without speaking, has not been due to any wish to repress my feelings, as you wrongly think, but rather to my incredible grief; which has so overwhelmed my mind that I judged it better to remain silent for the moment than to produce something unworthy of her fame. And even now I shall not follow the rules of rhetoric in praising your, mine, or to speak more truly, our Marcella, the glory of all the saints and peculiarly of the city of Rome. I shall not describe her illustrious household, the splendour of her ancient lineage, and the long series of consuls and praetorian prefects who have been her ancestors. I shall praise nothing in her save that which is her own, the more noble in that, despising wealth and rank, by poverty and lowliness she has won higher nobility.

LETTER CXXVII

On her father's death she was left an orphan, and she also lost her husband seven months after marriage. Thereupon Cercalis, a man of high consular rank, paid her assiduous court, attracted by her youth, her ancient family, her modest character, and those personal charms which always find such favour with men. Being an old man he promised her all his money, and offered to make over his fortune as though she were his daughter, not his wife. Her mother Albina was excessively anxious to secure so illustrious a protector for the widowed household, but Marcella's answer was this: 'If I wished to nubere et non aeternae me cuperem pudicitiae dedicare, utique maritum quaererem, non hereditatem.' Illoque mandante posse et senes diu vivere et iuvenes cito mori eleganter lusit: 'Iuvenis quidem potest cito mori, sed senex diu vivere non potest.' Qua sententia repudiatus exemplo ceteris fuit, ut eius nuptias desperarent. Legimus in evangelio secundum Lucam: 'Et erat Anna prophetissa, filia Phanuhelis, de tribu Aser et haec provectae aetatis in diebus plurimis. Vixeratque cum viro annis septem a virginitate sua et erat vidua annis octoginta quattuor nec recedebat de templo ieiuniis et obsecrationibus serviens nocte ac die.' Nec mirum, si videre meruit salvatorem, quem tanto labore quaerebat. Conferamus septem annos septem mensibus, sperare Christum et tenere, natum confiteri et in crucifixum credere, parvulum non negare et virum gaudere regnantem: non facio ullam inter sanctas feminas differentiam, quod nonnulli inter sanctos viros et ecclesiarum principes stulte facere consuerunt, sed illo tendit adsertio, ut, quarum unus labor, unum et praemium sit.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Difficile est in maledica civitate et in urbe, in qua orbis quondam populus fuit palmaque vitiorum, si honestis detraherent et pura ac munda macularent, non aliquam sinistri rumoris fabulam trahere. Unde marry and did not rather desire to dedicate myself to perpetual chastity, I should in any case look for a husband, not an inheritance.' Cerealis urged that old men might possibly live long and young men die early, but to that she wittily retorted: 'A young man may possibly die early, but an old man cannot possibly live long.' This definite rejection warned other men that they had no hope of winning her as wife. In the Gospel according to Luke we read: 'There was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: she was of great age, and had seen many days; and she had lived with an husband seven years from her virginity; and she was a widow of about fourscore and four years, which departed not from the temple but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.'¹ It is not strange that she earned the vision of the Saviour whom she sought so earnestly. Let us now compare the two cases. Anna was married for seven years, Marcella for seven months. Anna hoped for Christ, Marcella held Him fast. Anna confessed Him at his birth, Marcella believed in Him crucified. Anna did not deny the child, Marcella rejoiced in the man as king. I am not drawing distinctions of merit between two saintly women, as some people foolishly do between saintly men and heads of churches. The point of my claim is this; as these two shared one labour so they will gain one reward.

¹ St. Luke, ii. 36.

LETTER CXXVII

In a slander-loving place, and in a city where the people once was the world, and it was the triumph of vice to disparage virtue and to defile all that is pure and clean, it is difficult not to drag along some fables of calumnious gossips. Therefore quasi rem difficillimam ac paene impossibilem optat propheta potius quam praesumit dicens: 'Beati immaculati in via, qui ambulant in lege domini,' immaculatos in via huius appellans saeculi, quos nulla obscena rumoris aura macularit, qui obprobrium non acceperint adversus proximos suos. De quibus et salvator in evangelio: 'Esto,' inquit, 'benivulus'—sive 'bene sentiens'—'de adversario tuo, dum es cum illo in via.' Quis umquam de hac muliere, quod displiceret, audivit, ut crederet? Quis credidit, ut non magis se ipsum malignitatis et infamiae condemnaret? Ab hac primum confusa gentilitas est, dum omnibus patuit, quae esset viduitas Christiana, quam et conscientia et habitu promittebat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

Illae enim solent purpurisso et cerussa ora depingere, sericis nitere vestibus, splendere gemmis, aurum portare cervicibus et auribus perforatis Rubri Maris pretiosissima grana suspendere, flagrare mure, ~~et~~ tandem dominatu virorum se caruisse laetentur quaerantque alios, non quibus iuxta Dei sententiam serviant, sed quibus imperent. Unde et pauperes eligunt, ut nomen tantum virorum habere videantur, qui patienter rivales sustineant, si mussitaverint, ilico prociendi. Nostra vidua talibus usa est vestibus, quibus obstaret frigus, non membra nudaret, aurum usque ad anuli signaculum repudians et magis in ventribus egenorum quam in marsuppiis recondens. Nusquam sine matre, nullum clericorum et mon-it is for a thing difficult and almost impossible that the prophet hopes rather than thinks 'to win when he says: 'Blessed are the undefiled in the way who walk in the law of the Lord.'¹ He means by the undefiled in this world's way those whom no breath of scandal has sullied and who have incurred no reproach from their neighbours. So too the Saviour in the Gospel says: 'Agree with [or be kindly to] thine adversary whilst thou art in the way with him.'² Whoever heard anything displeasing about Marcella that deserved belief? Who that believed such a tale did not rather convict himself of malice and backbiting? She put the Gentiles to confusion by showing to all what sort of thing that Christian widowhood is which she revealed in every thought and look.

¹ Psalm cxix. 1.

² St. Matthew, v. 25.

LETTER CXXVII

Gentile widows are wont to paint their faces with rouge and white lead, to flaunt in silk dresses, to deck themselves in gleaming jewels, to wear gold necklaces, to hang from their pierced ears the costliest Red Sea pearls, and to reek of musk. Rejoicing that they have at length escaped from a husband's dominion, ^{sc 170} they look about for a new mate, intending not to yield him obedience, as God ordained, but to be his lord and master. With this object they choose poor men, husbands only in name, who must patiently put up with rivals, and if they murmur can be kicked out on the spot. Our widow, on the other hand, wore clothes that were meant to keep out the cold, not to reveal her bare limbs. Even a gold signet ring she rejected, preferring to store her money in the stomachs of the needy rather than hide it in a purse. Nowhere would she go without her mother, never would she interview without achorum—quod amplae domus interdum exigebat necessitas—vidit absque arbitris. Semper in comitatu suo virgines ac viduas et ipsas graves feminas habuit sciens ex lascivia puellarum saepe de dominarum moribus iudicari et, qualis quaeque sit, talium consortio delectari.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Divinarum scripturarum ardor incredibilis, semperque cantabat: 'In corde meo abscondi eloquia tua, ut non peccem tibi,' et illud de perfecto viro: 'Et in lege domini voluntas eius et in lege eius meditabitur die ac nocte,' meditationem legis non replicando, quae scripta sunt, ut Iudaeorum aestimant Pharisaei, sed in opere intellegens iuxta illud apostolicum: 'Sive comeditis sive bibitis sive quid agitis, omnia in gloriam domini facientes' et prophetae verba dicentis: 'A mandatis tuis intellexi,' ut, postquam mandata complisset, tunc se sciret mereri intelligentiam scripturarum. Quod et alibi legimus: 'Quia coepit Iesus facere et docere.' Erubescit enim quamvis praeclara doctrina, quam propria reprehendit conscientia, frustra que lingua praedicat paupertatem et docet elemosynas, qui Croesi divitiis tumet vilique opertus palliolo pugnat contra tineas vestium sericarum. Moderata ieiunia, carnum abstinencia, vini odor magis quam gustus propter sto-

¹ Psalm cxix. 11.

³ I Corinthians, x. 31.

⁵ Acts, i. 1.

² Psalm i. 2.

⁴ Psalm cxix. 104.

LETTER CXXVII

witnesses one of the monks, or clergy, which was often necessary for the needs of her large household. Always her retinue consisted of virgins and widows, and they were all staid women; for she knew that a saucy maid is a reflection on her mistress' character, and that women usually prefer the company of people like themselves. Her ardent love for God's Scriptures surpasses all belief. She was for ever singing: 'Thy words have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee';¹ and also the passage about the perfect man: 'His delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law he doth meditate day and night.'² Meditation in the law meant for her not a mere reperusal of the Scriptures, as the Jewish Pharisees think, but a carrying it out in action. She obeyed the apostle's command: 'Whether therefore ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God';³ and also the words of the prophet: 'Through thy precepts I have got understanding.'⁴ She knew that only when she had fulfilled those precepts would she deserve to understand the Scriptures. So we read in another place 'that Jesus began both to do and teach.'⁵ However fine a man's teaching may be, it is put to the blush when his own conscience reproves him; and it is in vain that his tongue preaches poverty and teaches almsgiving, if he himself is swollen with the wealth of a Croesus, and though he wears a coarse cloak fights to keep the moths from the silken robes in his cupboard.

Marcella practised fasting, but in moderation; and she abstained from eating meat. The scent of wine was more familiar to her than the taste, for she drank it only for her stomach's sake and her machum et frequentes infirmitates. Raro proeedebat ad publicum et maxime nobilium matronarum vitabat domus, ne cogeretur videre, quod contempserat, apostolorum et martyrum basilicas secretis celebrans orationibus et quae populorum frequentiam declinarent. Matri in tantum obocdiens, ut interdum faceret, quod nolebat. Nam cum illa suum diligeret sanguinem et absque filiis ac nepotibus vellet in fratris liberos universa conferri, ista pauperes eligebat et tamen matri contraire non poterat monilia et, quicquid supellectilis fuit, divitibus peritura concedens magisque volens pecuniam perdere quam parentis animum contristare.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Nulla eo tempore nobilium feminarum noverat Romae propositum monachorum nec audebat propter rei novitatem ignominiosum, ut tunc putabatur, et vile in populis nomen adsumere. Haec ab Alexandrinis sacerdotibus papaque Athanasio et postea Petro, qui persecutionem Arrianae hereseos declinantes quasi ad tutissimum communionis suae portum Roman confugerant, vitam beati Antonii adhuc tunc viventis monasteriaque in Thebaide Pachumii et virginum ac viduarum didicit disciplinam nec erubuit profiteri, quod Christo placere cognoverat. Hanc multos post annos imitata est Sophronia et aliae, quibus rectissime illud Ennianum aptari potest:

¹ 1 Timothy, v. 23.

² For Athanasius see F. A. Wright, Later Greek Literature, pp. 331-333. Peter succeeded him at Alexandria. For "Pope" cf. p. 308, n. 2.

LETTER CXXVII

frequent infirmities.¹ She seldom appeared in public and carefully avoided the houses of ladies of rank, that she might not be forced to see there what she herself had rejected; but she frequently visited the churches of the apostles and martyrs for quiet prayer, avoiding the people's throng. To her mother she was so obedient that occasionally she did for her sake things that went against her own inclination. For example, Albina was devoted to her own kinsfolk, and wished to leave all her property to her brother's children, cutting out her sons and grandsons: Marcella would have preferred to give it to the poor, but still she could not go against her mother, and handed over her necklaces and other effects to people already rich for them to squander. She chose rather to see money lost than to vex her mother's feelings.

At that time no great lady in Rome knew anything of the monastic life, nor ventured to call herself a nun. The thing itself was strange and the name was commonly accounted ignominious and degrading. It was from some priests of Alexandria and from Pope Athanasius² and from Peter afterwards, who to escape the persecution of the Arian heretics had all fled to Rome as being the safest refuge for their communion, that Marcella was told of the life of the blessed Antony, then still in this world, and of the monasteries founded by Pachumius in the Thebaid, and of the discipline laid down there for virgins and widows. She was not ashamed to profess a life which she knew was pleasing to Christ; and many years later her example was followed by Sophronia and by some other ladies, to whom the lines of Ennius may most fitly be applied:

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

‘ Utinam ne in nemore Pelio.’ Huius amicitiiis fruita est Paula venerabilis, in huius nutrita cubiculo Eustochium, virginitatis decus, ut facilis aestimatio sit, qualis magistra, ubi tales discipulae.

Rideat forsitan infidelis lector me in muliercularum laudibus inmorari: qui si recordetur sanctas feminas, comites domini salvatoris, quae ministrabant ei de sua substantia, et tres Marias stantes ante crucem Mariamque proprie Magdalenen, quae ob sedulitatem et ardorem fidei ‘ turritae ’ nomen accepit et prima ante apostolos Christum videre meruit resurgentem, se potius superbiae quam nos condemnabit ineptiarum, qui virtutes non sexu sed animo iudicamus. Unde et Iesus Iohannem evangelistam amabat plurimum, qui propter generis nobilitatem erat notus pontifici et Iudaeorum insidias non timebat, in tantum, ut Petrum introduceret in atrium et staret solus apostolorum ante crucem matremque salvatoris in sua reciperet, ut hereditatem virginis domini virginem matrem filius virgo susciperet.

6. Annis igitur plurimis sic suam transegit aetatem, ut ante se vetulam cerneret, quam adolescentulam fuisse meminisset, laudans illud Platonicum, qui philosophiam meditationem mortis esse dixisset. Unde et noster apostolus: ‘ Cotidie morior per vestram salutem,’ et dominus iuxta antiqua exemplaria: ‘ Nisi quis tulerit crucem suam cotidie et secutus

¹ The phrase, used here as an expression of regret for the loss of two noble women, comes from the opening lines of Ennius’ translation of the Medea (Ennius, Medea, fr. 1: utinam ne in nemore Pelio securibus | Caesa accidisset abieгна ad terram trabes).

² Magdala means ‘tower.’ ³ St. John, xviii. 15–16.

⁴ Plato, Phaedo, 67. E. τῷ ὄντι ἄρα . . . οἱ ὀρθῶς φιλοσοφοῦντες ἀποθνήσκουσιν μελετῶσιν.

⁵ 1 Corinthians, xv. 31.

LETTER CXXVII

‘ Would that ne’er in Pelion’s woods ! ’¹

Her friendship was also enjoyed by the revered Paula, and in her cell that paragon of virgins Eustochium was trained. Such pupils as these make it easy for us to judge the character of their teacher.

Those unbelievers who read me may perhaps smile to find me lingering over the praises of weak women. But if they will recall how holy women attended Our Lord and Saviour and ministered to Him of their substance, and how the three Marys stood before the cross, and particularly how Mary of Magdala,² called ‘ of the tower ’ because of her earnestness and ardent faith, was privileged to see the rising Christ first even before the apostles, they will convict themselves of pride rather than me of folly, who judge of virtue not by the sex but by the mind. Therefore it was that Jesus loved the evangelist John most of all; for he was of noble birth and known to the high priest, but he feared the Jews’ plottings so little that he brought Peter into the priest’s palace,³ and was the only apostle who stood before the cross and took the Saviour’s mother to his own home, a virgin son receiving the Virgin Mother as a legacy from Our Virgin Lord.

So Marcella lived her life for many years, and found herself old before she ever remembered that once she had been young, approving Plato’s saying, who declared that philosophy is a preparation for death.⁴ Wherefore our own apostle also says: ‘ For your salvation I die daily.’⁵ So Our Lord too, according to the ancient copies, said: ‘ Whosoever doth not bear his cross daily and come after me

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

fuerit me, non potest meus esse discipulus,' multoque ante per prophetam Spiritus Sanctus: 'Propter te mortificamur tota die, aestimati sumus ut oves oecisionis' et post multas aetates illa sententia: 'Memento semper diem mortis et numquam peccabis,' disertissimique praeceptum satirici:

'Vive memor leti, fugit hora, hoc, quod loquor, inde est.'

Sic ergo—ut dicere coeperamus—aetatem duxit et vixit, ut semper se crederet esse morituram. Sic induta est vestibus, ut meminisset sepulchri, offerens hostiam rationabilem, vivam, placentem Deo.

7. Denique, cum et me Romam cum sanctis pontificibus Paulino et Epiphanio ecclesiastica traxisset necessitas—quorum alter Antiochenam Syriae, alter Salaminiam Cypri rexit ecclesiam—et verecunde nobiliarum feminarum oculos declinarem, ita egit secundum apostolum 'inportune, oportune,' ut pudorem meum sua superaret industria. Et quia alicuius tunc nominis aestimabar super studio scripturarum, numquam convenit, quin de scripturis aliquid interrogaret nec statim adquiesceret, sed moveret e contrario quaestiones, non ut contenderet, sed ut quaerendo disceret earum solutiones, quas opponi posse intellegebat. Quid in illa virtutum, quid ingenii, quid sanctitatis, quid puritatis inveninerim, vereor dicere, ne fidem credulitatis excedam

¹ St. Luke, xiv. 27.

³ Ecclesiasticus, vii. 36.

⁵ In A. D. 382.

² Psalm xlv. 22.

⁴ Persius, V. 153.

⁶ 2 Timothy, iv. 2.

LETTER CXXVII

cannot be my disciple.'¹ Indeed ages ago the Holy Spirit by the mouth of the prophet declared: 'For thy sake are we killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.'² And again after many generations we have the proverb: 'Remember ever the day of death and you will never go wrong.'³ Lastly there is the satirist's shrewd precept:

'Live thou remembering death, for time flies fast.
This moment's speech I snatch before 'tis past.'⁴

Well then, as I began to say, Marcella in all the days of her life remembered that she must die. Her very dress reminded her of the tomb, and she offered herself as a living sacrifice, reasonable and acceptable unto God.

Lastly, when the needs of the Church brought me also to Rome⁵ in company with the holy pontiffs Paulinus and Epiphanius, directors respectively of the churches of Syrian Antioch and of Salamis in Cyprus, I in my modesty was inclined to avoid the gaze of ladies of rank. But Marcella was so urgent 'both in season and out of season,'⁶ as the apostle says, that her persistence overcame my timidity. At that time I had some repute as a student of the Scriptures, and so she never met me without asking me some question about them, nor would she rest content at once, but would bring forward points on the other side; this, however, was not for the sake of argument, but that by questioning she might learn an answer to such objections as she saw might be raised. What virtue and intellect, what holiness and purity I found in her I am afraid to say, both lest I should exceed the limits of men's belief, and also that I may not et tibi maiorem dolorem incutiam recordanti, quanto bono carueris. Hoc solum dicam, quod, quicquid in nobis longo fuit studio congregatum et meditatione diuturna quasi in naturam versum, hoc illa libavit, hoc didicit atque possedit, ita ut post perfectionem nostram, si aliquo testimonio scripturarum esset oborta contentio, ad illam iudicem pergeretur. Et quia valde prudens erat et noverat illud, quod appellant philosophi τὸ πρέπον, id est decere, quod facias, sic interrogata respondebat, ut etiam sua non sua diceret, sed vel mea vel cuiuslibet alterius, ut et in ipso, quod docebat, se discipulam fateretur—sciebat enim dictum ab apostolo: ‘Docere autem mulieri non permitto’—ne virili sexui et interdum sacerdotibus de obscuris et ambiguis sciscitantibus facere videretur iniuriam.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

8. In nostrum locum statim audivimus te illius adhæsisse consortio et nunquam ab illa ne transversum quidem unguis, ut dicitur, recessisse eadem domo, eodem cubiculo, una usam cubili et omnibus in urbe clarissima notum fieret et te matrem et illam filiam repperisse. Suburbanus ager vobis pro monasterio fuit et rus electum propter solitudinem. Multoque ita vixisti tempore, ut imitatione vestri et conversatione multarum gauderemus Romam factam Hierosolymam. Crebra virginum monasteria, monachorum innumerabilis multitudo, ut pro frequentia increase the pain of your grief by reminding you of the blessings you have lost. 'This only will I say; all that I had gathered together by long study, and by constant meditation made part of my nature, she first sipped, then learned, and finally took for her own. Consequently, after my departure from Rome, if any argument arose concerning the testimony of the Scriptures, it was to her verdict that appeal was made. # She was extremely prudent and always followed the rules of what philosophers call τὸ πρέπον, that is, propriety of conduct. Therefore, even when her answers to questions were her own, she said they came not from her but from me or some one else, admitting herself to be a pupil even when she was teaching—for she knew that the apostle said: 'I do not allow a woman to teach'—¹ so that she might not seem to do a wrong to the male sex, and sometimes even to priests, when they asked questions on obscure and doubtful points.

¹ 1 Timothy, ii. 12.

LETTER CXXVII

I have heard that you at once took my place as her close companion, and that you never left her side even for a finger's breadth, as the saying goes. You lived in the same house, and had the same cell and bed, so that every one in the great city knew that you had found a mother and she a daughter. A farm near Rome was your monastery, the country being chosen because of its loneliness. You lived thus together for a long time, and as many other ladies followed your example and joined your company, I had the joy of seeing Rome become another Jerusalem. Monastic establishments for virgins were founded in many places, and the number of monks in the city surpassed all counting. Indeed, so great was the crowd of God's servants that the servientium Deo, quod prius ignominiae fuerat, esset postea gloriae. Interim absentiam nostri mutuis solabamur adloquiis et, quod carne non poteramus, spiritu reddebamus. Semper se obviare epistulae, superare officii, salutationibus praevenire. Non multum perdebat, quae iugibus sibi litteris iungebatur.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

9. In hac tranquillitate et domini servitute heretica in his provinciis exorta tempestas cuncta turbavit et in tantam rabiem concitata est, ut nec sibi nec ulli bonorum parceret. Et quasi parum esset hic universa movisse, navem plenam blasphemiarum Romano intulit portui invenitque protinus patella operculum et Romanae fidei purissimum fontem lutosa caeno permiscuere vestigia. Nec mirum, si in plateis et in foro rerum venalium pictus ariolus stultorum verberet nates et obtorto fuste dentes mordentium quatiat, cum venenata spurcaque doctrina Romae invenerit, quos induceret. Tunc librorum περὶ ἀρχῶν infamis interpretatio, tunc discipulus ὄλβιος vere nominis sui, si in talem magistrum non inpegisset, tunc nostrorum διάπυρος contradictio et Pharisaeorum turbata schola. Tunc sancta Marcella, quae diu coniverat, ne per aemulationem quippiam facere crederetur, postquam sensit fidem apostolico ore laudatam in plerisque violari, ita ut sacerdotes

¹ The movement, led by Rufinus and Macarius, to bring Origen's teaching before the Roman public. Cf. App. II, p. 498ff.

² 'Like to like,' a favourite proverb with Jerome.

³ For Origen (A.D. 185-254) and his writings see F. A. Wright, Later Greek Literature, pp. 317-320. The De Principiis is the first systematic account of Christian theology and the most profound work of serious philosophy which the third century produced.

⁴ Macarius (μακάριος—ὄλβιος). Jerome here, as often, plays upon words.

LETTER CXXVII

name, which previously had been a term of reproach, was now one of honour. Meanwhile we consoled ourselves for our separation by an interchange of conversation, discharging in the spirit the debt that we could not pay in the flesh. Our letters always crossed, outvied in courtesies, anticipated in greetings. Separation brought no great loss, since it was bridged by a continual correspondence.

In the midst of this tranquillity and service rendered to God, there arose in these provinces a tempest¹ which threw everything into confusion, and finally swelled to such heights of madness that it spared neither itself nor anything that was good. As though it were not enough to have disturbed all our community here, it despatched a ship laden with blasphemies to the port of Rome. There the dish soon found a cover to match it,² and muddy feet fouled the clear fountain of the Roman faith. It is not surprising that in the streets and market-places of the city a painted quack can strike fools on the buttocks and knock out the teeth of objectors with a blow from his stick, seeing that this poisonous and filthy teaching found dupes at Rome to lead astray. Then came the disgraceful version of Origen's book On First Principles,³ and that disciple⁴ who might truly have been called 'Felix' if he had never fallen in with such a teacher. Next followed my supporters' fiery confutation which threw the whole school of the Pharisees into confusion. Finally our saintly Marcella, who for a long time had closed her eyes to all this lest she should be thought to put herself in rivalry, finding that the faith which the apostle once praised was now in many people being endangered, came forward quoque nonnullos monachorum maximeque saeculi homines in adsensum sui traheret hereticus ac simplicitati inluderet episcopi, qui de suo ingenio ceteros aestimabat, publice restitit malens Deo placere quam hominibus.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

10. Laudat salvator in evangelio vilicum iniquitatis, quod contra dominum quidem, attamen pro se prudenter fecerit. Cernentes heretici de parva scintilla maxima incendia concitari et suppositam dudum flammam iam ad culmina pervenisse nec posse latere, quod multos deceperat, petunt et inpetrant ecclesiasticas epistulas, ut communicantes ecclesiae discedere viderentur. Non multum tempus in medio, succedit in pontificatum vir insignis Anastasius, quem diu Roma habere non meruit, ne orbis caput sub tali episcopo truncaretur; immo idcirco raptus atque translatus est, ne semel latam sententiam precibus suis flectere conaretur dicente domino ad Hieremiam: 'Ne oraveris pro populo isto neque depreceris in bonum, quia, si ieiunaverint, non exaudiam preces eorum et, si obtulerint holocausta et victimas, non suscipiam eas; in gladio enim, fame et pestilentia ego consumam eos.' Dicas: 'Quo hoc?' ad laudem Marcellae. Damnationis hereticorum haec fuit principium, dum adducit testes, qui prius ab eis eruditi et postea ab heretico fuerant errore correcti, dum ostendit multitudinem

¹ Pope Siricius.

² St. Luke, xvi. 8.

³ A.D. 398.

⁴ 'The head of the world' is Rome, sacked in 410.

⁵ Jeremiah, xiv. 11.

LETTER CXXVII

openly on my side. As the heretic was drawing to his cause not only priests, monks and laity, but was even imposing on the simplicity of the bishop,¹ who judged other men by himself, she publicly withstood him, choosing to please God rather than men.

In the Gospel the Saviour praises the unjust steward, because, though he cheated his master, he acted wisely for himself.² The heretics in the same way, seeing that a small spark had kindled a great fire, and that the flames which for a long time had been hidden were now at the housetops, so that the deception practised on many could no longer be hid, asked for and obtained letters from the church of Rome, that it might seem that they were in full communion until the day of their departure. Soon after this the great Anastasius³ succeeded to the pontificate; but Rome was not privileged to have him long, lest the head of the world should be struck off⁴ while so noble a man was bishop. He was indeed swiftly removed from this earth that he might not seek by his prayers to avert the sentence which God once for all had passed. For the Lord said to Jeremiah: 'Pray not for this people for their good. When they fast I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt-offering and oblation, I will not accept them; but I will consume them by the sword and by the famine and by the pestilence.'⁵ You may say: 'What has this to do with the praise of Marella?' The answer is that she took the first steps in getting the heretics condemned. It was she who brought forward as witnesses those who first had been instructed by them and afterwards had seen the error of their heresy. It was she who revealed the numbers they had deceived, and deceptorum, dum in pia περὶ ἀρχῶν ingerit volumina, quae emendata manu scorpium monstrantur, dum acciti frequentibus litteris heretici, ut se defenderent, venire non ausi sunt tantaque vis conscientiae fuit, ut magis absentes damnari quam praesentes coargui maluerint. Huius tam gloriosae victoriae origo Marella est tuque caput horum et causa bonorum, quae scis me vera narrare quae nosti vix de multis pauca dicere, ne legenti fastidium faciat odiosa replicatio et videar apud malivolos sub occasione laudis alterius stomachum meum digerere. Pergam ad reliqua.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

11. De occidentis partibus ad orientem turbo transgressus minitabatur plurimis magna naufragia. Tunc inpletum est: 'Putas, veniens filius hominis inveniet fidem super terram?' Refrigerata caritate multorum pauci, qui amabant fidei veritatem, nostro lateri iungebantur, quorum publice petebatur caput, contra quos omnes opes parabantur, ita ut 'Barnabas quoque addueeretur in illam simulationem,' immo apertum parricidium, quod non viribus sed voluntate commisit. Sed ecce universa tempestas domino flante deleta est et expletum vaticinium prophetale: 'Auferes spiritum eorum et deficient et in pulverem suum revertentur. In illa die peribunt omnes cogitationes eorum,' et illud evangelicum: 'Stulte, hac nocte aufertur anima tua abs te; quae autem praeparasti, cuius erunt?'

¹ Rufinus.

² St. Luke, xviii. 8.

³ Galatians, ii. 13.

⁴ The allusion is perhaps to John of Jerusalem, with whom Jerome was frequently at variance: but this is only a conjecture, though a probable one.

⁵ Psalm civ. 29.

⁶ Psalm cxlvi. 4 (slightly altered).

⁷ St. Luke, xii. 20.

LETTER CXXVII

brandished in their faces the impious books On First Principles, which as emended by that scorpion's¹ hand were then openly on view. It was she finally who in a succession of letters challenged the heretics to defend themselves; a challenge which they did not dare to accept, for so strong was their consciousness of sin that they preferred to be condemned in their absence rather than appear and be proved guilty. For this glorious victory Marcella was responsible; she with you was the source and cause of this great blessing. You, who know that my story is true, understand that I am only mentioning a few incidents out of many, lest a tedious repetition should weary the reader. Moreover, I do not wish malignant people to think that under pretence of praising another I am giving vent to my own rancour. I will now proceed to the rest of my tale.

The hurricane passed from the Western world into the East and threatened very many with dire shipwreck. Then were fulfilled the words: 'Thinkest thou that when the son of man cometh he shall find faith on earth?'² The love of many grew cold, but a few who loved the truth of faith rallied to my side. Their lives were openly sought and every means was used to attack them, so that indeed 'Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation,'³ and committed plain murder,⁴ in wish at least if not in deed. But lo! the Lord blew and all the tempest passed away, and the prediction of the prophet was fulfilled: 'Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust.'⁵ 'In that very day their thoughts perish.'⁶ With it also the Gospel words were accomplished: 'Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?'⁷

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

12. Dum haec aguntur in Iebus, terribilis de occidente rumor adfertur obsideri Romam et auro salutem civium redimi spoliatosque rursus circumdari, ut post substantiam vitam quoque amitterent. Haeret vox et singultus intercipiunt verba dictantis. Capitur urbs, quae totum cepit orbem, immo fame perit ante quam gladio et vix pauci, qui caperentur, inventi sunt. Ad nefandos cibos erupit esurientium rabies et sua invicem membra laniant, dum mater non parcat lactanti infantiae et recipit utero, quem paulo ante effuderat. 'Nocte Moab capta est, nocte cecidit murus eius. Deus, venerunt gentes in hereditatem tuam, polluerunt templum sanctum tuum, posuerunt Hierusalem in pomorum custodiam, posuerunt cadavera servorum tuorum escas volatilibus caeli, carnes sanctorum tuorum bestiis terrae. Effuderunt sanguinem ipsorum sicut aquam in circuitu Hierusalem et non erat, qui sepeliret.'

'Quis cladem illius noctis, quis funera fando
Explicet aut possit lacrimis aequare dolorem?
Urbs antiqua ruit multos dominata per annos
Plurima perque vias sparguntur inertia passim
Corpora perque domos, et plurima mortis imago.

13. Cum interim, ut tanta confusione rerum, Marcellae quoque domum cruentus victor ingre-

¹ The Canaanite name for Jerusalem.

² Isaiah, xv. 1.

³ Psalm lxxix. 1-3.

⁴ Virgil, Aeneid, II. 361-5 and 369.

LETTER CXXVII

While these things were taking place in Jebus,¹ a dreadful rumour reached us from the West. We heard that Rome was besieged, that the citizens were buying their safety with gold, and that when they had been thus despoiled they were again beleaguered, so as to lose not only their substance but their lives. The city which had taken the whole world was itself taken; nay, it fell by famine before it fell by the sword, and there were but a few found to be made prisoners. The rage of hunger had recourse to impious food; men tore one another's limbs, and the mother did not spare the baby at her breast, taking again within her body that which her body had just brought forth. 'In the night was Moab taken, in the night did her wall fall down.'² 'O God, the heathen have come into thine inheritance; thy holy temple have they defiled; they have made Jerusalem an orchard. The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth. Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem; and there was none to bury them.'³

'Who can tell that night of havoc, who can shed enough of tears
For those deaths? The ancient city that for many a hundred years
Ruled the world comes down in ruin: corpses lie in every street
And men's eyes in every household death in countless phases meet.'⁴

Meanwhile, as you might expect in such a turmoil, the blood-stained conquerors burst their way into Marcella's house.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

ditur—‘ Sit mihi fas audita loqui,’ immo a sanetis viris visa narrare, qui interfuere praesentes, qui te dicunt in periculo quoque ei fuisse sociatam—intrepido vultu exceperunt dicitur introgressos; cumque posceretur aurum et defossas opes vili excusaret tunica, non tamen fecit fidem voluntariae paupertatis. Caesam fustibus flagellisque aiunt non sensisse tormenta, sed hoc lacrimis, hoc pedibus eorum egisse prostratam, ne te a suo consortio separarent, ne sustineret adulescentia, quod senilis aetas timere non poterat. Christus dura corda mollivit et inter cruentos gladios invenit locum pietas. Cumque et illam et te ad beati Pauli basilicam barbari deduxissent, ut vel salutem vobis ostenderet vel sepulchrum, in tantam laetitiam dicitur erupisse, ut gratias ageret Deo, quod te sibi integram reservasset, quod pauperem illam non fecisset captivitas, sed invenisset, quod egeret cotidiano cibo, quod saturata Christo non sentiret esuriam, quod et voce et opere loqueretur: ‘ Nuda exivi de ventre matris meae, nuda et redeam. Sicut domino visum est, ita et factum est. Sit nomen domini benedictum.’

14. Post aliquot menses sana, integra vegetoque corpusculo dormivit in domino et te paupertatulae suae, immo per te pauperes reliquit heredes claudens oculos in manibus tuis, reddens spiritum in tuis osculis, dum inter lacrimas tuas illa rideret consci-

¹ Virgil, Aeneid, VI. 266.

² Job, i. 21.

³ This passage may have inspired the lines by Sir William Jones (1746–1794) ‘to a friend on his birthday’:

‘ On parents’ knee a naked newborn child
Weeping thou sat’st, while all around thee smiled;
So live that sinking to thy life’s last sleep,
Calm thou mayst smile, while all around thee weep.’

Cf. Letter LX. 13.

LETTER CXXVII

' Be it mine to say what I have heard,'¹

nay, rather to relate what was seen by those holy men who were present at that hour, and found you, Principia, at her side in the time of danger. They tell me that she confronted the intruders with fearless face, and when they asked her for gold and hidden treasures pointed to her coarse gown. However, they would not give credence to her self-chosen poverty, but beat her with sticks and whipped her. She felt no pain, but throwing herself in tears at their feet begged them not to take you from her or force your youth to endure the fate which her old age had no occasion to fear. Christ softened their hard hearts, and even among blood-stained swords a sense of duty found place. The barbarians escorted both her and you to the church of the apostle Paul, for you to find there either safety or a tomb. There she burst into cries of joy, thanking God for having kept you unharmed for her. ' By heaven's grace,' she said, ' captivity has found me a poor woman, not made me one. Now I shall go in want of daily bread, but I shall not feel hunger since I am full of Christ and can say in word and deed: " Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."'²

Some months after this she fell asleep in the Lord, sound in mind and not suffering from any malady, with her poor body still active. She made you the heir of her poverty, or rather she made the poor her heirs through you. In your arms she closed her eyes, your lips received her last breath; you were weeping, but she smiled,³ conscious of having lived a good life and hoping for a entia vitae bonae et praemiis futurorum. Haec tibi, Marcella venerabilis, et haec tibi, Principia filia, una et brevi lucubratione dictavi non eloquii venustate sed voluntate gratissimi in vos animi et Deo et legentibus placere desiderans.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

CXXVIII

AD PACATULAM

1. CAUSA difficilis parvulae scribere, quae non intellegat, quid loquaris, cuius animam nescias, de cuius periculose voluntate promittas, ut secundum praeclari oratoris exordium spes magis in ea laudanda quam res sit. Quid enim horteris ad continentiam, quae placentas desiderat, quae in sinu matris garrula voce balbutit, cui dulciora sunt mella quam verba? Audiatur profunda apostoli, quae anilibus magis fabulis delectatur? Prophetarum αἰνύματα sentiat, quam tristior gerulae vultus exagitat? Evangelii intellegat maiestatem, ad cuius fulgura omnis mortalium hebeatur sensus? Ut parenti subiciatur, horter, quae manu tenera ridentem verberat matrem? Itaque Pacatula nostra hoc epistulium post lectura suscipiat; interim modo litterularum elementa cognoscat, iungat syllabas,

¹ Cicero, De Republica, fr. 5.

LETTER CXXVII AND LETTER CXXVIII

reward hereafter. This letter to you, revered Marcella, and to you, my daughter Principia, I have dictated in the wakeful hours of one short night. I have used no charms of eloquence; my one wish has been to show my gratitude to you both, my one desire to please both God and my readers.

LETTER CXXVIII

TO PACATULA

Feminine training

Written A.D. 413

It is a difficult matter to write to a little girl who will not understand what you say, of whose mind you know nothing, and whose inclinations it would be dangerous to warrant. To use the words of a famous orator's preface—'in her case praise is based on expectation rather than accomplishment.'¹ How can you urge self-control on a child who still craves after cakes, who babbles softly in her mother's arms, and finds honey sweeter than words? Can she pay attention to the deep sayings of the apostle, when she takes more pleasure in old wives' tales than in them? Can she heed the dark riddles of the prophets when her nurse's frown is sufficient to frighten her? Can she appreciate the majesty of the Gospel when its lightnings dazzle all men's senses? How can I bid her to be obedient to her parents, this child who beats her mother with baby hand? So my little Pacatula must read this letter herself in days to come; and in the meantime learn her alphabet, spelling, grammar, and syntax. To get her to discat nomina, verba consociet, atque, ut voce tinnula ista meditetur, proponatur ei crustula mulsi praemia et, quicquid gustu suave est, quod vernat in floribus, quod rutilat in gemmis, quod blanditur in pupis, acceptura festinet; interim et tenero temptet pollice fila deducere, rumpat saepe stamina, ut aliquando non rumpat, post laborem lusibus gestiat, de matris pendeat collo, rapiat oscula propinquorum, psalmos mercede decantet, amet, quod cogitur dicere, ut non opus sit, sed delectatio, non necessitas, sed voluntas.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

2. Solent quaedam, cum futuram virginem sponderint, pulla tunica eam induere et furvo operire palliolo, auferre linteamina, nihil in collo, nihil in capite auri sinere re vera bono consilio, ne habere discat in tenero, quod postea deponere compellatur. Aliis contra videtur. 'Quid enim,' aiunt, 'si ipsa non habuerit, habentes alias non videbit? Φιλόκοσμον genus femineum est multasque etiam insignis pudicitiae, quamvis nulli virorum, tamen sibi scimus libenter ornari. Quin potius habendo satiatur et cernat laudari alias, quae ista non habeant. Meliusque est, ut satiata contemnat, quam non habendo habere desideret.' Tale quid repeat her lessons in her little shrill voice she must have a prize of a honey cake offered to her. She will do her work quickly if she is going to receive as reward some sweetmeat, or bright flower, or glittering bauble, or pretty doll. Meanwhile, too, she must learn to spin, drawing down the threads with tender fingers; and though at first she may often break the yarn, she will one day cease to do so. Then, when work is over, she may indulge in play, hanging on her mother's neck and snatching kisses from her relations. Let her be rewarded for singing the psalms aloud, so that she may love what she is forced to do, and it be not work but pleasure, not a matter of necessity but one of free-will.

LETTER CXXVIII

Some mothers, when they have vowed a daughter to virginity, are wont to dress her in dark clothes, to wrap her up in a little black cloak, and to let her wear no gold ornaments on her head and neck. In reality this method is a wise one, for the child does not then become accustomed to things which afterwards she must lay aside. Other mothers think differently. 'What is the use,' they say, 'of her not having pretty things? Will she not see other girls having them? The toilette appeals to all women, and we know that many whose chastity is beyond reproach take pleasure in dressing not for men but for themselves. Nay rather, let her grow sated with having, and let her see that others are praised, who have not. And it is better that she should despise through being sated, than that by not having she should want to have.' 'This,' they argue, 'is the plan that the Lord used with the people of Israel. They craved after the flesh-et Israhcletico fecisse dominum populo, ut cupientibus Aegyptias carnes usque ad nauseam et vomitum praeberet examina corturnicum, multosque saeculi prius homines facilius carere experta corporis voluptate quam eos, qui a pueritia libidinem nesciant; ab aliis enim nota calcari, ab aliis ignota appeti, illos vitare paenitendo suavitatis insidias, quas fugerunt, hos carnis inlecebris et dulci titillatione corporis blandientis, dum mella putant venena noxia reperire; mel enim distillare labiis meretricis mulieris, quod ad tempus inpinguet vescentium fauces et postea amarius felle inveniatur. Unde et in domini mel sacrificiis non offerri ceraque contempta, quae mellis hospitium est, oleum accendi in templo Dei, quod de amaritudine exprimitur olivarum, pascha quoque cum amaritudinibus comedi in 'azymis sinceritatis et veritatis,' quos qui habuerit, in saeculo persecutionem sustinebit. Unde et propheta mystice cantat: 'Solus sedebam, quia amaritudine repletus sum.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

3. Quid igitur? Luxuriandum est in adolescentia, ut postea luxuria fortius contemnatur? Absit, inquit; 'Unusquisque,' enim, 'in qua vocatione vocatus est, in ea permaneat.' 'Circumcisis quis,' id est virgo, 'vocatus est: non adducat praeputium,' hoc est non quaerat pellicias tunicas nuptiarum, quibus Adam ciectus de paradiso virginitatis indutus

¹ Proverbs, v. 3.

³ Jeremiah, xv. 17 (Septuagint).

⁴ I Corinthians, vii. 24, 18.

² I Corinthians, v. 7, 8.

⁵ Genesis, iii. 21.

LETTER CXXVIII

pots of Egypt, and so He sent them swarms of quails until they gorged themselves and were sick. Many worldlings who have tried all the pleasures of the senses find it easier to give them up than do those who from youth have known nothing of desire. The one tread underfoot what they know, the others are attracted by what is unknown. The one penitently avoid the snares of pleasure from which they have escaped, the others are allured by the delights of the body and the titillation of the flesh until they find that what they thought was honey is really deadly poison. For we know that "the lips of a strange woman drop as an honeycomb, which for the moment is as oil in the eater's mouth, but is afterwards found more bitter than gall."¹ Therefore it is that honey is never offered in the sacrifices of the Lord, that the wax in which honey is stored is held in contempt, and that oil expressed from the bitter olive is burned in God's temple. Moreover, the passover is eaten with bitter herbs and with 'the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.'² Those who take thereof shall suffer persecution in this world. Wherefore the prophet sings symbolically: "I sat alone, because I was filled with bitterness."³

Well, is wantonness to be encouraged in youth, so that in later life it may be the more firmly rejected? 'Heaven forbid!' they say, for 'let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide.' 'Is any called being circumcised—that is, a virgin—let him not become uncircumcised'⁴—that is, let him not seek in marriage the 'coats of skins,' where-with Adam clothed himself when he was expelled from the paradise of virginity.⁵ 'Is any called in

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

est. 'In praepotio quis vocatus est,' hoc est habens uxorem et matrimonio pelle circumdatus: non quaerat virginitatis et aeternae pudicitiae nuditatem, quam semel habere desivit, sed utatur vase suo in sanctificatione et pudicitia bibatque de fontibus suis et non quaerat cisternas lupanarium dissipatas, quae purissimas aquas pudicitiae continere non possunt. Unde et idem Paulus in eodem capitulo de virginitate et nuptiis disputans servos carnis vocat in matrimonio constitutos, liberos eos, qui absque ullo nuptiarum iugo tota domino serviunt libertate.

Quod loquimur, non in universum loquimur, sed in parte tractamus, nec de omnibus, sed de quibusdam dicimus. Ad utrumque sexum, non solum ad vas infirmius, noster sermo dirigitur. Virgo es: quid te mulieris delectat societas? Quid fragilem et sutilem ratem magnis committis fluctibus et grande periculum navigationis incertae securus ascendis? Nescis, quid desideres, et tamen sic ei iungeris, quasi aut ante desideraveris aut—ut levissime dicam—postea desideraturus sis. 'Sed ad ministerium iste sexus est aptior.' Elige ergo anum, elige deformem, elige probatae in domino continentiae. Quid te adulescentia, quid pulchra, quid luxuriosa delectat? Uteris balneis, cute nitida, rubicundus incedis, carnibus vesceris, affluis divitiis, pretiosa veste circumdaris et iuxta serpentem mortiferum uncircumcision'—that is, having a wife and covered with the skin of matrimony: let him not seek the nakedness of virginity and of that eternal chastity which he has forfeited once for all. Let him rather possess his vessel in sanctification and honour;¹ let him drink from his own fountain and not seek in brothels those cisterns of vice which can never contain the pure water of chastity. Therefore Paul again in the same chapter, when he is discussing the question of virginity and marriage, calls those who are married slaves of the flesh, but those who are not under the yoke of wedlock freemen serving the Lord in all liberty.²

¹ 1 Thessalonians, iv. 4.

² Cf. 1 Corinthians, vii. 22.

LETTER CXXVIII

What I am saying now I am not saying as a universal truth; I am treating of but a part of this subject, and am speaking of some men only, not of all. Moreover, my words are addressed to both sexes; not merely to the weaker vessel. You, my brother, are a virgin: why then do you find pleasure in a woman's society? Why do you risk your frail, patched barque in heavy seas, and lightly face the danger of a hazardous voyage? You know not what you desire, and yet your union is as close as though you either desired her before or, to put it as leniently as possible, were going to desire her in the future. 'Her sex,' you will say, 'is particularly suitable for household service.' Choose an old woman, then, choose one who is misshapen, choose one of proved continence in the Lord. Why should you take pleasure in a young girl, pretty and voluptuous? You frequent the baths, you walk abroad with rosy cheeks and sleek skin, you eat meat and you abound in riches, you dress in costly clothes; and do you fancy that you can sleep safe beside a securum dormire te credis? An non habitas in eodem hospicio, in nocte dumtaxat? Ceterum totos dies in huiusce modi confabulatione consumens quare solus cum sola et non cum arbitris sedes? Cum etiam ipse non pecces, aliis peccare videaris, ut exemplo sis miseris, qui nominis tui auctoritate delinquant. Tu quoque, virgo vel vidua, cur tam longo viri sermone retineris? Cur cum solo relicta non metuis? Saltim alvi te et vesicae cogat necessitas, ut exeas foras, ut deseras in hac re, cum quo licentius quam cum germano, multo verecundius egisti cum marito. Sed de scripturis sanctis aliquid interrogas: interroga publice; audiant pedesquae, audiant comites tuae. 'Omne, quod manifestatur, lux est.' Bonus sermo secreta non quaerit, quin potius delectatur laudibus suis et testimonio plurimorum. Magister egregius contemnit viros, fratres despicit et in unius mulierculae secreta cruditione desudat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

4. Declinavi parumper de via occasione aliorum et, dum infantem Pacatulam instituo, immo enutrio, multarum subito male mihi pacatarum bella suscepi. Revertar ad propositum. Sexus femineus suo iungatur sexui; nesciat, immo timeat cum pueris ludere. Nullum inpudicum verbum noverit et, si forte in tumultu familiae discurrentis aliquid turpe audierit, deadly serpent? Do you say that you do not live in the same house with her, at least at night? Well, you spend whole days with her in this sort of conversation. Why do you sit alone with her and without any other companions? Why, even if you do not sin yourself, do you seem to others to be sinning, leading poor wretches into error by the authority of your name? You also, my sister, whether you are a virgin or a widow, why do you spend so many hours in talking with a man? Why are you not afraid to be left with him alone? The needs of nature should at least compel you to go out sometimes and leave him. You were more modest with your husband, and even with your brother you did not behave with such freedom as this. You say that you are asking him some question concerning the Holy Scriptures. Ask it publicly; let your maidservants and attendants hear it. 'Everything that is made manifest is light.'¹ Honest words seek no quiet retreat; nay rather, they take pleasure in a crowd of witnesses, and in the praise which they win. He must be a fine teacher who despises men, scorns his brethren, and labours in secret to instruct one weak woman!

¹ Ephesians, v. 13.

² Pacatula, male pacatae : a play on words.

LETTER CXXVIII

Other people's conduct has made me wander somewhat from my path, and in instructing, or rather nursing, the baby Pacatula, I have in a moment incurred the enmity of many ladies who will be hard to pacify.² I will now return to my subject. Females should only mix with their own sex; they should not know how to play with boys, nay, they should be afraid to do so. A girl should have no acquaintance with lewd talk, and if amid the noisy bustle of a household she hears an unclean word, she should non intellegat. Matris nutum pro verbis ac monitum pro imperio habeat. Amct ut parentem, subiciatur ut dominae, timeat ut magistram. Cum autem virgunculam et rudem edentulam septimus aetatis annus exceperit et coeperit erubescere, scire, quid taceat, dubitare, quid dicat, discat memoriter psalterium et usque ad annos pubertatis libros Salomonis, evangelia, apostolos ac prophetas sui cordis thesaurum faciat. Nec liberius procedat ad publicum nec semper ecclesiarum quaerat celebritatem. In cubiculo suo totas delicias habeat. Numquam iuenculos, numquam cincinnatos videat vocis dulcedine per aures animam vulnerantes. Puellarum quoque lascivia repellatur, quae quanto licentius adeunt, tanto difficilius evitantur et, quod didicerunt, secreto docent inclusamque Danaen vulgi sermonibus violant. Sit ei magistra comes, paedagoga custos non multo vino dedita, non iuxta apostolum otiosa ac verbosa, sed sobria, gravis, lanifica et ea tantum loquens, quae animum puellarum ad virtutem instituant. Ut autem aqua in areola digitum sequitur praecedentem, ita aetas mollis et tenera in utramque partem flexibilis est et, quocumque duxeris, trahitur. Solent lascivi et comptuli iuvenes blandimentis, affabilitate, munusculis aditum sibi per nutrices ad alumnas quaerere et, cum clementer intraverint, de scintillis incendia concitare paulatimque proficere ad

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

¹ Danaë was imprisoned by her father to keep her unmarried.

² 1 Timothy, v. 13.

LETTER CXXVIII

not understand it. Her mother's nod should be as good as speech, her mother's advice equivalent to a command. She should love her as her parent, obey her as her mistress, fear her as her teacher. At first she will be but a shy little maid without all her teeth, but as soon as she has reached her seventh year and has learned to blush, knowing what she should not say, and doubting what she should say, she should commit the psalter to memory, and until she is grown up she should make the books of Solomon, the Gospels, the apostles, and the prophets the treasure of her heart. She should not appear in public too freely nor always seek a crowded church. Let her find all her pleasure in her own room. She must never look at foppish youths or curled coxcombs, who wound the soul through the ears with their honeyed talk. She must be protected also from the wantonness of other girls. The more freedom of access such persons have, the more difficult they are to shake off; the knowledge they have acquired they impart in secret and corrupt a secluded Danaë with vulgar gossip.¹ Let her teacher be her companion, her attendant her guardian, and let her be a woman not given to much wine, one who, as the apostle says, is not idle nor a tattler,² but sober, grave, skilled in spinning, saying only such words as will train a girl's mind in virtue. For as water follows behind a finger in the sand, so soft and tender youth is pliable for good or evil, and can be drawn wherever you guide it. Spruce gallants often try the effect of soft words, affable manners, and trifling gifts upon a nurse in order to win access to her charge. After succeeding in a gentle approach, they blow the spark into a flame and become inpudentiam et nequaquam posse prohiberi illo in se versiculo comprobato: 'Aegre reprehendas, quod sinas consuescere.' Pudet dicere et tamen dicendum est: nobiles feminae nobiliores habiturae procos vilissimae condicionis hominibus et servulis copulantur ac sub nomine religionis et umbra continentiae interdum deserunt viros, Helenae sequuntur Alexandros nec Menelaos pertimescunt. Videntur haec, planguntur et non vindicantur, quia multitudo peccantium peccandi licentiam subministrat.

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

5. Pro nefas, orbis terrarum ruit et in nobis peccata non coruunt. Urbs inclita et Romani imperii caput uno hausta est incendio. Nulla regio, quae non exules eius habeat. In cineres ac favillas sacrae quondam ecclesiae conciderunt et tamen studemus avaritiae. Vivimus quasi altera die morituri et aedificamus quasi semper in hoc victuri saeculo. Auro parietes, auro laquearia, auro fulgent capita columnarum et nudus atque esuriens ante fores nostras in paupere Christus moritur. Legimus Aaron pontificem isse obviam furentibus flammis et accenso turibulo Dei iram cohibuisse; stetit inter mortem et vitam sacerdos maximus nec ultra vestigia eius ignis procedere ausus est. Moysi loquitur Deus: 'Dimitte me et delebo populum istum.' Quando dicit 'dimitte me,' ostendit se teneri, ne

¹ Publilius Syrus, Sent., 180, already quoted, cf. p. 356.

² 2 Numbers, xvi. 46-48.

³ Exodus, xxxii. 10.

LETTER CXXVIII

gradually more and more shameless. It is then impossible to stop them, and they prove the truth of the line :

‘ You can hardly blame a habit which yourself you have allowed.’¹

I am ashamed to say it, and yet I must ; women of rank who could have suitors of even higher station cohabit with men of the lowest class and even with slaves. Sometimes in the name of religion and under a cloak of continence they desert their husbands, and like another Helen follow their Paris without any fear of Menelaus. Such things are seen and lamented, but they are not punished, for the multitude of sinners gives licence to sin.

Shame on us, the world is falling in ruins, but our sins still flourish. The glorious city that was the head of the Roman Empire has been engulfed in one terrific blaze. There is no part of the earth where exiles from Rome are not to be found. Churches once held sacred have fallen into dust and ashes, and still we set our hearts greedily on money. We live as though we were doomed to death on the morrow, but we build houses as though we were going to live for ever in this world. Our walls glitter with gold, gold gleams upon our ceilings and upon the capitals of our pillars : yet Christ is dying at our doors in the persons of His poor, naked and hungry. We read that Aaron the high priest faced the furious flames and with his burning censer stayed God’s wrath. In the might of his priesthood he stood between life and death, and the fire did not dare to pass his feet.² God said to Moses : ‘ Let me alone and I will consume this people,’³ showing by the words ‘ let me alone ’ that he can be stayed faciat, quod minatus est; Dei enim potentiam servi preces inpediebant. Quis, putas, ille sub caelo est, qui nunc irae Dei possit occurrere, qui obviare flammis et iuxta apostolum dicere: 'Optabam ego anathema esse pro fratribus meis'? Pereunt cum pastoribus greges, quia, sicut populus, sic sacerdos. Moyses compassionis loquebatur affectu: 'Si dimittis populo huic, dimitte; sin autem, dele me de libro tuo.' Vult perire cum pereuntibus nec propria salute contentus est. 'Gloria' quippe 'regis multitudo populi.'

SELECT LETTERS OF ST. JEROME

His Pacatula est nata temporibus, inter haec crepundia primam carpit aetatem ante lacrimas scitura quam risum, prius fletum sensura quam gaudium. Necdum introitus, iam exitus; talem semper fuisse putat mundum. Nescit praeterita, fugit praesentia, futura desiderat. Quae ut tumultuario sermone dictarem et post neces amicorum luctumque perpetuum infanti senex longo postliminio scriberem, tua me, Gaudenti fratri, impulit caritas; maluique parum quam nihil omnino poscenti dare, quia in altero voluntas oppressa luctu, in altero amicitiae dissimulatio est.

¹ Romans, ix. 3.

³ Proverbs, xiv. 28.

² Exodus, xxxii. 32.

⁴ Pacatula's father.

LETTER CXXVIII

from carrying out his threat; for the prayers of His servant hindered God's power. Who, think you, is there now under heaven able to face God's wrath, to meet the flames, and to say with the apostle: 'I could wish that I myself were accursed for my brethren'?¹ Flocks and shepherds perish together, because the priest is now even as the people. Moses in his compassionate love said: 'Yet now if thou wilt, forgive their sin; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of thy book.'² He wished to perish with the perishing, and was not content to win salvation for himself; for indeed 'in the multitude of people is the king's honour.'³

Such are the times into which our Pacatula has been born, these are the rattles of her infancy. She will know of tears before laughter, she will feel sorrow sooner than joy. Scarcely has she trod the stage before the curtain falls. She thinks that the world was ever thus, she knows not of the past, she shrinks from the present, she fixes her desires on what is to come. After mourning incessantly for my dead friends I have at length recovered composure, and my affection for you, brother Gaudentius,⁴ has induced me to dictate this rough discourse and in my old age write a letter to an infant. I preferred to answer your request inadequately rather than not to answer it at all. As it is, my own inclinations have been paralysed by my grief; in the other case, you might have doubted the sincerity of my friendship.

TABLE SHOWING THE RELATIONSHIP OF SOME OF JEROME'S CORRESPONDENTS AT ROME AND OF PERSONS REFERRED TO IN THE LETTERS IN THIS VOLUME

APPENDIX I

ON JEROME'S CORRESPONDENCE WITH ROMAN WOMEN

JEROME had many friends at Rome whose names occur frequently in his correspondence,¹ but some of his most interesting letters are addressed to his women friends in that city. Of these, those to Marcella are the most numerous,² and she and her circle had a great influence on the life and work of Jerome from 382 onwards.

¹ Among such names are Pope Damasus (Introd., p. viii); the senator Pammachius, a member of the Furian family and a cousin of Marcella, whose friendship with Jerome dated from their student days, when they had together attended the lectures of Victorinus (cf. Letter LXVIII. 1, and preface to Hosea); Pammachius was an ardent churchman and as much interested in theological controversy as Jerome himself; Oceanus, another layman, who was connected with the great Fabian family and was probably also a senator (cf. esp. Letter LXVII.); his friendship with Jerome, like that of two other Roman correspondents, Desiderius and Domnio (Letters XLVII. and L.), seems to have begun after Jerome's second visit in 382.

² About one-fifth of Jerome's letters are addressed to women, most of them to Marcella. Besides the extant letters to her, there was a collection which has been lost. Jerome says in the catalogue of his works (De viris ill. 135) that he cannot count his letters to Paula and Eustochium, as he wrote every day. Most of these letters were impersonal and entirely devoted to the interpretation of passages of scripture or points of doctrine.

APPENDIX I

At the time of his second visit to Rome, in that year, there was already established on the Aventine Mount a community of women, presided over by Albina and her daughter Marcella, leading a form of conventual life, the first impulse to which at Rome had been given many years before by Athanasius,¹ the famous opponent of Arianism, who had been driven from his see at Alexandria about 341 and spent some years in exile at Rome. He and two Egyptian monks who accompanied him, Isidore² and Ammon, had been welcomed and entertained by Albina, a noble and rich widow, at her palae on the Aventine, and her daughter Marcella, though only a child, was deeply impressed by the personalities of the Eastern bishop and his companions and by their tales of the wonderful lives led by the hermits and cenobites, men and women, who already peopled the deserts of Syria and Egypt. When Athanasius departed he left with the child as a parting gift his life of St. Antony, the study of which inspired her with a deep admiration and desire for the monastic life. Marcella grew up and married, but when her husband died, after only seven months of married life, leaving her a childless widow, she refused all further offers of marriage, and, while continuing to transact the necessary business connected with her household and property, she henceforth tried to lead, though staying at home with her mother,

¹ Letter CXXVII. 5.

² Probably the monk of Nitria referred to in Letter XXII. 33. When Paula visited Alexandria in 385 he was governor of the pilgrims' hospice there; later he was involved in the quarrel between Jerome and John, Bishop of Jerusalem, and died, a very old man, in 403.

APPENDIX I

the kind of life for which she had always longed. She wore the plainest of clothes, fasted often and devoted most of her time to prayer and study of the scriptures. Gradually she collected around her a number of like-minded women, virgins and widows, who all lived together and looked up to Albina as a common mother. Among these was Marcellina, the sister of Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, who wrote for her his famous treatises on virginity. She had received the veil from Pope Liberius in 352, but lived for many years after with her own mother, and only after her death joined Marcella's community. Other members of the household, Sophronia, Felicita and another Marcella, are known to us by name only, but of Asella more is told. She was perhaps a sister¹ of Marcella, perhaps only a kinswoman, but when a mere child of ten she vowed herself to a life of virginity, and when her mother refused to buy her the plain brown dress worn by those dedicated to the religious life, Jerome tells us how the child sold her gold chain and bought the clothing for herself. Thenceforward she lived a life of fasting and of prayer, hardly seeing her own sister, only going out to visit the martyrs' shrines, and making for herself a hermitage in the midst of the busy life of Rome.² Such solitude and austerity were exceptional, and Marcella herself kept in touch with the world and welcomed as visitors at her home women whose tastes and interests were the same as her own. One of these friends was Lea,³ a widow, who was at the head of another community

¹ Letter XLV. 7.

² Letter XXIV.

³ Cf. Letter XXIII.

APPENDIX I

of women; others, such as Titiana and her daughter Furia, were still living their normal life in the Roman society of the day.¹ Another member of the circle was Fabiola, who had married young and unhappily, and after divorcing her first husband had married again. Strictly speaking the Church did not recognize such a union, but legally it was valid, and no slur seems to have rested upon her. After her second husband's death, however, Fabiola's conscience troubled her for having contracted the marriage, and she astounded the world of Rome by publicly appearing as a penitent to expiate the sin of her second marriage. After receiving absolution she devoted her life and fortune to the care of the sick and poor, not only at Rome, but throughout Italy.²

But of all Marella's circle, the most famous was her kinswoman the rich patrician Paula.³ Her parents, Rogatus and Blesilla, were probably both

¹ Letter LIV.

² Cf. Letter LXXVII. The date of this public penance is uncertain. Jerome's account seems to make it clear that it took place before her visit to Palestine in 394, and it is tempting to place it during, or soon after, Jerome's stay in Rome (382-5) and to ascribe it to his influence. The description of the ceremony suggests the public act of penance which Bishop Ambrose exacted from the Emperor Theodosius in 392 and it may have been inspired by that. M. Thierry (Life of S. Jerome, II. p. 20 ff.) thinks it took place after Fabiola's visit to Palestine and connects it with a letter (LV.) written by Jerome to the priest Amandus in 394 in answer to a query about the validity of such a marriage as Fabiola's.

³ For Paula and her family cf. Gibbon, Chs. XXXI. and XXXVII.: also Letter CVIII. 1. Gracchorum stirps, suboles scipionum, Pauli heres, cuius vocabulum trahit, maeciae Papiriae, matris Africani, vera et germana progenies.

APPENDIX I

Christians, but her husband Toxotius had been a pagan.¹ The marriage was apparently a very happy one in spite of the difference of religion, and during his lifetime she had led the usual life of a Roman matron of high rank, but after his death in 379 she tried to find consolation in a life of the strictest asceticism, and she spent so much money on charity that she was reproached for squandering her children's inheritance.² Jerome draws a vivid picture of the austerities which she practised and contrasts them with her previous life of luxury,³ but she still maintained her household on a scale that enabled her to offer hospitality to Bishop Epiphanius during his stay in Rome in 382.⁴

The family life of Paula illustrates the struggle between Christianity and paganism in the Roman society of the day.⁵ Her four daughters were all Christians. Blesilla, the eldest of them, had married Furius, a son of the devout Titiana, and had been left a widow before she was twenty, but as yet she was indifferent to her religion and enjoyed to the full the life of gay luxury which her wealth and position offered to her. Julia or Eustochium, the third daughter, had wished from a child to take the veil and much of her time had been spent with

¹ Cf. Letter CVIII. 3 ff.

² Letter CVIII. 5.

³ Letter CVIII. 4. Cf. Letter CVIII. 15.

⁴ Cf. Letter CVIII. 6.

⁵ In Marcella's own family there was a similar division; Albina had been a Christian for many years, but her kinsman Albinus was not only a pagan, but a pontiff of Jupiter, though his wife and daughter were both Christians, and it was only years later that his Christian grandchild finally converted the old man (Letter CVII. 1-4).

APPENDIX I

Marcella, whose instruction and example had confirmed her natural bent. Paula sympathised with this desire, but it was strongly opposed by the child's uncle Hymetius, her father's brother. He had been a favourite of the Emperor Julian and he and his wife Praetextata held fast to the old religion, and their influence and authority kept Paula's only son, the young Toxotius, at this time a child of nine or ten, from becoming a Christian. They invited Eustochium to visit them, and by dressing her in fine clothes and giving her a glimpse of the social life in which she would naturally take part, they tried to detach her from opinions which to them seemed fanatical and unnatural. To modern minds the scheme seems but a natural attempt to let the child—she was only fourteen or fifteen—see something of the world which she was so determined to abjure, but Jerome, writing of the incident twenty years later, exults in its failure and denounced the wickedness of the worldly uncle and aunt, whose death, which occurred soon after, he ascribes to the direct judgment of Heaven for this attempt to turn the young virgin from her chosen path.¹

Marcella and her circle were not only all wealthy and well born, but they were also women of cultivated intellect, and the visit of the Eastern bishops² with whom Jerome came to Rome in 382 was an event of great interest to them. Jerome at first, as he tells us himself, avoided the society of women, but Marcella and her friends longed to meet and to be taught by one whose reputation for sanctity and learning stood so high. The letters written from his hermitage had been circulated in the West as well as in the East, and like the treatises of Ambrose of Milan and of Pope Damasus¹ had formed part of the reading of Marcella's circle. Many years later Jerome tells us² how Fabiola knew by heart and recited to him the letter in praise of the ascetic life which he had written to his friend Heliodorus in 374. He could not refuse to teach such eager disciples, and in response to Marcella's earnest request he gave a series of lectures and readings to her and her friends and finally became their director and spiritual guide.³ He found his pupils intelligent and sympathetic and intensely interested in all questions of scriptural interpretation and theological controversy. Probably they all knew Greek and Paula and her daughters studied Hebrew as well,⁴ so as to be able to help him in his great work of translating the Bible into the vulgar tongue. Long letters to Marcella, Paula and others⁵ explain passages of scripture or points of doctrine and some essays on Jewish observances originated in the eager questions of Fabiola.⁶ Not only many of Jerome's letters but some of his most important treatises were inspired by Marcella and her friends. During his stay in Rome a certain Helvidius, a lay-

¹ Letter CVII. 5.

² Paulinus of Antioch (cf. Introd., p. viii) and Epiphanius of Salamis in Cyprus. Cf. Letter CVIII. 6.

APPENDIX I

¹ Cf. p. 102 and note 3.

² Letter LXXVII. 9, written 399.

³ Cf. esp. Letter XXX. 14 (to Paula), saluta reliquum castitatis chorum et domesticam tuam ecclesiam.

⁴ Letters XXXIX. and CVIII.

⁵ E.g. Letters XXXIII. and XXXIV., also LXIV.

⁶ Letters LXIV. and LXXVIII., and p. 329, note.

APPENDIX I

man, wrote an attack on the celibate life, extolled by Jerome as the highest, placing the estate of marriage above it.¹ Such an attack struck at the root of the life of celibacy which Marcella and her friends were leading and trying to induce others to lead, and it was probably in response to their entreaties that he wrote in 383 his treatise against Helvidius. It was certainly at Marcella's request that ten years later Jerome, from his monastery at Bethlehem, denounced the similar teaching of the renegade monk Jovinian, who again made an attempt to discredit the celibate life which Jerome had done so much to encourage, and with such success that by that time, as he exultantly writes, Italy was full of nunneries and the number of monks in Rome was past counting.²

But interesting as these general treatises and letters are, it is in the more personal letters on life and conduct that the influence of Jerome's ardent and magnetic personality on his disciples is best seen. That influence was especially strong on Paula and her family. He confirmed the young Eustochium, Paula's third daughter, in her desire to take the veil,³ and his famous letter to her in praise of virginity, much of which reads strangely when we remember that it was addressed to a child of fourteen or fifteen, was really intended for a larger public and was a defence of the celibate life and an attack on its opponents. The marriage of Paulina, Paula's second daughter, to his friend the senator

¹ Cf. esp. Letter XXIV. 1.

² Letter CXXVII. 8. Cf. also Palladius de Opiano.

³ Letter XXII., written in 384.

APPENDIX I

Pammachius, a man of more than twice her age, was approved by him, but it was on the life of Paula herself and her eldest daughter Blesilla that his influence was strongest.

Ever since the visit of Epiphanius to her house in 382,¹ Paula had longed to abandon her life in Rome and to visit the Holy Land and the famous solitaries of Egypt and the East, and there to adopt a conventual life. Such a desire, involving, as it did, the abandonment of her children, two of whom were still quite young, and the loss to them of much of their inheritance, naturally aroused strong opposition among Paula's family and friends, part of which was directed against Jerome, to whose influence it was ascribed; and just at this time Pope Damasus, his friend and patron, died. Siricius, his successor, was jealous of his predecessor's friend, and perhaps frightened by the unpopularity which his uncompromising principles had aroused—his advocacy of asceticism, his exaltation of monastic as opposed to family life, and the violence of his attacks on those who disagreed with him. This unpopularity was brought to a head by the death of Blesilla towards the end of the year 384, shortly after that of the Pope. For nearly two years Paula and Jerome, her spiritual director, had striven to turn the gay young widow to a more serious way of life, but it was only after a dangerous illness in the summer of 384 that Blesilla was converted and threw herself into a life of self-denial and study with the same ardour with which she had previously pursued a life of pleasure. Her health was delicate and a few months later she died. The populace ascribed her illness to the fasting and asceticism advocated by Jerome, and clamoured for the expulsion of the monk¹ whose austere teaching was held responsible for her death.² Darker accusations still were brought against him, and it was openly declared that the friendship between him and the dead girl's mother was only the cloak for a more guilty relation.³ Jerome exposed the lie and the slanderer confessed his falsehood, but no doubt an atmosphere of suspicion remained, and as he now no longer had the Pope's friendship and protection, Jerome decided to leave Rome. He embarked at Ostia with his brother Paulinus and his friend the priest Vincentius in August 385, and wrote thence a letter of farewell to his women friends and disciples, which he addressed, not to Paula or Marcella, but to the virgin Asella,⁴ perhaps because she, absorbed in a life of prayer and contemplation, was unaffected by the atmosphere of slander and suspicion which was surrounding him.

¹ Letter CVIII. 6.

APPENDIX I

A few months after Jerome's departure, Paula finally made up her mind to start on her long-wished-for journey to the East. The storm of anger and disapproval which the death of Blesilla and her friendship with Jerome had brought upon her, added to her natural grief at the loss of her child, had

¹ Cf. Letter XXXIX. 6.

² Letters XXXVIII. and XXXIX.

³ Cf. Letter XLV. 2 where Jerome alludes somewhat obscurely to this incident. Who the accuser was is unknown. Apparently legal proceedings were taken against him for the slander, and the mention of torture suggests that he was a slave.

⁴ Letter XLV.

APPENDIX I

reduced her to a condition of deep depression and despair from which Jerome had tried in vain to rouse her,¹ and he himself seems to have been sincerely fond of his young disciple, whose memory, he promised, should be kept alive wherever his works were read.² Paula and Eustochium and the band of widows and virgins who went with them were escorted to the port of embarkation by a crowd of friends and relations, hoping, we may think, even to the last to dissuade them from the journey.³ Jerome movingly describes how the young Toxotius stood on the shore stretching out his arms to his mother as he implored her to return, and how her youngest daughter vainly begged her to stop till she should be settled in marriage. But no family ties could now keep her back from her pilgrimage.

Such journeys were not without precedent; about thirteen years before, Melania, a wealthy widow of Spanish origin, had left Rome, abandoning her home there and her only child, to travel in the East and establish a convent on the Mount of Olives; associated with her on her travels and in her life at Jerusalem was Rufinus, the friend of Jerome's youth, and later his bitter enemy. Jerome was perhaps at Rome when Melania thus exiled herself, though there is no certain evidence⁴ that he knew her or had influenced her conduct, but he no doubt

¹ Letter XXXIX., written to Paula on the death of Blesilla.

² Op. cit. section 7.

³ Letter CVIII.

⁴ The fact that Melania's freedman Hylas was one of the band of ascetics with Jerome at Aquileia, and accompanied him to Syria, suggests that he knew Melania when in Rome as a student.

APPENDIX I

had used this precedent to confirm Paula in her purpose, for in his eyes, as his letters prove,¹ no home ties or duties should prevail once the vocation for the religious life had been felt. There still exists a guide written for the assistance of such pilgrims as Paula and Melania which gave a list of inns and hospices and the best route to follow,² and perhaps aided by some such itinerary, Paula and her companions made their way through the Aegaeon islands to Salamis in Cyprus, where they stayed with the venerable Bishop Epiphanius, and thence to Antioch, where they met Jerome and his monks, who accompanied them to Egypt, where the monk Isidore entertained them, and afterwards to Jerusalem. Here they probably stayed at the monasteries on the Mount of Olives with Jerome's old friend Rufinus and Melania, whose experiences had been so like Paula's own life.³ But this is not expressly told us; when Jerome wrote the history of these travels,⁴ the bitterness of theological con-

¹ Cf. esp. Letter XIV.

² Itinerarium a Bordigala Hierusalem usque, written 333 A.D. (ed. Tobler and Molinier, Geneva, 1879).

³ It was the death of her husband and two of her children which had led Melania to leave her home in Rome and her only remaining child and to go on a pilgrimage to the East, where she lived for nearly a quarter of a century. Jerome couples the names of the two women together in a letter written in 385 (Letter XLV. 4 and 5), but the most striking parallels in their lives were then still in the future—Paula's journey to the East, her convent at Bethlehem beside Jerome's monastery, like Melania's at Jerusalem beside the monastery of Rufinus. Melania, however, revisited Rome in 397 and lived there with her son Publicola and his family for eleven years, ultimately persuading her grand-daughter the younger Melania and her husband Pinianus to return with her to the East.

⁴ Letter CVIII., circ. 404.

APPENDIX I

trovcrsy had estranged him for ever from the friend of his youth. Finally, the pilgrims came to Bethlehem, where they settled, and in the monasteries built there Jerome carried on his literary work, Paula and Eustochium acting as his secretaries, and kept up a constant correspondence, not only with his disciples in Rome, but with friends all over the world. To Marcella, especially, he wrote constantly, and when her mother died, Paula and Eustochium urged her to join them in Palestine.¹ She, however, had no wish to leave Rome and continued to live her life there, somewhat more austere and more definitely conventual after the loss of her mother, till she died after the sack of Rome by Alaric in 410, which Jerome graphically describes in a letter in praise of her life, written to the virgin Principia who had taken Eustochium's place as Marcella's constant companion.² Fabiola, however, came to visit her friends at Bethlehem, and under the escort of her kinsman Oceanus, Jerome's friend and correspondent, made a pilgrimage through the Holy Land and even thought of settling down there for the rest of her life, but the threatened invasion of the Huns in 394, the danger of which was so imminent that the monks and nuns of Bethlehem left their monasteries and took refuge on the sea-coast, caused her to abandon this idea and she returned to Rome.³

Jerome's letters show how close a connection the solitaries of Bethlehem kept up with their Roman friends, and he still acted as a spiritual director to his disciples, exhorting one against a

¹ Letter XLVI., 386 A.D.

² Letter CXXVII. Cf. Letter LXV.

³ Letter LXXVII. 7 and 8.

APPENDIX I

second marriage,¹ instructing others on the education and upbringing of their children,² condoling with others on the loss of friends or relations.³

Paula too kept in close touch with her children and felt deeply the successive loss of those whom she had left in Rome. Her youngest daughter Rufina had died a year or two after her mother's departure;⁴ and in 394 her second daughter Paulina died. Pammachius, heartbroken at the death of his young wife, gave away all her fortune to the poor and himself assumed the habit of a monk; though he continued to take his seat in the senate and fulfil his public duties, he devoted his life to the care of the poor and joined with Fabiola, till her death in 399, in maintaining a hostel for pilgrims at Ostia.⁵ The marriage of Toxotius brought Paula some comfort. Soon after her departure he became a Christian, and afterwards married Laeta, a devout Christian, though her father Albinus, Marcella's cousin, was a pagan. There was one child of this marriage, a second Paula who was dedicated to the cloister from her birth. Her mother asked Jerome for advice on her education;⁶ and it was by his counsel that she was sent to Bethlehem to be brought up in the convent there. But before this her father and grandmother were both dead. The peace of Paula's last years had been disturbed, not only by the death of her children, one after the other, and by her own ill-health caused

¹ Letter LIV.

² Letters CVII. and CXXVIII.

³ Letters LXVI. and LXXVII.

⁴ Letter CVIII.

⁵ Cf. Letters LXVI. and LXXVII. 10.

⁶ Letter CVII.

APPENDIX I

by the austerities which she practised, but also by the theological disputes which had alienated Jerome from his early friend Rufinus and which caused dissension throughout the Christian world.

After Paula's death in 404 Eustochium took over the government of the nunnery, and continued to work as Jerome's secretary; his correspondence was as active as ever—with Rome, Gaul, Spain and Africa. In 418 Eustochium too died and was succeeded by her niece the younger Paula, and it was she who nursed the aged Jerome in his last illness in the following year.

Note.—In addition to the works referred to, pp. xv-xvi, an interesting account of Jerome's circle in Rome is given in Mrs. Oliphant's "Makers of Modern Rome," Chs. I.-VI., and in Lady Herbert's "Wives and Mothers in the Olden Time" (Bentley, 1885).

APPENDIX II

JEROME AND ORIGENISM

"THE tempest"¹ which disturbed the earlier years of Jerome's monastic life in Bethlehem arose from the revival of Origenism² in the East³ and the attempt to introduce its doctrines in the West; the theological controversy led to personal quarrels with his old friend and fellow-student Rufinus⁴ and with John, Bishop of Jerusalem,⁵ the bitterness of which was reflected in many references to them in his later letters.⁶

Jerome in his earlier years had been an enthusiastic admirer of Origen; he had translated some of

¹ Letter CXXVII. 9; cf. LXXVII. 8.

² The following were the chief points of Origen's teaching which were deemed heretical: the pre-existence of soul; the denial of the resurrection of the body; the limitation of eternal punishment; and the possibility of salvation even for the devil. Cf. Letter LI. Epiphanius to John of Jerusalem, translated by Jerome.

³ Origen's works had always been much admired in his native country, Egypt, and many of the monks there were Origenists.

⁴ Rufinus (of Aquileia) (c. 344-410) was a member of Jerome's first band of ascetics at Aquileia; when this broke up he accompanied Melania to Palestine and founded, with her, monastic establishments on the Mount of Olives, where he carried on literary and educational work. He was still on friendly terms with Jerome in 392.

⁵ Since 385.

⁶ In this volume cf. pp. 431, 461, note 4.

APPENDIX II

Origen's works and brought them to the knowledge of Pope Damasus, writing of them with unqualified approval.¹ It was perhaps the consciousness of this which induced Jerome to defend his own orthodoxy fiercely against a certain Aterbius, who visited Palestine in 395 and charged him, together with Rufinus and Bishop John, of being adherents of Origenism. The vehemence of his defence alienated him from his friend and from his bishop, who declined to answer the charge which, in their opinion, Aterbius had no authority to bring against them. When, therefore, in the following year, the aged bishop of Salamis, Epiphanius, who was the leader of the movement against Origenism, visited Jerusalem and denounced the errors of the heresy in Bishop John's own church, Rufinus sided with John in the ensuing controversy between the bishops, while Jerome and his monks took the side of Epiphanius.²

John appealed to Theophilus, the Patriarch of Alexandria, who at first sided with the Origenists; the monasteries at Bethlehem were practically placed under an interdict, and the bishop even tried to induce Rufinus,³ the powerful minister of Theodosius, to banish Jerome from Palestine. This danger, however, passed away with the assassination of Rufinus at the end of 395, and soon after Theophilus changed his views and made peace with Jerome, whom he reconciled also with John. They worked together

¹ Cf. the preface to his translation of Origen's two homilies on the Song of Songs (383); also Letter XXXIII. written to Paula in 384. As late as 392 he wrote of Origen in terms of the highest admiration (Preface to Micah).

² The particulars of this controversy are given in Jerome's treatise "against John of Jerusalem" and in Letter LI.

³ To be distinguished from Jerome's friend, p. 1, note 4.

APPENDIX II

against the teachings of Origenism¹ and finally secured its condemnation in the East.²

While Jerome's dispute with Bishop John was still at its height, Rufinus (of Aquileia) decided to leave Palestine and return with Melania to Italy; before his departure he was solemnly reconciled to Jerome at Easter 397, perhaps through the intervention of Melania.³

The reconciliation between Jerome and Rufinus was probably sincere, but it did not stand the test of a further controversy on Origenism which arose in Italy. On his arrival there Rufinus was strongly urged to translate the speculative works of Origen into Latin by a certain Macarius of Pinetum, a Roman of good position, perhaps a senator.⁴ The recrudescence of Origenism in the East had aroused interest in his works all over the Christian world, and in spite of Jerome's translations, the Western Church seems to have known little about him.⁵ Rufinus, who always remained his fervent admirer, was glad of the opportunity to make his works known, and translated two books of the De Principiis, Origen's most controversial work, softening down or altering many passages which had been condemned as heretical, on the ground that these were not in the original

¹ Jerome translated the encyclicals of Theophilus into Latin (Letters LXXXV., LXXXVI. and LXXXIX.). Letter CXXVII. alludes to this.

² In A.D. 400 Letters XC., XCI. and XCII.

³ Jerome, Apol. 111. 33. For Melania's part in it cf. Palladius, Hist. Laus., ch. 1.

⁴ Cf. p. 457 and Letter LXXX. (from Rufinus to Macarius).

⁵ Pope Anastasius, when he condemned Origen's works as heretical, stated that he had never read them (Letter to John of Jerusalem).

APPENDIX II

work.¹ He published this work in the spring of 398, and added a preface in which he clearly referred to Jerome, though not by name, speaking of him in terms of the highest praise as a translator and admirer of Origen.² Such a description, though true of Jerome's opinions a few years before, was manifestly misleading in view of his attitude during the recent controversy in Palestine, and was strongly resented by Jerome's friends in Rome, especially Pammachius, Oceanus and Marcella, who sent a copy of Rufinus' work to Bethlehem.³ Jerome replied by making a literal translation of the first two books of the De Principiis and sending it to Pammaehius at Rome with a letter defending his own orthodoxy,⁴ with which he enclosed a personal and not unfriendly letter to Rufinus.⁵ This letter, however, which might have averted an open breach, never reached Rufinus. When it got to Rome, circumstances there had changed; the pope Siricius, never favourably disposed to Jerome and his circle, was dead,⁶ and his successor, Anastasius, was under the influence of Jerome's friends; after considerable controversy, which seems to show that the teachings of Origen had made some headway in the West, Origenism was formally condemned as heretical in 400.⁷ Rufinus had left Rome on the death of Siricius and settled first at Milan and then at Aquileia, where he lived on ¹ Such licence in translators was not uncommon and is defended by Jerome (by whose example Rufinus justifies his own methods) in Letters LVII., LXI. and LXVI.

² Letter LXXX.

³ Letter LXXXIII.

⁴ Letter LXXXIV.

⁵ Letter LXXXI.

⁶ A.D. 398.

⁷ Letter XCV. In Letter CXXVII. 9 and 10, Jerome ascribes this chiefly to Marcella.

APPENDIX II

friendly terms with Jerome's friend, Bishop Chromatius, for about ten years. It was there that he read the attack which Jerome had made on him in the letter sent to Pammachius, who seems to have suppressed the personal letter addressed to Rufinus himself.¹ A bitter controversy ensued in consequence between Jerome and Rufinus.² Their friends tried in vain to reconcile them³; and Jerome's anger against his former friend did not end even with the latter's death.⁴

¹ In Apol. III. 28, Jerome defends this action of Pammachius.

² Jerome, Apology, and Rufinus, Apology.

³ Chromatius of Aquileia; Augustine also deplored the quarrel (CX. 6). Melania was included in Jerome's wrath (Letter CXXXIII. 3).

⁴ A.D. 410. Cf. the preface to the commentary on Ezekiel (written 410-14) and to Jeremiah (written 417-19); also Letter CXXV. (p. 431).

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

A

- AARON, 209, 319, 479
Abel, 151
Abigail, 191
Abisama, 401
Abishag, 191, 195, 199
Abraham, 55, 93, 97, 151, 159, 191, 269, 271, 279, 333, 439
Abundantius, 301
Adam, 269, 347, 471
Aegean sea, 494
Aelius Donatus. Cf. Donatus.
Aemilian family, viii
Aeneas, 338
Africa, 496
Africanus, 486
Ahab, 319
Ahasuerus, 421
Alans, 301
Alaric, 438, 439
Albina (mother of Marcella), 187, 441, 449, 484, 485, 487
Albinus, Pontiff of Jupiter, 338, 339, 487, 496
Alexander, 147
Alexander the Great, 349; gates of (i.e. Caspian Gates), 329
Alexandria, 308, 343, 448, 484, 499
Alps, 5, 301
Altinum, xiv, 188, 282, 283, 295
Amalek, 305
Amandus, 486
Ambrose (bishop of Milan 374-397), 17, 102, 103, 170, 485, 486, 489
Ambrose (a friend of Origen), 171
Ammon (son of Noah), 73, 79
Ammon (an Egyptian monk), 484
Amos, 47, 167
Ananias, 219, 279
Anastasius (Pope 398-402), 459, 500, 501
Anaxagoras, 273
Anna, 27, 157, 259, 263, 443
Antimus, 119
Antioch, vii, viii, xii, 2, 16, 303, 308, 331, 453, 488, 494
Antony, St. (born in Egypt c. 250, after living as a hermit for many years he left his solitude to become the founder of monasticism in N. Egypt), 143, 449, 484
Aquileia, vii, 2, 23, 27, 308, 493, 498-502
Arabia, 303, 400
Arcadians, 303
Arcadius (emperor of the East 395-408), 300
Argus, 245
Arian (heresy), 17, 27, 299, 449, 484
Aristotle, 53, 349
Armenians, 343
Arnobius, 287
Asella, 178, 179, 187, 485, 492
Aser (tribe of), 259, 443
Asia, 405
Assa, 301
Assyria, Assyrians, 105, 167, 305
Assyrian king, 61
Atellan (farces), 190, 191
Aterbius, 499
Athanasius (Patriarch of Alexandria and the principal opponent of Arianism, d. 373), 365, 448, 449, 484
Athens, Athenians, Attic, 173, 303, 307, 405
Atlantic Ocean, 271
Attalus (king of Pergamum), 21
Attila, 439
Anfidii, 275
Augiensis (Turicensis), xv
Augustine (the Great; Bishop of Hippo, d. 432), xii, xiv, 502

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Auxentius (Bishop of Milan), 17
 Aventine, viii, 439, 484
 Azov, sea of, 329

B

Babylon, 23, 63, 67, 186, 187, 247,
 341, 353, 371
 Babylonian, 365
 Bacchus, 247
 Balaam, 327
 Barak, 261
 Barnabas, 461
 Basil, St., 412
 Basle, xv
 Bathsheba, 77, 191
 Beelzebub, 167
 Belial, 125
 Belshazzar, 105
 Benedictine (edition), xv
 Benjamin, 158, 159, 279
 Berolinensis, xv
 Bessians (tribe of), 273
 Bethlehem, ix-xii, 178, 227, 255, 264,
 313, 330, 338, 490, 494, 495, 496, 499, 501 Bezaleel, 291
 Black Sea, 337
 Blesilla (d. of Paula), viii, ix, 83, 158,
 159, 161, 167, 231, 311, 487, 490,
 491, 492
 Blesilla (mother of Paula), 486
 Bonosus, vii, 21, 23
 Brahmans, 257
 Britain, 271, 335
 Bruti, 275
 Burdigala (Bordeaux), 493

C

Caesar, 317. Cf. Nero.
 Camillus (Furius), 229, 233, 337
 Canaan, 135
 Cannae, 19
 Canticles, xi
 Capitol, 341
 Cappadocian, 210
 Caracalla (emperor), 314
 Carmelite, 415
 Carneades, 273
 Carthage, 102
 Caspian, 328
 Cato, Catos, 195, 431
 Caucasus, 303, 329

Cenobites, 137
 Cerealis, 441, 443
 Ceres, 247, 363
 Chalcis (desert of), vii, 18
 Chaldaean, xi, 55, 65, 167, 411
 Charybdis, 39, 401
 Chimaera, 433
 Chremes, 230, 231
 Chromatius (Bishop of Aquileia), 19,
 27, 309, 502
 Chroniele (of Eusebius), xii
 Chronicle (the), 305, 319
 Cicero, Ciceronian, xii, xiii, 125, 127,
 213, 233, 273, 275, 419
 Cleanthes, 195
 Clitomachus, 273
 Coloniensis, xv
 Constantinople, 8, 298, 301, 308
 Constantius (Emperor), 398, 399
 Corinthians, 153, 215, 303, 339
 Cornelia, 233
 Cornelius (Centurion), 47, 281, 401
 Crantor, 273
 Crassi, Crassus, 25, 275
 Croesus, 287, 415, 447
 Cybele, 175, 361
 Cydnus, 303
 Cyprian (Bishop of Carthage, fl. 258), 102, 103, 287, 365
 Cyprus, 453, 488, 494

D

Dacia, 301
 Dalilah, 77
 Dalmatia, vii, 19, 301, 438
 Dalmatian Islands, 283
 Damascus (Pope 366-384), viii, 102, 103, 183, 483, 489, 491, 499
 Danae, 476, 477
 Daniel, xi, 13, 47, 75, 113, 247
 Dardania, 301
 Darius, 287, 329
 David, 47, 51, 77, 191, 203, 217, 233,
 275, 319
 Deborah, 261
 Deiphobus, 168
 Democritus, 195, 273
 Demosthenes, 213
 Desiderius, 483
 Didymus, xii, 170
 Dinah, 109, 353
 Diogenes, 273
 Diomedes, 120, 121

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Dives, 97
 Domitius, 209
 Domnio, 483
 Donatus, Aelius, vii

E

Ecclesiastes, xi
 Egypt, Egyptians, 21, 53, 77, 107, 135,
 169, 187, 273, 283, 303, 322, 327,
 329, 335, 343, 359, 419, 471, 484,
 491, 494, 498
 Eh, 353
 Elijah, 59, 73, 91, 99, 133, 259, 319
 Elis, 290
 Elisha, 59, 73, 99
 Ennius, 297, 449, 450
 Epaphras, 277
 Ephesians, xi
 Epicurus, 213
 Epiphanius (Bishop of Salamis in Cyprus), 453, 487, 488, 491, 494, 498, 499
 Epirus, 301
 Erasmus, xv
 Esau, 279, 423
 Essenes, 141
 Esther (roll of), 365
 Ethiopia, 57, 343
 Ethiopians, 67, 329
 Etna, 243
 Etruscan Sea, 325
 Eugenius, 298, 301
 Euphrates, 23, 167, 303
 Euripides, 213
 Europe, ix
 Eusebius (Bishop of Caesarea), xii
 Eusebius (brother of Chromatius), 19,
 27, 308
 Eusebius (father of Jerome), vii
 Eusebius Hieronymus. Cf. Jerome.
 Eustochium (Eustochia), viii-x, 53,
 57, 111, 178, 187, 227, 231, 232, 338,
 351, 367, 450, 451, 483, 487, 488, 490,
 492, 494-496
 Euxine (Black Sea), 3, 337
 Evagrius, 16, 17, 19
 Eve, 93, 99
 Evilat, 403
 Exuperius (Bishop of Toulouse), 228,
 249, 437
 Ezekiel, x, xi, 77, 167, 239, 502
 Ezra, 187, 365

F

Fabiola, 308-337, 486, 489, 495
 Fabius (Q. Fabius Maximus), 313
 Fabius (Q. Fabius Pictor), 291
 Felicitas, 187, 485
 Felix. Cf. Macarius.
 Felix (Minucius), 287
 Freemantle (Canon), xi, xv
 Fronto, 419
 Furia (d. of Titiana), 228, 229, 232, 486
 Furius. Cf. Camillus.
 Furius (son of Titiana), 487

G

Gabriel, 147, 355
 Gainas, 300
 Galatians, xi
 Galen, 245
 Galli (the), 275
 Gallius, Quintus, 213
 Ganges, 403
 Gaudentius, 481
 Gaul, xi, 299, 371-372, 405, 496
 Gauls (the), 337
 Gaza, 342, 343
 Genesis, 197
 Gennesaret (Lake), 411
 Getae, 343
 Gotha, xv
 Gothic (War), 299
 Goths, vii, 273, 301, 438
 Gracchi, 232, 235, 349
 Gracchorum stirps (of Paula), 486
 Gracchus (Prefect of Rome), 341
 Gratian, 298, 299
 Greek, xi, 143, 165, 195, 273, 303, 349,
 405, 421, 489
 Gregory Nazianzen, viii, 211
 Gregory of Nyssa, viii
 Gymnosophists, 357

H

Habakkuk, 61, 75
 Halys (River), 303
 Haman, 101
 Hannah, 345, 369, 411
 Hannibal, 19
 Hebrew, Hebrews, 273, 419, 489

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

- Hecuba, 297
 Helen, 479
 Heliodorus (Bishop of Altinum), xiv, 29, 188, 189, 199, 265, 311, 331, 488
 Helvidius, xii, 101, 489, 490
 Heptateuch, 365
 Herbert, Lady, 496
 Hercules, 175
 Herodotus, 329
 Hesiod, 195, 297
 Hezekiah, 105, 159, 305
 Hieronymus, Eusebius. Cf. Jerome.
 Hilarion (a hermit), xii, xiii
 Hilary (Bishop of Poitiers, fl. 360), 287, 367
 Hilberg, xiv, xv
 Hippias (of Elis), 290
 Hippocrates, 225, 427
 Hiram, 291
 Holofernes, 101, 261
 Holy Land (the), 331, 495
 Homer, 195
 Horace, 125
 Hortensius, 349
 Hosea, 269, 483
 Huns, 301, 304, 309, 329, 343, 495
 Hylas, 487, 493
 Hymetius, Julius Festus, 351, 487-488
 Hyrcanian, 33
- I
- Iconium, 156
 India, Indians, 271, 273, 343, 403
 Innocentius, 2, 3
 Isaac, 191, 269, 279, 367
 Isaiah, xi, 111, 145, 157, 167, 261, 435
 Ishmael, 279
 Isidore, 135, 484, 494
 Isis, 361
 Isocrates, 195
 Israel, 63, 73, 109, 191, 263, 271, 305, 333, 469
 Italy, 295, 329, 438, 439, 486, 490, 500
- J
- Jacob, 61, 77, 97, 135, 153, 239, 269, 275, 333, 423
 James, St., 101
 Jebus (cf. Jerusalem), 463
 Jehoshaphat, 305
 Jephthah, 279
 Jeremiah, x, xii, 99, 143, 167, 249, 391, 459, 502
- Jericho, 197
 Jerome, vii ff., 2, 16, 18, 19, 24, 54, 74, 77, 88, 178, 188, 192, 196, 214, 228, 264, 308, 309, 338, 352, 396, 430, 436, 438, 456, 460, 483, 484, 486-496, 498-502
 Jerusalem (Jebus), vii, 35, 55, 97, 113, 125, 157, 167, 181, 186, 187, 203, 308, 321, 327, 331, 419, 455, 463, 493, 494, 498-500
 Jesse, 93
 Jews, Jewish, 53, 55, 143, 153, 161, 185, 186, 187, 217, 275, 357, 399, 401, 411, 447, 451
 Jezebel, 73
 Job, xi, 61, 77, 365
 John of Jerusalem, xii, 460, 484, 498-500
 John (the Baptist), 77, 143, 161, 271, 345, 409
 John (the Evangelist), 23, 101, 451
 Jonadab, 410, 411
 Jonah, 267, 321
 Jones, Sir William, 464
 Jordan, 279, 327, 409
 Josedeck, 187
 Joseph, 159
 Josephus, 143
 Joshua, 95, 187, 275
 Jove, 341
 Jovian, 299
 Jovintan, xii, xiii, 265, 490
 Jovinus, 19
 Judaea, vii, 105, 215, 261, 411
 Judah, 131, 271
 Judas, 47, 145, 239, 399
 Judith, xi, 101, 261
 Julia. Cf. Eustochium.
 Julian, 23, 25
 Julian Alps, 301
 Julian (Emperor), 298, 299, 488
 Jupiter, 53
- K
- Kenites, 197
 Keturah, 97
- L
- Labriolle, P. de, xvi
 Lacedaemonians, 303
 Lactantius, 287
 Laeta (dau.-in-law of Paula), 338, 339, 496
 Lake Gennesaret, 411

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Lateranus, 317
 Latins, xiv, 273, 275
 Lazarus, 97, 267, 269, 277, 325
 Lea, 485
 Leo the Great, 439
 Leonides (tutor of Alexander), 349
 Levite, 187, 201
 Liberius (Pope 352-365), 485
 Ligurian, 5
 Livy, xii, 143
 Longinus, 431
 Lot, 57, 71
 Lot's wife, 57
 Lucifer, Luciferian, xii, 61
 Lucilius, 25, 372, 373
 Lucius Paulus, 275
 Luke, St., xi, 211, 259, 347
 Lupicinus, 24, 25
 Lyons, Lugdunensis, xv, 298, 299

M

Macarius (a monk of Nitria, probably the same as one mentioned in a letter to Rufinus dated 374, ep. III), 135
 Macarius (a Roman Christian, disciple of Rufinus), 456, 457, 500
 Maccabees, 27
 Macedonia, 301, 371
 Maecia. Cf. Papiria.
 Magdala (Mary of), 451
 Malchus (hermit), vii, xii, xiii
 Malta, 335
 Manasseh, 319
 Manes, Manichaean, 81, 149
 Marah, 73, 415
 Marcella, viii, x, 117, 158, 159, 166, 167, 171, 177, 187, 263, 343, 438, 439, 441-467, 485-490, 492, 494-496, 501
 Marcella, perhaps sister of the above, 187, 485
 Marcelli (the), 275
 Marcellina (sister of Ambrose), 102, 103, 187, 485
 Marcellus, 19
 Marcomanni, 301, 303
 Maria Maggiore (church of), x
 Marianus Victorius, xv
 Marii (the), 275
 Marnas, 343
 Marseilles, 436
 Martha, 107
 Martianay, xv

Mary (mother of Christ), 91, 99, 101, 147, 155, 199, 329, 345, 355, 357, 367, 451
 Mary of Magdala, 450, 451
 Mary (sister of Martha), 167, 451
 Massagetæ (tribe of), 329
 Matthew, St., xi, 347
 Maximi (the), 275
 Maximus (emperor), 298, 301
 Maximus, Quintus Fabius. Cf. Quintus.
 Medea, 450
 Medes, Media, 299, 329
 Melanium (or Melania), 183, 185, 493, 494, 498-502
 Melania (granddaughter of the above), 494
 Menander, 213
 Menelaus, 479
 Mesopotamia, 167, 283
 Metelli (the), 275
 Methuselah, 207, 295
 Micah, 499
 Migne, xv
 Milan, 17, 170, 485, 489, 501
 Minucius, Felix, 287
 Miriam, 253, 321
 Mithras, 341
 Moab, Moabite, 73, 261, 463
 Moeris, 191
 Monacensis, xv
 Montanus, 321
 Mopsus (Mopsucrene, near Tarsus), 299
 Moses, 73, 95, 107, 191, 269, 275, 283, 305, 321, 327, 411, 425, 479, 481

N

Nabal (the Carmelite), 415
 Naboth, 319
 Naevius, 297
 Naomi, 261
 Nazianzen. Cf. Gregory.
 Neapolitanus, xv
 Nebuchadnezzar, 23, 99, 187, 305, 341
 Nepotian, xiv, 31, 188, 189, 227, 265, 277, 279, 281-289, 291, 305, 309, 311, 413
 Nero, 253, 316, 317, 431
 Nestor, 195
 Nicolas, Nicolaitanes, 47
 Nineveh, 269, 319
 Niobe, 297
 Nitria (Egypt), 135, 484

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Noah, 71, 95
 Nola, 19
 Novatius, 321
 Numantia, 337
 Nyssa. Cf. Gregory.

O

Oceaus (kinsman of Fabiola, correspondent of Jerome), 308, 309, 311, 483, 495, 501
 Oedipus, 195
 Olives, Mt. of, 493, 494, 498
 Olliphant, Mrs., 496
 Olympus, 243
 Onasus (of Segesta), 166-169
 Ophite (heresy), 47
 Origen of Alexandria (185-253), xi, 170, 171, 173, 456, 457, 498-502
 Orontes, 303
 Orpheus, 387
 Ostia, 178, 309, 492, 496

P

Paeatula, 467, 475, 480, 481
 Pachumius, Pachomius (d. c. 349; the founder of Monasticism in Upper Egypt and one of the first to collect solitary ascetics under a rule; his sister founded a convent for women), xiv, 449
 Palestine, ix, x, 303, 309, 372, 486, 495, 498-501
 Pambos (d. 393; a monk of Nitria; he entertained Melania on her visit there and was a prominent supporter of the Nicene doctrine), 135
 Pammachius (son-in-law of Paula and correspondent of Jerome), 264, 309, 311, 333, 483, 490, 496, 501, 502
 Pannonia, 136, 301
 Papinian, 315
 Papiria, Maccia, 486
 Papirius, 337
 Paris, Parisinus, xv
 Paris, 479
 Parthians, 335
 Paul, St., 33, 35, 49, 61, 71, 125, 147, 153, 156, 158, 159, 169, 211, 215, 217, 239, 247, 279, 315, 339, 465, 475
 Paula, viii-x, 178, 181-187, 231, 232, 277, 309, 338, 367, 369, 371, 450, 451, 484, 486-496, 499

Paula (grand-daughter of the above), 338-371, 496
 Paulina (d. of Paula I), 309, 311, 333, 490, 495
 Paulinian, or Paulinus (brother of Jerome), 178, 492
 Paulinus (bishop of Antioch), viii, 453, 488
 Pauli heres (of Paula), 486
 Paulus (Lucius), 275
 Paulus (a hermit), xii, xiii, 142, 143
 Pelion, 450-451
 Pergamum, 21
 Pericles, 273
 Persia, Persian, 273, 298, 343, 421
 Persius, 171
 Peter, St., 35, 47, 133, 159, 209, 217, 317, 401, 451
 Peter (Patriarch of Alexandria), 448, 449
 Phanael, 157, 259, 443
 Pharaoh, 107, 155, 253, 401
 Phares, 197
 Pharisee, 321, 447, 451, 457
 Philemon, xi
 Philip (of Macedon), 349
 Philo, 143
 Phison, 403
 Phoenicia, 303
 Phygellus, 147
 Pinetum, 500
 Pinianus, 494
 Pisos (the), 275
 Pityus, 301
 Plato, 53, 143, 195, 273, 295, 451
 Plautus, 125
 Pliny, xiii, 419
 Pompey, 337
 Posidonius, 273
 Pouget, xv
 Praetextata (wife of Hymetius), 351, 488
 Principia (companion of Marcella), 439, 465, 467, 495
 Procopius, 298, 301
 Proculus (Bishop of Marseilles), 437
 Ptolemy, 21
 Publicola, son of Melania, 494
 Publius, 335
 Pulvillus, 275
 Pythagoras, 195, 273, 354, 355

Q

Quadians, 301

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

Quintilian, 419
 Quintus Fabius, 291
 Quintus Gallius. Cf. Gallius.
 Quintus Maximus. Cf. Fabius.

R

Rachel, 99, 153
 Rahab, 149, 197
 Rebecca, 191, 423
 Rechab, 197
 Red Sea, 155, 401, 445
 Remnouth, 137
 Rogatus (father of Paula), 486
 Rome, Romans, vii, xii, xv, 17, 19, 53,
 67, 83, 119, 125, 133, 152, 169, 175,
 183, 195, 232, 254, 255, 263, 275,
 277, 299, 301-309, 316, 317, 325-
 337, 363, 364, 367, 405, 423, 436-
 441, 449, 453-465, 479, 483-496, 500, 501
 Rufina (d. of Paula), 495
 Rufinus (of Aquileia), xii, 430, 456,
 493, 494, 496, 498-502
 Rufinus, 301, 499
 Rusticus (Bishop of Narbonne), 396, 397, 399

S

Salamis (in Cyprus), 453, 488, 494, 499
 Sallust, 305, 337
 Samaria, Samaritans, 53, 73, 167, 187, 231, 399
 Samnites, 337
 Samson, 77, 345
 Samuel, 27, 345, 367, 411
 Saracens, 19
 Sarah, 157, 191
 Sardanapallus, 253
 Sarmatians, 301
 Satan, 45, 75, 131, 165, 181, 183, 255, 317
 Sauhes, 137
 Scaevolas (the), 275
 Scauri (the), 275
 Scipio, 337; Scipionum suboles (of Paula), 486
 Scylla, 39, 401
 Scythia, 301, 325, 343
 Segesta, 169
 Seneca, xiii
 Sephora, 191
 Serapis (Temple of), 342, 343
 Sharon, 93

Sharpe (Rev. Father), xvi
 Shumanite, 191, 192, 193, 197
 Simonides, 195
 Sion, 23, 65, 97, 187
 Siricius (Pope 384-398), viii, 491, 501
 Socrates, 213, 273
 Sodom, 57
 Solomon, 57, 79, 83, 151, 193, 203,
 225, 365, 399, 419, 433, 477
 Sophocles, 195
 Sophronia, 449, 485
 Sophronius, 119
 Spain, 496
 Spinaliensis, xv
 Stephen, St., 47
 Stesichorus, 195
 Stilicho, 438
 Stridon (Dalmatia), vii, 24
 Susannah, 13, 246
 Syria, Syrians, 19, 131, 342, 453, 484, 493

T

Tanais, 329
 Telamon, 273
 Terence, 230
 Tertullian, 103, 287
 Thamar, 79
 Thebaid (Egypt), 449
 Thecla, 157
 Theodosius (a hermit), vii
 Theodosius I (emperor 379-395), 298,
 300, 438, 486
 Theophilus (Patriarch of Alexandria),
 499, 500
 Theophrastus, 194
 Thessaly, 301
 Thierry, xv, 486
 Thrace, Thracians, 272, 299, 301
 Thucydides, 305
 Tiber, ix
 Timasius, 301
 Timothy, 71, 219, 247, 283, 435
 Tishbite, 319
 Titiana, 229, 487
 Titus, xi, 339, 369
 Tobit, xi
 Torcello, 282
 Toulouse, 228, 436, 437
 Toxotius, Julius (husband of Paula),
 338, 486
 Toxotius (son of the above), 338, 339,
 369, 488, 493, 496
 Tyre, Tyrian, 291, 331

INDEX OF PROPER NAMES

- | | | |
|--|----------|--|
| Uzziah, 105 | U | Vincentius (a priest, friend of Jerome), 178, 492
Virgil, 33, 125
Volscian (Province), 325
Vulcan, 169, 243 |
| | V | |
| Valens, 298, 299
Valentinian, 204, 298, 299
Valerian (Bishop of Aquileia in 370), 25
Vallarsi, Dominic, xv
Vandals, 301
Vashti, 421
Vaticanus, xv
Venetia, 282
Venus, 175, 247
Vercellae, 5
Verona, xv
Vesuvius, 243
Victorinus, 287, 483
Victorius. Cf. Marianus.
Vigilantius, xii | | W Wright, F. A., xvi, 448, 456 |
| | | X |
| | | Xenocrates, 195
Xenophon, 273
Xerxes, 307 |
| | | Z |
| | | Zarephath, 133, 259, 437
Zechariah, 199
Zeno, 195
Zöckler, O., xv |

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY RICHARD CLAY & SONS, LIMITED, BUNGAY, SUFFOLK.

THE LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY

VOLUMES ALREADY PUBLISHED

Latin Authors

- APULEIUS. THE GOLDEN ASS (METAMORPHOSES).
W. Adlington (1566). Revised by S. Gaselee. (4th Imp.)
- AULUS GELLIUS. J. C. Rolfe. 3 Vols.
- AUSONIUS. H. G. Evelyn White. 2 Vols.
- BEDE. J. E. King. 2 Vols.
- BOETHIUS: TRACTS AND DE CONSOLATIONE
PHILOSOPHIAE. Rev. H. F. Stewart and E. K. Rand.
(2nd Imp.)
- CAESAR: CIVIL WARS. A. G. Peskett. (3rd Imp.)
- CAESAR: GALLIC WAR. H. J. Edwards. (6th Imp.)
- CATULLUS. F. W. Cornish; TIBULLUS. J. B. Postgate; AND PERVIGILIUM VENERIS. J. W. Mackail. (9th Imp.)
- CICERO: DE FINIBUS. H. Rackham. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- CICERO: DE NATURA DEORUM AND ACADEMICA.
H. Rackham.
- CICERO: DE OFFICIIS. Walter Miller. (3rd Imp.)
- CICERO: DE SENECTUTE, DE AMICITIA, DE
DIVINATIONE. W. A. Falconer. (3rd Imp.)
- CICERO: DE REPUBLICA AND DE LEGIBUS. Clinton
W. Keyes.
- CICERO: LETTERS TO ATTICUS. E. O. Winstedt.
3 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp. and III. 2nd Imp.)
- CICERO: LETTERS TO HIS FRIENDS. W. Glynn
Williams. 3 Vols.

- CICERO: PHILIPPICS. W. C. A. Ker.
- CICERO: PRO ARCHIA, POST REDITUM, DE DOMO, DE HARUSPICUM RESPONSIS, PRO PLANCIO.
N. H. Watts.
- CICERO: PRO QUINCTIO, PRO ROSCIO AMERINO, PRO ROSCIO COMOEDO, CONTRA RULLUM. J. H.
Freese.
- CICERO: TUSCULAN DISPUTATIONS. J. E. King.
- CICERO: PRO CAECINA, PRO LEGE MANILIA, PRO
CLUENTIO, PRO RABIRIO. H. Grose Hodge.
- CICERO: PRO MILONE, IN PISONEM, PRO SCAURO, PRO FONTEIO, PRO RABIRIO POSTUMO, PRO
MARCELLO, PRO LIGARIO, PRO REGE DEIOTARO.
N. H. Watts.
- CICERO: VERRINE ORATIONS. L. H. G. Greenwood.
2 Vols. Vol. I.
- CLAUDIAN. M. Platnauer. 2 Vols.
- FLORUS: E. S. Forster, and CORNELIUS NEPOS:
J. C. Rolfe.
- FRONTINUS: STRATAGEMS AND AQUEDUCTS. C. E.
Bennett.
- FRONTO: CORRESPONDENCE. C. R. Haines. 2 Vols.
- HORACE: ODES AND EPODES. C. E. Bennett. 9th
Imp. revised.)
- HORACE: SATIRES, EPISTLES, ARS POETICA.
H. R. Fairclough. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- JEROME: SELECTED LETTERS. F. A. Wright.
- JUVENAL AND PERSIUS. G. G. Ramsay. (5th Imp.)
- LIVY. B. O. Foster. 13 Vols. Vols. I.-V. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- LUCAN. J. D. Duff.
- LUCRETIUS. W. H. D. Rouse. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- MARTIAL. W. C. A. Ker. 2 Vols. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- OVID: THE ART OF LOVE AND OTHER POEMS.
J. H. Mozley.
- OVID: FASTI. Sir James G. Frazer.
- OVID: HEROIDES AND AMORES. Grant Showerman.
(3rd Imp.)
- OVID: METAMORPHOSES. F. J. Miller. 2 Vols. 5th Imp.
- OVID: TRISTIA AND EX PONTO. A. L. Wheeler.
- PETRONIUS. M. Heseltine; SENECA: APOCOLO-CYNTOSIS. W. H. D. Rouse. (5th Imp.)

- PLAUTUS. Paul Nixon. 5 Vols. Vol. I.-IV. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp. Vol. II. 2nd Imp. Vol. III. 4th Imp.)
- PLINY: LETTERS. Melmoth's Translation revised by W. M. L. Hutchinson. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- PROPERTIUS. H. E. Butler. (4th Imp.)
- QUINTILIAN. H. E. Butler. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- ST. AUGUSTINE, CONFESSIONS OF. W. Watts (1631). 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- ST. AUGUSTINE, SELECT LETTERS. J. H. Baxter.
- SALLUST. J. Rolfe. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- SCRIPTORES HISTORIAE AUGUSTAE. D. Magie. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SENECA: APOCOLOCYNTOSIS. Cf. PETRONIUS.
- SENECA: EPISTULAE MORALES. R. M. Gummere. 3 Vols. Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SENECA: MORAL ESSAYS. J. W. Basore. 3 Vols. Vols. I. and II.
- SENECA: TRAGEDIES. F. J. Miller. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- SILIUS ITALICUS. J. D. Duff. 2 Vols. Vol. I.
- STATIUS. J. H. Mozley. 2 Vols.
- SUETONIUS. J. C. Rolfe. 2 Vols. (4th Imp. revised.)
- TACITUS: DIALOGUS. Sir Wm. Peterson and AGRICOLA AND GERMANIA. Maurice Hutton. (4th Imp.)
- TACITUS: HISTORIES AND ANNALS. C. H. Moore and J. Jackson. 3 Vols. Vols. I. and II. (Histories and Annals I-III.)
- TERENCE. John Sargeaunt. 2 Vols. (5th Imp.)
- TERTULLIAN: APOLOGIA AND DE SPECTACULIS. T. R. Glover. MINUCIUS FELIX. G. H. Rendall.
- VELLEIUS PATERCULUS AND RES GESTAE. F. W. Shipley.
- VIRGIL. H. R. Fairclough. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 11th Imp. Vol. II. 8th Imp.)
- VITRUVIUS: DE ARCHITECTURA. F. Granger. 2 Vols. Vol. I.

Greek Authors

- ACHILLES TATIUS. S. Gaselee.
AENEAS TACTICUS: ASCLEPIODOTUS AND ONASANDER. The Illinois Greek Club.
AESCHINES. C. D. Adams.
AESCHYLUS. H. Weir Smyth. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
APOLLODORUS. Sir James G. Frazer. 2 Vols.
APOLLONIUS RHODIUS. R. C. Seaton. (4th Imp.)
THE APOSTOLIC FATHERS. Kirsopp Lake. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 5th Imp., Vol. II. 4th Imp.)
APPIAN'S ROMAN HISTORY. Horace White. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II., III. and IV. 2nd Imp.)
ARATUS. Cf. CALLIMACHUS.
ARISTOPHANES. Benjamin Bickley Rogers. 3 Vols. (3rd Imp.) Verse trans.
ARISTOTLE: "ART" OF RHETORIC. J. H. Freese.
ARISTOTLE: METAPHYSICS. II. Tredennick. 2 Vols. Vol. I.
ARISTOTLE: NICOMACHEAN ETHICS. H. Rackham.
ARISTOTLE: PHYSICS. Rev. P. Wicksteed and F. M. Cornford. 2 Vols. Vol. I.
ARISTOTLE: POETICS AND LONGINUS. W. Hamilton Fyfe; DEMETRIUS ON STYLE. W. Rhys Roberts. (2nd Imp. revised.)
ARISTOTLE: POLITICS. H. Rackham.
ARRIAN, HISTORY OF ALEXANDER AND INDICA. Rev. E. Iliffe Robson. 2 Vols.
ATHENAEUS: DEIPNOSOPHISTAE. C. B. Gulick. 7 Vols. Vols. I-V.
CALLIMACHUS AND LYCOPHRON. A. W. Mair; ARATUS. G. R. Mair.
CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA. Rev. G. W. Butterworth.
COLLUTHIUS. Cf. OPIAN.
DAPHNIS AND CHLOE. Thornley's Translation revised by J. M. Edmonds; AND PARTHENIUS. S. Gaselee. (2nd Imp.)
DEMOSTHENES: DE CORONA AND DE FALSA LEGATIONE. C. A. Vince and J. H. Vince.
DEMOSTHENES: OLYNTHIACS, PHILIPPICS AND MINOR ORATIONS: I-XVII AND XX. J. H. Vince.
DIO CASSIUS: ROMAN HISTORY. E. Cary. 9 Vols. (Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
DIO CHRYSOSTOM. J. W. Cohoon. 4 Vols. Vol. I.
DIODORUS SICULUS. C. H. Oldfather. In 9 Volumes. Vol. I.

- DIOGENES LAERTIUS. R. D. Hicks. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
 EPICTETUS. W. A. Oldfather. 2 Vols.
 EURIPIDES. A. S. Way. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 5th Imp., Vol. II. 5th Imp., Vol. IV. 4th Imp., Vol. III. 3rd Imp.)
 Verse trans.
 EUSEBIUS: ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY. Kirsopp
 Lake and J. E. L. Oulton. 2 Vols.
 GALEN: ON THE NATURAL FACULTIES. A. J.
 Brock. (2nd Imp.)
 THE GREEK ANTHOLOGY. W. R. Paton. 5 Vols.
 (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
 GREEK ELEGY AND IAMBUS WITH THE ANACRE-
 ONTEA. J. M. Edmonds. 2 Vols.
 THE GREEK BUCOLIC POETS (THEOCRITUS, BION, MOSCHUS). J. M. Edmonds. (5th Imp. revised.)
 HERODES. Cf. THEOPHRASTUS: CHARACTERS.
 HERODOTUS. A. D. Godley. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II.-IV. 2nd Imp.)
 HESIOD AND THE HOMERIC HYMNS. H. G. Evelyn
 White. (4th Imp.)
 HIPPOCRATES AND THE FRAGMENTS OF HIERA-
 CLEITUS. W. H. S. Jones and E. T. Withington. 4 Vols.
 HOMER: ILIAD. A. T. Murray. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
 HOMER: ODYSSEY. A. T. Murray. 2 Vols. (4th Imp.)
 ISAEUS. E. W. Forster.
 ISOCRATES. George Norlin. 3 Vols. Vols. I. and II.
 JOSEPHUS: H. St. J. Thackeray. 8 Vols. Vols. I.-IV.
 JULIAN. Wilmer Cave Wright. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.) LUCIAN. A. M. Harmon. 8 Vols. Vols. I.-IV. (Vols. I. and II. 3rd Imp.)
 LYCOPHRON. Cf. CALLIMACHUS.
 LYRA GRAECA. J. M. Edmonds. 3 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Ed. revised and enlarged.)
 LYSIAS. W. R. M. Lamb.
 MARCUS AURELIUS. C. R. Haines. (3rd Imp. revised.)
 MENANDER. F. G. Allinson. (2nd Imp. revised.)
 OPPIAN, COLLUTHIUS, TRYPHIODORUS. A. W. Mair.
 PAPYRI (SELECTIONS). A. S. Hunt and C. C. Edgar.
 2 Vols. Vol. I.
 PARTHENIUS. Cf. DAPHNIS AND CHLOE.
 PAUSANIAS: DESCRIPTION OF GREECE. W. H. S.
 Jones. 5 Vols. and Companion Vol. Vols. I., II. and III.
 (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)

- PHILO. F. H. Colson and Rev. G. H. Whitaker. 10 Vols.
Vols. I.-IV.
- PHILOSTRATUS: THE LIFE OF APOLLONIUS OF TYANA. F. C. Conybeare. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
- PHILOSTRATUS. IMAGINES; CALLISTRATUS.
DESCRIPTIONS. A. Fairbanks.
- PHILOSTRATUS AND EUNAPIUS: LIVES OF THE SOPHISTS. Wilmer Cave Wright.
- PINDAR. Sir J. E. Sandys. (5th Imp. revised.)
- PLATO: CHARMIDES, ALCIBIADES, HIPPARCHUS,
THE LOVERS, THEAGES, MINOS AND EPINOMIS.
W. R. M. Lamb.
- PLATO: CRATYLUS, PARMENIDES, GREATER HIP-PIAS, LESSER HIPPIAS. H. N. Fowler.
- PLATO: EUTHYPHIRO, APOLOGY, CRITO, PHAEDO,
PHAEDRUS. H. N. Fowler. (7th Imp.)
- PLATO: LACHES, PROTAGORAS, MENO, EUTHY-DEMUS. W. R. M. Lamb.
- PLATO: LAWS. Rev. R. G. Bury. 2 Vols.
- PLATO: LYSIS, SYMPOSIUM, GORGIAS. W. R. M.
Lamb. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- PLATO: REPUBLIC. Paul Shorey. 2 Vols.
- PLATO: STATESMAN, PHILEBUS. H. N. Fowler;
ION. W. R. M. Lamb.
- PLATO: THEAETETUS AND SOPHIST. H. N. Fowler.
(2nd Imp.)
- PLATO: TIMAEUS, CRITIAS, CLITOPHO, MENEXE-NUS, EPISTULAE. Rev. R. G. Bury.
- PLUTARCH: MORALIA. F. C. Babbitt. 14 Vols. Vols.
I.-III.
- PLUTARCH: THE PARALLEL LIVES. B. Perrin. 11
Vols. (Vols. I., II., III. and VII. 2nd Imp.)
- POLYBIUS. W. R. Paton. 6 Vols.
- PROCOPIUS: HISTORY OF THE WARS. H. B.
Dewing. 7 Vols. Vols. I.-V. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- QUINTUS SMYRNAEUS. A. S. Way. Verse trans.
- ST. BASIL: LETTERS. R. J. Deferrari. 4 Vols.
- ST. JOHN DAMASCENE: BARLAAM AND IOASAPH.
Rev. G. R. Woodward and Harold Mattingly.
- SEXTUS EMPIRICUS. Rev. R. G. Bury. In 3 Vols.
Vol. I.

- SOPHOCLES. F. Storr. 2 Vols. (Vol. I, 6th Imp., Vol. II, 4th Imp.) Verse trans.
- STRABO: GEOGRAPHY. Horace L. Jones. 8 Vols. (Vol. I, 2nd Imp.)
- THEOPHRASTUS: CHARACTERS. J. M. Edmonds; HERODES, etc. A. D. Knox.
- THEOPHRASTUS: ENQUIRY INTO PLANTS. Sir Arthur Hort, Bart. 2 Vols.
- THUCYDIDES. C. F. Smith. 4 Vols. (Vols. I., II. and III. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- TRYPHIODORUS. Cf. OPPIAN.
- XENOPHON: CYROPAEDIA. Walter Miller. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- XENOPHON: HELLENICA, ANABASIS, APOLOGY AND SYMPOSIUM. C. L. Brownson and O. J. Todd. 3 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- XENOPHON: MEMORABILIA AND OECONOMICUS. E. C. Marchant.
- XENOPHON: SCRIPTA MINORA. E. C. Marchant.

IN PREPARATION

Greek Authors

- ARISTOTLE, ATHENIAN CONSTITUTION. H. Rackham.
- ARISTOTLE, DE ANIMA, etc. W. S. Hett.
- ARISTOTLE, ECONOMICS. W. G. Armstrong.
- ARISTOTLE, ON HISTORY, MOTION AND PROGRESSION OF ANIMALS. E. S. Forster and A. Peck.
- ARISTOTLE, ORGANON. H. P. Cooke.
- DEMOSTHENES, MEIDIAS, ANDROTION, ARISTOCRATES, TIMOCRATES. J. H. Vince.
- DEMOSTHENES, PRIVATE ORATIONS. G. M. Calhoun.
- GREEK MATHEMATICAL WORKS. J. Thomas.
- MINOR ATTIC ORATORS (ANTIPHON, ANDOCIDES, DEMADES, DINARCHUS, HYPEREIDES). K. Maidment.
- MYTHOGRAPHI GRAECI. D. H. Knappe.

Latin Authors

- AMMIANUS MARCELINUS. J. C. Rolfe.
CELSUS. W. G. Spencer.
CICERO, IN CATILINAM, PRO FLACCO, PRO MURENA, PRO SULLA. B. L. Ullman.
CICERO, DE ORATORE. Charles Stuttaford and W. E. Sutton.
CICERO, ORATOR, BRUTUS. H. Caplan.
CICERO, PRO SESTIO, IN VATINIUM, PRO CAELIO, PRO PROVINCIIIS CONSULARIBUS, PRO BALBO. J. H. Freese.
ENNIUS, LUCILIUS and other specimens of Old Latin. E. H. Warmington.
MINOR LATIN POETS. J. Wight Duff.
PLINY, NATURAL HISTORY. W. H. S. Jones.
PRUDENTIUS. J. H. Baxter and C. J. Fordyce.
SIDONIUS, LETTERS & POEMS. E. V. Arnold and W. B. Anderson.
VALERIUS FLACCUS. J. H. Mozley.

DESCRIPTIVE PROSPECTUS ON APPLICATION

London - - WILLIAM HEINEMANN
New York - - - G. PUTNAM'S SONS

BR
1720
J5A4
1933

Hieronymus, Saint
Select letters of St.
Jerome

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY

